CHAPTER VIII.

ONE morning, a few days later, Bascom Truitt came down the main street of Darley wearing a long, dingy overcoat and blowing a roll call on an old army bugle. Under bis arm was a tattered Confederate flag.

"What's up today?" Kenner asked him as he came into the office and stood towering over the stove.

"Nothin' but a meetin' o' the veterans of our camp—the Joseph E. Johnston, sir. I'm goin' up now to stick the flag on the gate at the courthouse. We intend to see about who's goin' to the reunion in Atlanta next spring; thar's a sight o' the boys that want to go, but cayn't raise the scads. We'll chip in an' send the most deservin', ef our women folks go hungry this winter. Thar was a lie afloat in the newspapers awhile back that some nigger went off after the war an' got rich an' come back home jest in time to buy his old master a suit o' clothes an' pay his way to a reunion. Ef thar was a man in our camp that ud go that a-way, we'd send 'im in tar an' feathers, an' on a rail at that."

"Oh, come off, Bas," Kenner laughed, as he looked around at George and Hillyer at their desks. "That's a old Yankee army overcoat you got on right now. You've had it dyed with logwood, but I'd know it by that long cape."

"Yes, that's what it is," admitted Truitt sheepishly. "The Yankee that owned it died at my house while I was off in the war. It was the only thing he left that was any account, an' my women folks had fed an' pampered 'im up with all they could rake an' scrape in the neighborhood, goin' without the'rselves beca'se he was so bad off. After he died they put this coat away in camphor to keep the moths out of it. The blame gar neast eat up a quarter's wuth a year fer ten year, an' ever' winter I had a row with my women folks beca'se I wouldn't wear it. Finally, I agreed ef they ud dye it so none o' my crowd ud fergit the war was over an' shoot me, I'd put it on. My women folks tuck me up, but they wouldn't make a fortune runnin' a dye house. This dratted thing has sp'iled twenty Sunday shirts fer me. T'other day, when I went in the meetin' house out of a shower o' rain, I left a streak o' black ink from the door to the amen corner."

"Whar did you git that bugle?" Kenner questioned. "I know you never blowed it in the army."

"No; Tred Langston had it when he was bugler in our company, an' he give it to me to use in our veteran camp; he said his boys hadn't a sign o' respect fer what it had been through, an' used it to call the dogs to go possum huntin'. He said his gals tied a gray ribbon about it an' hung it up on the wall, but the boys wouldn't let it stay thar. They treated his canteen jest as bad. They toted it about with moonshine whisky in it till it sprung a leak, an' then they hung it up on a tree an' shot more holes in it. I reckon I am a sight, totin' a reb' flag an' bugle with a Yankee overcoat on, but they tell me the war's over."

"I reckon you went through the thick of it," said the cotton buyer tentatively.

"I got as much fight as I cared fer at Baker's creek," answered the veteran. "Our boys was about starved to death on short rations, an' we had jest got hold of a lot o' fresh beef when we got the call to arms. Our colonel told us we'd better take some of the beef with us, an' me 'n' another feller was a-fillin' our knapsacks when the feller all at once said to me, 'Look y' here, Bas, the odds is agin us, an' I hain't a-goin' to let no bluecoat ketch me with a passle o' raw beef in my knapsack,' an' he th'owed the meat down. I followed suit. Jest then, in all the hurlyburly o' gittin' ready, a man rid in with a big basket o' pies to sell us. We wanted the pies an' he wanted money; we didn't have no money, an' offered to swap beef fer the pies; he refused to trade. Then we put 'im on his away backed hoss an' loaded 'im back and front with bloody beef an' tol' 'im ef he didn't make tracks we'd shoot at the beef. But we didn't have time to eat the pies even, fer the thing had begun. Folks has often axed me what a battle was like. I couldn't tell you. It jest made a sound—ooo—ooo—ooo—like a harrycane rippin' gullies in the earth an' sweepin' away trees, rocks, hills, an' everything in its track, an' on she come! I hain't here to lie—I was scared clean down into my socks. When they hove into sight round the hill in the sun, I couldn't see nothin' but a solid bank o' silver. By gum, it looked like thar was enough bayonet p'ints displayed thar to stab all the flies in the universe. I seed our general about that time; he was a-settin' on his hoss a chawin' tobacco an' spittin' over its head; he was as cool as a cucumber; looked like he was jest tryin' to study what would be the right thing to do. He was a daisy; part Injun, an' not afeard o' God Almighty. Seein' him that a-way made me sorter ashamed, an' I plunged in. At fust it come awkward, but in a minute it wasn't any more'n shootin' at rabbits.

"We plugged away an' laughed an' made jokes an' had a good all round time as long as it lasted, an' then we got rattled an' begun to retreat. I was shot through the left-arm an' side, an' fell in a ditch. A Yankee run up with a p'inted bayonet an' yelled, 'Cuss you, come out o' thar or I'll shoot you!' Some o' our boys said I ort to 'a' cussed 'im back, but I didn't. It jest seemed part o' the game to me, an' he was winnin'. 'You come down after me,' said I, 'ef you want me.' An' a couple of 'em did, an' drug me up the bank. They had ketched a few more of our boys on the wing, an' they driv' us up in a circle an' put some foreign guards around us. Every one of us was cut ur bad balls som'ers in us, but we sassed them guards about the'r brogue, an' one thing an' other, till they was mad enough to kill us. They give us good treatment—I'll say that much fer 'em—an' I liked the'r grub. They had all sorts o' good stuff in cans. They patched us up in the hospital an' finally exchanged us."

"Oh, say," protested Kenner, "that ain't all, is it?"

"It's all I've got to say today. I've got to blow a few blasts at the post-office an' stick up the flag." He stepped to Buckley's desk and leaned on it. "I wish, George, that you was out our way to make Jeff behave hisself."

"Drinking again?" George asked, with a smile.

"Yes, an' that ain't all; he's got every moonshiner over thar down on 'im. He informed on some of 'em while he was out o' his head an' now thar's no tellin' whar it will end. Somebody shot at 'im while he was in the field t'other day—some skunk in the woods, afraid to show hisself."

"That's pretty bad," said George sympathetically. "Jeff ought to be more cautious."

As Truitt was leaving, Mrs. Hillyer waddled in, her gray shawl wrapped tightly round her body.

"Come fer money to run the house on," she said, with a laugh, to her husband. "No, thank you, I won't set down," she added to Kenner, who was offering her his chair. "The truth is, I'm goin' to steer clear o' this house. Mrs. Dugan says all the reports in the town git started among you uns. Ef she knew I came here she'd lay it on me. I thought fer a while, after they lifted her quarantine, that she was goin' to do different, but she's wuss 'an ever. I sawed 'er off short yesterday, though." Mrs. Hillyer laughed heartily. "You know, Mr. Kenner, she's got one tale that she tells over an' over constantly. One of the longest winded yarns you ever heard, about how she fust got acquainted with a woman she met by accident. She forgets she's told it twenty times, an' jest takes 'er chair an' begins to unwind. So far nobody hain't been bold enough to say they'd heard it before, but when I seed her a-comin' through the gate yesterday I told Hortense ef she dared to spring that old gag on me ag'in I'd stop 'er ef it cost me my life. I thought Hortense ud die laughin', fer Mrs. Dugan had no sooner 'n set down than she begun to tell about how she fust met the woman. Well, I'd made my bet, an' I wasn't goin' to be beat. 'Hold on,' said I; 'right here I want to tell you some'n, Mrs. Dugan—some'n powerful quar about me. I believe, on my soul, I've got second sight.' 'Second sight,' says she, in her mean way, 'why, I didn't think you was quite old enough to have yore second sight.' 'I don't mean that sort o' second sight,' says I; 'but I've noticed sometimes when a body would begin a tale I could see clean to the end of it long before the end was reached. Now,' says I, 'see ef I ain't right; the next time you met that woman was at the county fair, whar she tuck fust prize on her patch quilt,' an' with that I finished out her yarn, as pat as ef it was one o' my own brag tales. Lord, wasn't she hot! She got as red as a ripe tomato. 'I wasn't goin' to tell that,' says she; 'I remember tellin' you that. I was goin' to git round to some'n else; but, since you are so almighty smart, I reckon I'll go on about my business,' an' with that she flirted out o' the house, an' kicked the dog as she went by it on the porch. When a woman's mad enough to kick a dog her dander's flyin' in 'er eyes." Mrs. Hillyer laughed as she thrust her red hand from beneath her shawl and took the money the merchant was giving her. "Don't git married, Mr. Kenner," she said. "A woman will either keep yore nose to the grindstone with 'er mouth shet, or talk you to death—or both."

Kenner smilingly walked with her to the outer door. "I was jest a-wonder'n', Mrs. Hillyer, what you think about George's case with that highfalutin Virginia girl. I'm interested in that boy, an' it looks like a pity to me to have 'im lookin' in that direction—I mean jest that particular direction."

"I know what you mean, Mr. Kenner"—the woman shuddered in the keen, cool breeze—"but do you reckon it's any more'n friendship on his side?"

"That's what I'm botherin' about," answered the cotton buyer. "I don't let on to George, of course, but I've been watchin' him powerful close. He wants everybody to think him an' her jest passin' friends; but, law me, sometimes when he thinks nobody hain't a-lookin' he gits off his guard. One day, while he was at work on his books, she happened to ride past on that frisky mare o' hers. The animal got scared at the puffin' o' the compress over thar an' begun to cut up. The saddle girth broke, an' she fell in a ditch. She wasn't hurt one speck, an' seven or eight o' my men at the compress ran out an' helped 'er up, but George must 'a' thought she was, fer he turned as white as a sheet an' trembled all over as he made a break fer the spot, an' when he seed no harm had come to her his face actually puffed up, an' he couldn't speak. An' she was watchin' 'im too. She was perfectly cool an' lookin' at him jest like she was enjoyin' his excitement. She axed 'im one or two questions, an' it looked to me like she was jest doin' it beca'se he wasn't in the condition to reply."

Mrs. Hillyer laughed. "You ort to 'a' been a woman, Mr. Kenner. I didn't know any man alive could notice like that. But do you reckon the pore young man ever hopes to—you know what I mean?"

"That's the pretty part of it," said Kenner, with no little feeling. "It looks to me like he hain't never dreamt of marryin', like he was jest satisfied to let things go on as they are. If I'm any judge, that is the most dangerous sort o' love, ef a body kin call it that."

"I'll say this fer 'er," said Mrs. Hillyer seriously. "I don't think she is a woman that ud handle a man's affections lightly jest fer the fun o' the thing. An' sometimes I think she is doin' jest like you say George is—jest a-lettin' the thing pull 'er along, knowin', as she does, that he hain't the man 'er folks ud accept. So you think George really is interested in 'er?"

"That hain't the word fer it," said Kenner. "As fer her bein' above 'im in station, what does that matter to him? I've never seed his equal fer pride an' self respect. I believe ef a really refined young man is put in low surroundin's he'll make a finer creature sometimes than ef he was put among the best. No, George cayn't hide his feelin's. I think maybe he had some hope before his father's disgrace, but he hain't now. Thar was a tobacco drummer from Virginia in the office t'other day, an' he got to runnin' on, like them sort o' men will; to me an' Hanks. George was writtin' letters at the desk. The drummer begun tellin' us about bein' astonished to see folks like the Cranstons in this out of the way place. He said Miss Lydia was the belle o' Richmond society an' had big public men runnin' after 'er. He said our governor—you know Governor Telfare is a widower about my age—well, he met 'er at some military encampment down south an' is dead bent on marryin' her. I wanted to stop the feller, fer I knowed George was listenin', but I couldn't take the liberty. I seed George had quit writin' an' was lookin' out o' the window with his jaw set, like he was sufferin'.

"Then the drummer begun to tell about how she had squelched a feller up in Richmond. He was a rich Yankee that was bein' entertained up thar, an' met her at some big dinner. It seems she set right acrost the table from him, an' some'n' he said agin the southern soldiers made 'er fire up. You know two of her uncles was killed at Gettysburg. Well, instead o' apologizing like he ort, he seemed to think it was mighty funny, an' he spent the rest o' the dinner hittin' at the dead Confederate soldiers—jest think o' that, the dead ones!—said they had no right to have flowers strewed on the'r graves an' the like. The drummer said she tuck it like a born lady, as mild as she could, out o' politeness, an' beca'se she saw that the lady that give the party was worried by his conduct, but she give the feller a cold stare after dinner, an' ordered her carriage to take 'er home. The whole thing, it seems, along with her good looks an' high position, literally turned the Yankee's head. He made a dozen attempts after that to meet 'er, but she refused to have anything to do with 'im. He found out whar she attended church, an' went thar one Sunday, an' after meetin' was over he waited at the foot o' the steps outside. Seems like he counted on his smile doin' the work, fer when she appeared at the top o' the steps he jest tuck off his hat an' made a low bow, an' stood grinnin', to show how sorry he was. The drummer said she happened to have some pennies in her hand, an' that she jest dropped 'em in the feller's hat as ef he was a beggar, an', without lookin' at 'im, passed on down the steps. They say it got out, an' so much fun was made of it that the feller left Richmond. She's jest like a queen, anyway, Mrs. Hillyer, but I'll tell you I believe she likes George Buckley—I believe she likes an' respects 'im. An' sometimes when I see her an' him together I jest feel like the two of 'em is doin' right to feel that a-way, even of it never comes to anything. It's the prettiest sight on earth—that sort o' thing is, Mrs. Hillyer. An' sometimes it seems to me that it's jest beca'se they are helt apart that they are drawed so close together. She's at the top, Mrs. Hillyer, an' his daddy has put up a wall betwixt the two, but they are a-lookin' over it into each other's eyes an' a-wonderin'—jest a-wonderin'."

THE REAL QUESTION.

The real question of disease is "Can I be cured?" If you or anyone dear to you is losing strength, flesh, energy and vitality, if you are wise you will not spend time trying to figure out just what name to call the disease by.

It is almost impossible to draw the line where debility and weakness merge into consumption. Your trouble may not be consumption to-day, but you don't know what it may become to-morrow. Hundreds of people have been restored to robust health by Dr. Pierce's marvelous "Golden Medical Discovery" after reputable physicians had pronounced them consumptive beyond hope.

Were they in consumption? Nobody can ever know.

The important point is that they were hopelessly ill but this matchless "Discovery" restored and saved them.

"I was not able to do hardly any work at all," says Mrs. Jennie Dingman, of Vanburen, Kalamazoo Co., Mich., in a most interesting letter to Dr. Pierce. "I had pain in my left side and back, and had headache all the time. I tried your medicine and it helped me. Long using I had a bad cough; I got so bad I had to be in bed all the time.

"My husband thought I had consumption. He wanted me to get a doctor, but I told him if it was consumption they could not help me. We thought we would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and before I had taken one bottle the cough was stopped, and I have had no more of it returning. Your medicine is the best I have taken."

Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce. He will send you good, fatherly, professional advice, in a plain sealed envelope, absolutely free. His nearly 40 years experience as chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y., has made him an expert in chronic diseases.

Constipation causes and aggravates many serious diseases. It is permanently cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

BLOOD POISON.

On account of its terrible effects, blood disease is called the king of all diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted; so while it may not be a crime to have the disease, it is a crime to permit it to remain in the system. It may manifest itself in the form of Scrofula, Eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, itchiness of the skin, eruptions or blotches, ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, falling out of hair, disordered stomach, and a general depression of the system. If you have any of these symptoms don't neglect yourself. You have no time to lose. Beware of "old form" treatment—beware of mineral poisons—beware of Quacks and Fakirs. OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure this disease, never to return. Bank Bonds will protect you. Our treatment is not injurious in any way, but reaches the very root of the disease and eliminates all poison from the system. The symptoms of disease gradually disappear. The blood becomes pure and enriched, the whole system is cleansed and purified, and the patient feels prepared anew for the duties and the pleasures of life. EXAMINER CHALLENGES REVIEW HOCKEYISTS.

The "Press Team" to be Picked from Players in This Game.

The Lindsay press team has signified its willingness to play a press team from Peterborough, and it is desirable that a series of games be arranged within the next few weeks, if possible. The Review this year has several new players available for the game, and there are also some changes on the Examiner septette from that of last year. In view of this fact, and also that it is desirable that the Press Team be picked from the fastest players on both these teams, it will be necessary for the Review and the Examiner to meet on the ice so that those desirous of catching a place on the Press Team, can show their true worth, and demonstrate to the public as to whether or not they should figure on such a team as the Peterborough Press Team is destined to be;

And accordingly, hereby, with all solemnity, the EXAMINER CHALLENGES THE REVIEW to a game of Hockey, to be played on the Brock street rink, at the earliest date that ice can be secured. R.S. VP., P.D.Q.

HOCKEY.

The champion Marlboros defeated the Waverleys by 14—4 in a city championship game in Toronto on Saturday night. The Globe says:—"Armstrong, Phillip's successor, made his first appearance, and although not as clean nor as fast a player as the Rat Portage man, he made a fine impression. He is a grand stick handler and a good shot. Armstrong showed a disposition to 'hog' the puck but otherwise no fault could be found with his work."

• • •

Three Guild teams, St. John's, All Saints and Charlotte street, practised at the All Saints rink last night where the ice was in fine shape. Each of the teams had about a dozen men on skates and the rehearsals were lively. The new rink promises to be a great success this winter.

• • •

Queen's University team, which is one of the strongest that the College has had for years, will play here one week from to-morrow night. The team is making a tour during the holiday season.

• • •

The seniors had a rattling good work out last evening.

• • •

Armstrong and Mercer both made good with the Marlboros on Saturday night and with a little more practice will be heard of prominently.

• • •

The Toronto Telegram, writing on the Marlboro-Waverly game in Toronto on Saturday night, says: "The Marlboros produced Mercer in goal but he did not show anything like Geroux's form, nor indeed did he give evidence of anything more than ordinary ability. Armstrong, another Peterborough man, made a much better showing, and through a bit awkward-looking on his feet, because of his height, still he is a nice stick-handler and has speed. He seems rather averse to mixing it up, and has not yet learned that there are three others on the line with him. He is a good man, but far from a Phillips. Redpath is well enough known, and the others are of last year's line.

• • •

The locals go to Smith's Falls for an exhibition game on January 2nd. The boys should be in good shape when the O.H.A. season opens.

• • •

Picton will be very strong in the Trent Valley League this year, and will bear a lot of watching. "Doc" Gilbert, last year's captain of the Varsity seven team, and for four years one of the fastest forwards in Toronto, will figure as rover, while Harrison who played with Picton several years ago, when the team of that place, captured the Quinte League championship, is back again, and will play centre. He is a splendid all-round player. Gerow, of last year's intermediate O.H.A. team will figure at left wing, while Craft, also of last year's O.H.A. team will be again apparent. These are four players who are hard to beat in their positions, and from last year's Trent Valley team three other men can easily be secured. Picton's chances, look good—on paper.

• • •

Fenelon Falls will be along with most of their old-time stars, and will make a strong bid for the T. V. L. championship.

• • •

Our old friends, Lindsay, will be heard fro mthis winter.

• • •

With six teams in the City League, and four in the Guild League, some hitherto unheard of stars should be developed this year.

• • •

In a practice game of half an hour's duration last night, the Farriers defeated the Karnots by 3—2.

• • •

The Vernier Club of the tool room of the C.G.E. have organized for the season and have decided to enter the city league. The officers are:

2nd Vice-Pres.—F. L. Bradburn.
3rd Vice-Pres.—P. Duffy.

In the despatch in to-day's Toronto papers with reference to the Midland-Lindsay game Whitcroft's name is given as Weatherup.

The Happy Thoughts do hereby challenge Higgin's Favourites, or the employees of R. Fair & Co. to a game of hockey to be played at as early a date as possible in the Brock street rink. C. Foley, captain.

• • •

The Colonials will practice to-night at All Saint's rink from 10 to 11.

• • •

Midland won an exhibition game in Lindsay last night by 8-4.

• • •

The secretary of the O.H.A. has received word from Markham that there will be no team from that town in the O.H.A. this season. This will leave Port Perry, Lindsay and Peterborough to battle for supremacy in district No. 2. of the Intermediate O.H.A.

TUG-OF-WAR.

The Locks tug of war team still holds a challenge for any tug of war team in town, and is waiting for an acceptance. They will pull any team for a purse of $25 on a standing pull, or any way they may wish. They have heard the Lock Works have organized a team; if they have the former team will only be too glad to hear from them.—John Meharry, capt.

BASKET-BALL.

A Y.M.C.A. basket ball committee, consisting of the captain of each team, and another representative to be chosen by him, was formed on Saturday evening. The following men constitute the committee:

W. D. Campbell, capt., Wm. Richardson, of Barriers.
G. Miller, capt., of Brownies.
G. Galley, capt., Geo. Armstrong, of Class team.
W. Cavanah, capt., of Athletics.

These men are requested to meet at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday evening at 7.15 to elect a representative team to play outside games.

CURLING.

The ice at the curling rink is now in fine shape and four or five rinks are going every evening. The club membership is unusually large this year, and the game is roaring.

TURF.

The Turf Club will hold a matinee on Christmas Day at the race track. Black Mack, Looking Glass, Velma and Bluecher will enter the free-for-all and there will be a big list for the slower class.

FIVE MEN IN A PULPIT.

Disgraceful Scene in a Scotch Church Recently—Rival Factions and Threadbare Tempers Much in Evidence.

The troubles of the Free Kirk and the Wee Kirk are straws in the wind compared with the differences which divide the flock of the Dalkeith Evangelical Union Congregational Church.

Morning service recently was notable for the fact that the pulpit contained two rival preachers and three fighting men, all trying to perform their specific duties at the same time, while the conflicting halves of the congregation sang hymns against each other.

The minister of Dalkeith is the Rev. Robert Dermid Brown. He does not meet with unquestioned approval by the congregation. Among other sins alleged against him is the ownership of an ice cream saloon.

The reform party have invited him to withdraw, and have invited somebody else to take his place. Mr. Brown has replied with a fearsome Scotch instrument known as a caveat, and they tried to fight it all out in church.

There are two doors in Dalkeith Church. The minister holds the keys of one; the malcontents have the other. When Mr. Brown and party reached the church on a recent Sunday morning they found the malcontents in possession, and a young man named Scott—brilliant in a blue lounge suit and a green tie—in the pulpit. The Brown party entered by their own door, and listened to Mr. Scott's prayer, interrupting with jeers when the supplications did not please them.

The prayer over, Mr. Brown elbowed his way into the pulpit and called for the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Mr. Scott folded his arms, and listened to the music. The hymn was sung with great vehemence, while the rival faction jeered, and after the "Amen" the verses were sung all over again.

The Scott party, keeping strictly to their own half of the church, had a small organ, and they countered with "Fight the Good Fight." The rival pastors lost their tempers and stimulated the two choirs by gesticulating wildly at each others. Then Mr. Brown shot up his arm. Both parties stopped singing. Both ministers tried to address the congregation.

The din was terrific. Three more men stepped into the pulpit. Evidently they were on the side of the minister, for the opposition shouted loudly that three prize fighters had gone up. The fighting men were content with looking fierce. No blows were struck, but the shouting and the insults were such as have seldom disgraced a house of Divine worship. Accusations were hurled at the head of Mr. Brown. In reply, he made personal imputations against the character of his assailants.

"If you are a gentleman, and have any respect, quit this pulpit," said Mr. Brown to his rival. "If you don't," he added reflectively, "I will throw you down the stairs."

Mr. Scott declined to leave, and the din became greater than ever.

Tempers were worn threadbare and there was every promise of a free fight when the young man with the green necktie said that he would stand aside and allow Mr. Brown to make a statement, resuming his own service afterwards. "If you try it," said Mr. Brown, "I will throw you out."

Mr. Brown delivered an extraordinary tirade, constantly interrupted by laughter, objectionable remarks and the shuffling of feet. "Madam," he said to one objector, "there will be no laughing in hell!"

At last he finished and then, as if satisfied with his performance, forbore to eject his rival with the green tie, and stalked out of the church, followed by his bodyguard and his supporters.

Mr. Scott said it would be a mockery to proceed with Divine service after such a scene as that, so he and his party left also, after a discreet interval.

Trade of India Booming.

A Blue Book issued recently contains a review of the trade of India for the year ending March 31, last. This states that the whole trade—that is, the total of the imports and exports of both merchandise and treasure—is greater than that of the preceding year by nearly £21,000,000, equal to 13 per cent. Among the causes which have contributed to this result is one that has had a two-fold effect—namely, the extraordinary price of raw cotton—for, while on the one hand it produced a partial paralysis of the Lancashire cotton industry, and so kept at an unduly low level the imports of goods which represent more than one-third of the value of all imported merchandise, it created, on the other hand, an extraordinary demand for Indian cotton, and this, with the increased price, accounts for an advance in the export trade of nearly nine hundred and sixty-three lakhs (£6,412,600). But putting aside cotton goods the imports of the year of all other commodities furnish striking evidence of industrial development and general prosperity. Records were established for sugar, provisions, metals, precious stones, etc.

Mrs. "Pat" Campbell's Fun.

"Will you kindly tell us," a reporter asked Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress, "why you are so frequently cold and unresponsive to—to our profession, don't you know? Have you any grouch against newspapers?"

"Not a thing—except one," she replied. "They will now and again call me 'Mrs. Pat.' I can't stand that 'Pat.' It is the last straw that breaks the Campbell's back."

An Imposing By-Product.

School Teacher (showing off her best boy before visitors)—Now, Perkins, can you name some of the important by-products of the steel industry?

Fitted For the Business.

"Have you ever had any experience in canvassing for subscription books?" asked the man at the desk.

"No, sir," said the applicant for a job, "but I can put up a good talk."

"Well, take a copy of this work and go and see if you can get an order. I'll give you half a day to make the trial."

The applicant went away.

In an hour or two he returned.

"What luck?" inquired the man at the desk.

"I've got an order for this book in full morocco from your wife, sir."

"The deuce! You'll do, young man."

Japanese Toys.

"Our children," says a Japanese lady, "are not children long, and we can do most with them when they are little. Then we show them only beautiful things, you know—only beautiful things—little silken balls and little carved ivory things. Oh, your children's things—toys, don't you call them?—are so ugly. We would be afraid of what our children would be if we gave them your children's toys."

THE DAYLIGHT STORE

WHERE DO YOU BUY YOUR CLOTHES?

This is a very important matter, and still many men appear to think it of no consequence. They buy just anywhere they happen to see something that strikes their fancy.

But there's a difference in stores, as well as in clothes.

Some stores go in for "cheapness," others for quality.

Which do you prefer?

"You pay your money and take your choice."

If it is smartness of style, perfection of fit, thorough reliability—at a fair price—you are after, then this is the CLOTHING STORE for you.

CONFIRM THE JAP REPORTS

Russians Admit Jspanese Reports of Fleet Destruction---Warships About Useless---Jap Trophies of Keekwan Consists of Quick Firers, Machine and Field Guns and Ammunition---The Sevastapol Disabled, According to the Personal Investigation of Admiral Togo.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 22.—While declining to give details, the Admiralty admits that Russian advices from Port Arthur, sent by General Stoessel, substantially confirmed the Japanese advices of the partial wrecking of the Russian ships in the harbor, and the censor has been instructed to permit the publication of the despatches.

It is claimed that several of the larger ships and a respectable number of torpedo boat destroyers are still seaworthy, but that they are not being considered as a factor in the coming fight between Admiral Togo's ships and the Russian second Pacific squadron. If the fortress is relieved, it is believed that most of the ships will be raised and saved.

The reports that a Japanese squadron of 40 vessels had already sailed to meet the second Pacific squadron is regarded at the Admiralty here as being incorrect and circulated for a purpose.

Jap Trophies.

Washington, Dec. 22.—The following cablegram, dated Tokio, Dec. 21, has been received at the Japanese Legation:

"Port Arthur army reports our trophies at the battle of the north fort of Tunkeekwanshan were four quick-firers, whereof two are usable; four machine guns, usable, and five field guns, which are under examination, besides rifles, shells, ammunition, grenades, etc."

Sevastopol Disabled.

Tokio, Dec. 22.—Admiral Togo, who has personally made a series of observations of the Russian battleship Sevastopol, telegraphs to the Naval Department, expressing the opinion that the Sevastopol is disabled. Great weight is attached to Togo's personal observations and opinion, instanced by the fact that when the Russian battleship Petrovolsk was sunk, Togo was one of the few officers of the entire Japanese fleet whose eye caught the vision of speedy disaster.

Relieves the Tension.

Correspondence of the Associated Press, on the Front Line of Russian Defence, Below Mukden, Nov. 22.—During a ride around the front, from which we have just returned, we noted a row towards the forward line of trenches that might have presaged a Japanese attack. From a seemingly deserted Chinese hut rushed a half grown pig, a shoat of the Manchurian variety. After it went a Cossack in hot pursuit. Other Cossacks joined the chase, but the pig, threading the trenches, gained the open ground and headed for the Japanese lines, less than 400 yards away.

Reckless of the possible consequences, six Cossacks dashed in pursuit with their long brown coats tucked about their waists. But the pig had the legs of them and with ear-piercing shrieks headed across the imaginary dividing line and charged the Japanese position. The opposite hill slope had been to all appearance vacant and silent as the grave, but a hidden trench suddenly gave up a party of Japanese and away they went after the pig. The Cossacks stopped and the Japanese headed the pig diagonally back towards the Russian lines. They did not catch it, but a fresh relay of Russians took up the chase and the pig veered over again to the Japanese lines.

Not a shot was fired at this time, but Japanese and Cossacks stood within a hundred paces of each other in the open, laughing at each other's non-success and hurling mutual maledictions after the pig. The last we saw of it the pig was keeping strictly to the neutral strip between the two forces and heading westward in the direction of the Liao River.

Steamer Nigretia.

Tokio, Dec. 22.—The examination of the cargo, passengers and crew of the British steamer Nigretia is progressing. Seemingly it is undetermined whether parole-breaking Russian officers are on board the Nigretia. The Japanese are carefully investigating this feature of the case, because of the question of the ability of the Chinese officials to properly conduct the internment of Russians who seek refuge at ports in China, which is considered to be vitally important.

Trip For Military Attaches.

Tokio, Dec. 22.—The Japanese transport Manah leaves Japan for Port Arthur about Dec. 26, carrying the foreign naval attaches and Parliamentary delegations. The trip is intended to give the attaches an opportunity to make technical observations.

IMPRACTICABLE CLADO.

Says British Agitation Was Plan to Delay Baltic Fleet.

Paris, Dec. 22.—Statements made by Capt. Clado (detached from Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron to appear as a witness before the international commission), during his journey to Paris, are exciting considerable stir in official and diplomatic circles as indicating a rather defiant and belligerent tone on the eve of the assembling of the commission.

Some of Clado's statements were strongly antagonistic to Great Britain, he declaring that the British agitation over the North Sea incident leading up to the appointment of the international commission was a plan to delay the Russian second Pacific squadron from relieving Port Arthur.

He also asserted that another campaign, having for its object the Russian Black Sea fleet passing the Dardanelles, will be launched at an opportune time. In the meantime, he added, men and equipment from the Black Sea fleet will be sent to aid the second Pacific squadron.

It was pointed out to the British Embassy that Clado is not a member of the commission, but only a witness, and therefore no official cognizance will be taken of his statements.

Russian Progress Condemned.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 22.—The governor of Moscow has officially condemned the resolution of Moscow town council, Dec. 13, advocating popular control of the Government and freedom of the press and of meeting. On instructions from Interior Minister Sviatopolk-Milsky, City Captain Golizyn has demanded an official explanation of why the question, outside of its competency, was discussed by the town council.

Holds Councils Daily.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 22.—Emperor Nicholas is holding councils daily at Tarskoe-Selo, at which, it is understood, the internal situation in Russia is being thoroughly discussed.

JAPANESE TAKE ANOTHER POSITION

Further Success of Japanese Army at Port Arthur

A Counter Attack by the Russians Was Defeated—Occupation is Practically Secured

Special to The Examiner

Tokio, Dec. 22.—A despatch received to-day from the Japanese Army before Port Arthur says:—"The right column of the Army at 5 o'clock this morning, taking advantage of the enemy's excitement, drove the enemy off an eminence north of Houmayentao on Pigeon Bay and occupied the position, and at 7 o'clock dislodged the enemy from the heights on the peninsula west of Houmayentao, which we occupied, capturing one small gun. After the Japanese occupation of the position the enemy made a counter attack, but was immediately repulsed. At present our occupation of the position is practically secure.

Birmingham, Eng., Dec. 22nd.—The Post has private communication from St. Petersburg which states that serious trouble is likely to occur shortly unless constitutional government is forthcoming shortly.

The florist stores in Peterborough are just now in their gayest Christmas garb, and they present a scene of great beauty to those who admire the beautiful in nature. Messrs. Mr. F. Mason's store is also decorated in a very pretty manner, and the motto in colours in the front "A Merry Christmas," attracts attention to the beautiful of the interior.

STEAMER FOR THE FAR NORTH.

Peterborough Canoe Company Ship Steamer to Great Slave Lake.

Method of Shipping the Hull of the Steamer—Will be Used in Northern Waters.

The Peterborough Canoe Company shipped on Monday, the 19th inst., the hull of a steam yacht, 60 feet long, 9 1-2 foot beam, and 5 feet deep. It was built entirely of white oak. The keel was 7 inches by 8 inches, 60 feet long, in two pieces. The bow piece was 7 inches by 14 inches. The planking was 2 inches, dressed. It was built and put up, and put together with screws and bolts. It was then marked and numbered so that it can be easily put together and taken apart, the pieces packed into a car, with the boiler and engine, etc., and shipped to Edmonton, N.W.T. It will be drawn from there on sleighs about ninety miles, then taken hundreds of miles down the river by boat and over many portages to its destination, and then set up again and finished, and will then be ready for business. The ultimate destination of this steamer will be the Great Slave Lake and the water route will be via the Slave and Athabasca Rivers. It will be used on the waters in the vicinity of the Great Slave Lake, and for varying purposes for which steamers in that vicinity are necessary, and this steamer is doubtless the first of its kind to be sent into that country.

It is a tribute to the quality of the work of the local company that the order was placed here.

Hon. George P. Graham, Provincial Secretary, will address a meeting in the interests of Mr. Wm. Anderson, Liberal candidate in East Peterborough, at Havelock on the evening of Friday, Jan. 6th. Hon. Mr. Graham is one of the best platform speakers in the Liberal party and Mr. Anderson is very fortunate in securing him for a meeting during the present campaign. The people of Havelock will no doubt be glad to hear the public questions of the day discussed by a speaker of the ability of Hon. Mr. Graham.

Fill the Little Stockings!

Make the boys and girls happy! Merry Christmas is coming, and coming right quick. The children are dreaming all night of St. Nick. The old folks delighted, and feeling quite young, as when they their own little red stockings hung, are plotting and planning, and hiding with stealth, queer parcels that come from Hawley's sweet shelf. What a charming store it is! So much to see! So much to select from! Very fine bon-bons, creams and chocolates, mixed candies, sugar toys, sugar animals, dogs, cats, etc., and a great string of fancy sugar canes. Peep in at the enchanting window—it's a sight to see! Cakes galore! Our orange cake is a special favourite. H. E. Hawley & Son, Confectionery, and Lunch Parlours George street.

IT JUST HAPPENED.

The Toronto World, probably the leading Conservative paper in Ontario just now, is mercilessly exposing the monstrous attempt made recently to defeat the Laurier administration through the great plot that failed. Part of the scheme came off all right, but somebody leaked, and one or two of the chief actors declined to complete the parts mapped out for them. Under the heading "It Just Happened," the World thus scores some of those implicated:

"Strange, almost uncanny in their strangeness were the incidents that conspired to point the finger of misplaced suspicion at David Russell and Andrew G. Blair. In the light of the explanations made by these gentlemen, fact and logical deduction must quail before the weird presence of charms, omens and prognostics.

"Mr. Russell purchased La Presse purely as a business proposition. There is no significance in the fact that he took it over in the heat of an election campaign.

"It just happened.

"Mr. Russell gave strict instructions that La Presse should continue to support the Laurier Government. No suspicion should be awakened by the fact that article after article hostile to the Laurier Government was presented at La Presse office and repulsed at the point of the bayonet.

"It just happened.

"Mr. Russell persuaded Mr. Blair to resign the chairmanship of the railway commission at a time when he could do most harm to the Laurier Government, but there was no political design in thus timing the resignation.

"It just happened.

"The parties to La Presse deal bound themselves to lie if the transfer of the property was charged in public. This effort to use La Presse as a means of accomplishing a secret purpose by secret means had no suggestion of political strategy.

"It just happened.

"Mr. Blair resigned for purely business reasons. In his resignation he coupled his business reason with a political reason, (the re-affirming of his objections to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway contract), but

"It just happened.

"Mr. Blair resigned when he did because a question was presented to him 'for prompt determination.' The fact that Mr. Blair has been holidaying ever since does not indicate that he might very easily resign with less indecent haste.

"It just happened.

"Mr Blair resigned to accept more congenial occupation. His subsequent inactivity is not the result of a miscarriage of a conspiracy.

"It just happened.

"Hugh Graham was in Mr. Russell's blooms at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, but there is nothing significant in the fact that the visit occurred when Mr. Russell was then moving heaven and earth to defeat the Government.

"It just happened.

"Hugh Graham had secret knowledge of Mr. Blair's intention to resign. He also knew of the bombshell that was to be exploded a few days before the elections, but it would be unfair to attach any ulterior meaning to this combination of circumstances.

"It just happened.

"All these things strangely mysteriously happened. But it may also happen that a Parliamentary investigation will scatter the shadows of charms, omens and prognostics and restore public faith, in fact, and logical deduction."

The Hamilton Herald, a very independent paper, says:—"Hardly any criticism of the Liberal Government's administrative record is likely to be seen or heard. That is unassailable. By whatever means it has obtained and maintained itself in office, the Ross Government has been a good Government, so far as administration goes. It may well be doubted if as able a ministry could be selected from the Opposition benches. This fact will count for something, and will go far to neutralize the effect of the cry, 'It's time for a change.'"

LINGERING COLD.

Withstood Other Treatment But Quickly Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"Last winter I caught a very severe cold which lingered for weeks," says J. Urquhart, of Zephyr, Ontario. "My cough was very dry and harsh. The local dealer recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and guaranteed it, so I gave it a trial. One 25 cent bottle of it cured me. I believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be the best I have ever used." This is one of the most staple medicines in use. Thousands have testified to its excellence. It not only cures a cold quickly and effectually, but counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It is equally valuable for children and may be given to them with implicit confidence. It always cures and is pleasant to take. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no opium or other harmful drug. Sold by all druggists.

CHURCH UNION NEARER.

Ground Was Cleared and the Attitude of Churches Made Known.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—Organic Union between the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches in Canada seems to be nearer as a result of the day's work at the joint meeting in Knox Church yesterday of the special committees appointed by the three Churches, and at the evening sessions of the separate committees. The ground was cleared, and the attitude of the Churches made known in a prolonged discussion by some of the ablest men in the conference. The sessions continue today, when, it is expected, some definite results will follow and be made known.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Messrs. John Fowler and Wm. Johnston appeared before the council and asked for a grant of the sum of fifteen dollars to supplement a like sum guaranteed by the Cavan Council towards helping Joseph Beauvois an old man who had met a serious loss lately by fire.

The following accounts were handed in:—

On motion of Messrs. Smith and Fowler, these accounts were passed and ordered to be paid.

It was moved by Mr. Smith and Fowler, that whereas the township of the township of Cavan had granted the sum of $15 to help Jos. Beauvais on condition that North Monaghan do likewise, therefore that an order be drawn on the treasurer for the sum of $15 to be paid to Mr. John Fowler, who is hereby authorized to expend that amount in charity to Jos. Beauvois.—Carried.

A communication was received from the clerk of Cavan enclosing an account for work done by that township on the Cavan boundary road during the season 1904 and asking for a contra account from N. Monaghan if any.

This was received and referred to the Reeve, who was instructed to render the account of North Monaghan expenditure upon this road in 1904.

A communication was verbally received from Mr. D. Mahar asking a refund of dog tax for 1904—he not having a dog. This was received and will be allowed upon the complainant filing the necessary declaration.

The committee appointed to investigate the complaint of ratepayers as to the condition of Lock street reported having examined the street and interviewed the General Manager of the Radial Railway Co., in regard to the matter. The Com. found the road in a bad condition in some places but as the Railway Co. seemed willing to put those places in good shape when possible, the Com. recommended that no action be taken just now, further than that the clerk notify the Railway Co. that the council will require a strict adherance to the provisions of the franchise agreement between the city and the township as to putting the highway in a proper state for public traffic as soon as possible and adopted.

In the spring. This report was received moved by Messrs. Brown and Morrow that a committee of the Reeve and Councillors Smith and Brown be hereby appointed to attend the meeting in Millbrook in regard to the proposed dam in Cavan which affects a part of North Monaghan. This was carried.

London Free Press Also Publishes An Apology.

THE LIBEL SUIT SETTLED

Arose Out of Libel Charge Attributed to Mr. R. R. Gamey, Repeated By Mr. A. W. Wright, and Repudiated By Both of Them—Costs Fixed At Three Hundred Dollars—The Free Press' Regrets.

London, Ont., Dec. 22.—A settlement has been arrived at in the case of McEvoy v. The Free Press, by the terms of which the defendants agreed to publish a statement and to pay the costs, which have been fixed at $300. Mr. C. G. Jarvis acted for the plaintiff and Mr. T. G. Meredith for the defendants. The Free Press accordingly published the following apology yesterday:

"During the Muskoka bye-election campaign in October, 1903, a Free Press correspondent reported Mr. A. W. Wright as having said at a public meeting at Gravenhurst that Mr. R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., had stated on the same platform that Mr. J. M. McEvoy, barrister, of this city, 'had stolen the leaves from the Crossin cash book,' which book was required in evidence at the investigation of the Gamey charges, in which Mr. McEvoy was of counsel for the defence.

"Mr. McEvoy brought action against Mr. Gamey for uttering the words, against Mr. Wright for repeating them, and against The Free Press for publishing them. Mr. Gamey has since stated, upon oath, that he did not utter the words complained of, or any words to the same effect. Mr. Wright has also sworn that he did not repeat them. And The Free Press has admitted that it published the words, but that it did so in good faith.

"The Free Press now states, in justice to Mr. McEvoy, that it is satisfied that the words in question were never uttered by Mr. Gamey or Mr. Wright, and that the report was erroneous, and regrets that The Free Press was unwittingly the medium of their publication."

A TERRIBLE VOYAGE.

Steamship Kroonland Though Struck By a Tidal Wave Arrives.

New York, Dec. 21.—After a tempestuous voyage, in which she was struck by a tidal wave, the Red Star Line steamship Kroonland arrived here today from Antwerp. When the tidal wave struck the ship one of her passengers was thrown across the deck and had a leg broken and a sailor fell from the crow's nest, but suffered no serious injury. On the second day out a stewardess went insane and was paced under restraint. The voyage was the worst the vessel has ever experienced. There was nothing but bad weather from the time she left Antwerp on the 10th until she neared port. Hurricane followed hurricane and heavy head seas were almost continually breaking over her bows and retarding her passage.

On the morning of the 12th, while the vessel was making fair time in a strong northwest gale, she was struck by a tidal wave, which brought her to a standstill and sent tons of water tumbling over her decks. P. Pirotte, a Belgian cabin passenger, was standing under shelter and close to the deckhouse amidships. He was picked up and thrown across the decks. When rescued it was found that his leg had been broken in two places.

Officers of the Kroonland say that when the wave struck the vessel the water dashed higher than her funnels and swept the hurricane deck. Fritz Sortland, the lookout, was thrown out of the crow's nest and fell a distance of 40 feet, but sustained no injury, except a badly bruised side. In spite of force of the water, the ship sustained practically no damage.

Healthy and Vigorous

Mr. John Shelton, the well-known bridge builder of 101 Sherwood street, Ottawa, says:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Pills for kidney and liver derangements brought on by exposure, and find them better than any pill or medicine I ever used. They cleansed my system and made me feel healthy and vigorous, and better in every way."

A Toronto Driver Killed.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—David King, a driver for the Nasmith Company, was so badly injured at Adelaide and Yonge streets at 7 a.m. yesterday that he died five minutes after he was taken to the Emergency. His skull was fractured. King was driving east on Adelaide street, and at Yonge street he collided with car 748 of the College and Yonge line. The wagon was smashed and he was thrown to the pavement. Deceased lived in Spruce avenue and was married. He has been in poor health for some time.

London in a Fog.

London, Dec. 22.—London was enveloped yesterday afternoon in a black fog, more dense than anything witnessed during the last two years. In many places the traffic was almost completely stopped and the greatest care was necessary to avoid accidents, a number of which have already been reported. Torch boys did a rearing trade. The railroad trains were all delayed.

Sufferers from sciatica should not hesitate to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. The prompt relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. Sold by all druggists.

CANADIAN NORTHERN Shareholders Adopt the New Reorganization Plans.

NEW LINES ARE PROJECTED

Full Control of the Great Northern Will Be Secured to the Canadian Northern in About Two Months—A New Issue of Bonds With Manitoba's Guarantee Will Simplify Matters.

Quebec, Dec. 21.—The Canadian Northern interests, that control the Great Northern Railway, have at last come to an agreement to utilize and make valuable the latter railroad as a continuation of the transcontinental system to the City of Quebec, and they have decided upon a plan of reorganization.

A meeting of the Great Northern Company's board of directors and shareholders took place in this city yesterday afternoon, when the plan of reorganization was unfolded to the shareholders. B. Hanna, president of the company, presided over the meeting and Mr. Lash, one of the directors and legal counsel for the Canadian Northern Railway, explained the proposed plan of reorganization. It provides for bonds to be issued to the extent of $4,662,800 at 4 per cent., to replace the existing bond issue of the company—all indebtedness under the new bonds to be guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Canadian Northern Railway Company. The company will in exchange for each $1000 of principal of the outstanding bonds, series A and B, give $750 principal of the guaranteed bonds of the consolidated issue with all interest coupons attached.

The above plan of reorganization was submitted to the shareholders and unanimously adopted.

Z. A. Lash, general counsel of the Canadian Northern Railway, informed the shareholders that they expected within the next two years to connect all their lines between the east and west and so complete their transcontinental railway. Full particulars of the proceedings were not given out, but it is said that within two months the details of reorganization will be completed and the old bondholders receive their money. The road will then pass into the hands of Mackenzie & Mann and their Toronto associates, who will at once begin the construction of the branch line from Garneau Junction to Quebec in the direction of the new bridge.

The old board of directors were re-elected as follows: D. B. Hanna, president; James McNaught, first vice-president; E. H. Melville, second vice-president; E. R. Ling, V. Chateauvert, Hon. Jules Tessier, W. H. Moore, J. A. Nash, F. O. Annesley, Thomas McDougall, John Joyce, Hon. S. N. Parent, ex-officio. This board, however, will only exist until the old bonds are replaced, when the Quebec directors and Col. McNaught and H. H. Melville, first and second vice-presidents under the old management, will disappear. An entirely new board, controlled by Toronto gentlemen associated with Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann, will then be elected.

New Bond Issue.

Winnipeg, Dec. 22.—Considerable confusion has existed among British and foreign investors as to the various issues of bonds of Canadian Northern Railway of Canada, as this company has absorbed at one time and another various concerns and has taken over their issues without conversion into the company's own bonded issues. The company has at present some $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 of bonds outstanding as a total liability, though these are known as Lake Manitoba Railway and Canal Company, Manitoba Southeastern Railway and C. N. R. proper issues. To do away with this confusion, the company, with the assistance of the Manitoban Government, proposes to transfer all previous issues to a common basis by the issue of $9,000,000 of stock to be known as Canadian Northern Consolidated bonds. The issue and transferences will be made by the National Trust Company of Winnipeg and the bonds will bear interest at 4 per cent. guaranteed by the Manitoban Government and redeemable in 1930, all shareholders of previous issues will have the option of exchanging their bonds for consolidated issue, at par. The surplus issue will be applied to the development of the road and all future issues will bear the same title. Premier Roblin, Minister of Public Works Rogers and Provincial secretary will countersign the issues as nominees of the Provincial Government.

To Extend to Soo.

Brockville, Dec. 22.—The Brockville, Westport & Northwestern Railway line was inspected yesterday from end to end by W. Johnston, a Dominion Government engineer, for the purpose of ascertaining the condition of the roadbed and equipment. The line was taken over some two years ago by a company of New York capitalists. It was then in a very crude state and had not reached the Government standard of equipment. Great improvements have since been made on the roadbed and rolling stock, and it is now considered to be in a fit condition for the payment of the balance of the subsidies which have been withheld. These aggregate about $60,000, which, with the capital of the new company, will be applied toward extending the line to the Soo. If Mr. Johnston's report is favorable it is expected that an early start will be made next spring. Mr. Johnston was accompanied by a number of the directors and several prominent citizens of Brockville.

Electric Motive Power For West Shore.

New York, Dec. 22.—President W. H. Newman of the West Shore R.R., has been authorized to make the necessary contracts for the preliminary work of introducing electric motive power on that railroad.

New Scottish Port.

London, Dec. 21.—The scheme which was recently brought before the Canadian Government for the establishment of an entirely new home port for the North Atlantic trade is now being seriously discussed. The proposal is to use Loch Linnhe on the west coast of Scotland. It is calculated that passengers or mails coming from Halifax and landing at Fort William could reach London eighteen hours sooner than could be done by way of Liverpool, the time being saved on the ocean journey. The distance between Fort William and Quebec is nearly three hundred miles less than between Liverpool and Quebec. The railway service from Loch Linnhe is excellent.

Street Railway Association.

Montreal, Dec. 21.—An organization known as the Canadian Street Railway Association was formed here yesterday, the object being to secure information relative to the construction and management of such railways. The election of officers will take place to-day. Amongst others were present yesterday morning: Allan Royce and W. H. Moore of the Toronto Railway; Lieut.-Col. McLean and N. Z. Earl of the St. John, N. B., Street Railway; C. E. A. Carr of the London Street Railway, and W. G. Ross, D. McDonald and Robinson of the Montreal Street Railway.

Mrs. Chadwick in Court.

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 21.—Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick was brought into the bankruptcy court here yesterday in the bankruptcy proceedings against her, but was excused from testifying because of illness. Should Mrs. Chadwick again be brought into court, it is unlikely that she will give any testimony. If she does, it will be against the advice of her attorney, who refuses even to allow her to be sworn as a witness.

To Reduce Capital.

London, Dec. 21.—(C. A. P.)—The resolution has been confirmed, reducing the capital of the Dominion of Canada Mortgage Company from £250,000 to £218,284, by the cancellation of 30,856 of unissued and 12,360 of forfeited shares.

Woodstock Boy Missing.

Woodstock, Dec. 21.—Earl Daniels, son of George Daniels, driver for the Dominion Express Company, disappeared from his home on Sunday morning and has not been seen since. Earl was about 14 years of age. He was employed in the downtown C.P.R. ticket office as a messenger.

Couldn't Stand the Pressure.

The Mayor of Stuhlweissenburg, in Hungary, became so excited over preparations for a public ball at which an Archduchess was to appear as patroness that he wore his dress clothes day and night and had to be sent to a lunatic asylum.

A HAYPORK HUSBAND.

John Smith of Owen Sound Sent to Penitentiary For Two Years.

Owen Sound, Dec. 22.—The first penitentiary sentence for many months was pronounced on John Smith at the police court on Saturday. Smith had been remanded on Thursday on a charge of assault and wounding, brought against him by his wife, Mary Jane Smith, who alleged that he brutally struck her on the head with a heavy fork. On Saturday Smith was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in Kingston Penitentiary. Smith came home one night in a disagreeable mood, and because his wife had not attended to all the farm duties he started to abuse her, kicking and beating her unmercifully, wounding her face horribly. Afterwards the infuriated man rushed at her with a hay fork. On seeing him coming the woman fainted, and this is the one thing that saved her life, for Smith missed his aim, the fork only grazing the woman's head. Smith then realized what he had done and stopped. He closely guarded her for three days and did not send for medical aid so that she could not lodge complaint. At last he ventured out, and when he returned he found two policemen ready to escort him downtown. This is not the first time Smith has been up on a similar charge.

Facial Paralysis.

Mr. W. J. Brennan, Western Hill, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "My face was twisted all out of shape by facial paralysis, and five doctors failed to cure or even relieve. By the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been entirely cured and have returned to work well and strong. I have gained in weight and feel that I have a new lease of life.

Whom the King Honors.

London, Dec. 21.—It was announced in The Gazette last evening that King Edward had conferred a number of knighthoods, including one on Joseph Wilson Swan, M.A., president of the Faraday Society, inventor of the incandescent electric lamp bearing his name, and a Royal Commissioner to the St. Louis Exposition. Among the colonial knighthoods is one for Chief Justice William Henry Worwood of Newfoundland.

Bulgaria Scares Sultan.

Constantinople, Dec. 21.—The Government has nearly completed arrangements with a foreign financial group, through the Ottoman Bank, for a loan of about $15,000,000, to purchase new artillery. The occasion of the re-armament is the recent Bulgarian purchase of quick firing guns, which deeply impressed the Sultan.

Best Remedy for Constipation.

"The finest remedy for constipation I ever used is Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets," says Mr. Eli Butler, of Frankville, N.Y. "They act gently and without any unpleasant effect, and leave the bowels in a perfectly natural condition." Sold by all druggists.

New Year's Day in Russia.

At every country house in Russia there are a feast and a procession in honor of New Year's day. Horses, sheep, cows and hogs are dressed with garlands and led to the landlord's house. The idea is that the animals shall be taken into the dining room, but when the landlord has a handsomely furnished apartment and does not care to have it ruined he sets aside some other room and allows the mob to take possession of it.

An Old English Custom.

The old country Englishman never fails to unbar his door at 12 o'clock New Year's eve to let the old year out and the new year in.

AN EXCELLENT INSTITUTION.

The Peterborough Business College and the Remarkable Success it has Achieved in the Last Nine Years---From Seven Students to More than Eighty—Mr. W. Pringle and the Splendid Work his College is Doing for the Ambitious Youth of the Town and Country—Enlargements to Meet the Requirements of the Increasing Number of Students—Commercial Branches Taught---Graduates in all the Business Offices in Town.

The Peterborough Business College has passed through its doors many hundreds of bright young men and women, who have been enabled by its medium to fill positions both at home and elsewhere, which have been the means of advancing them in life, and, taking the position that as an educational institution it deserves credit, the Examiner furnishes some facts relative to its almost phenomenal growth during the last nine years.

Yesterday afternoon was the last day of the term at the Peterborough Business College, and a number of the eighty odd students will, after the New Year, start out in life equipped with a good business education, in these days, one of the most essential qualifications for material success.

The closing of the year's work, in this, one of the town's most creditable educational institutions, furnishes an opportunity of retrospection with respect to the College, and its record, which is one, the possession of which, any similar institution might well be proud of.

Learning incidentally that yesterday was the closing day of the term, the Examiner called at the College, and a busy scene presented itself to the reporter, and the significance of what was seen was emphasized when subsequently, in a conversation, Mr. W. Pringle, the principle, modestly gave some facts with reference to the College.

He stated in answer to a question from the interviewer, that nine years ago, in company with the late Mr. W. C. McCrae, he purchased the Peterborough Business College, which at that time was represented by one room, and the modest number of seven students. Yesterday there were over 80 students enrolled on the books of the College. There is a world of meaning in these two sentences, a record of a business increase of over eleven hundred per cent. in nine years is one which few institutions in this, or any other country can boast, and is conclusive proof of one fact, that the training given in the college is of the proper kind, or it would have been impossible to have achieved the success indicated by the great increase in the enrollment of students.

In the early stages there was one class room in the College, and this was found to be plenty large enough for the number of students. It was not long, however, until it was found necessary to provide more space, and a second large class room was procured; not without some misgivings, however, as to the wisdom of this expansion of space.

The students still increased in numbers, and it was not long until Mr. Pringle decided upon making a bold stroke of enterprise, and leased another large room, equal in size to that at first used, and to-day the same conditions which made the acquirement of other rooms necessary, presents itself, and when the College opens after the New Year, it will be with a fourth class room, and Mr. Pringle yesterday signed a lease renting the present premises for a term of five years, a fact which is a practical proof of the truth of his statement that the prospects for a continuance of the increasing attendance of the College, were never more promising.

In addition to the class room a separate typewriting room will be provided, and new typewriters will also be added to the equipment.

The courses taken up in the college are the regular subjects taught in Business Colleges, the commercial courses and shorthand and typewriting, and that in these lines the college has been successful is attested to not only by the largely increasing attendance, but also by the fact that in almost any office in town there may be found graduates of the college, whose work is sufficient proof of the thoroughness of the training which they received.

Commencing after the new year the staff of teachers will number four. Mr. W. Pringle, the principal, who has a general supervision of the teaching, and conducts the examinations, and inspects the work of every student, before it is allowed to go, so that in this way the work of every one of those receiving training passes through the hands of the principal. The other teachers are Mr. C. W. Harnett, who has charge of the Commercial Department; Miss Howson, who has the shorthand and typewriting department in her charge, and Miss Smith, of Lakehurst, who assists in both branches.

The college is arranged in a way to facilitate the work of the different departments, which, as was mentioned, is carried on under the personal supervision of the principal.

In addition to the regular day sessions, for six months in the year night school is held, this period extending from September to April, and by this means many who are otherwise engaged during the day, have been able to procure the commercial education necessary to enable them to fill better positions. The subjects taught are the same as those in the day sessions, and in the night school there are about fifty students enrolled.

That this institution has proved to be of great benefit to the ambitious young people of this town, as well as many from the surrounding district goes without saying, and this, and the additional fact that the character of the education acquired through its medium is such as to fit the one to which it is imparted to meet life's possibilities to-day with immeasurably greater chances of success, are considered sufficient justification for giving the college the space devoted to it to-day.

With four teachers, and a well equipped college, this institution is in a position to give the very best service and the night school enables those who find it impossible to attend during the day, to acquire an education of a practical nature. The fact that the graduates of this college are to be found right in town pursuing successfully the vocation for which they were prepared is good proof of its value.

MR. W. PRINGLE,
Principal of the Peterborough Business College.

HIS INJURIES PROVED FATAL

Thomas Smith Died This Morning at Nicholl's Hospital.

Recieved Injuries at Havelock, From Which he Died This Morning.

Mr. Thomas Smith, the young man who was injured in Havelock on Dec. 12th, and who was brought to the Nicholls Hospital here the same day to be treated for his injuries, died at that institution early this morning.

The cause of death was septic poisoning caused from the injuries received to his leg. The father of the injured young man was averse to having the injured member amputated and the physicians did the best they could to save his life, and the limb, but without avail. He was injured very badly, almost up to the body, and it is doubtful if he would have survived even had the leg been amputated.

It will be remembered that on December 12th, the deceased, who was a brakesman on the C.P.R. was engaged at his usual work, and was making up a train in the Havelock yards prior to making a run. An engine to which was attached three or four cabooses, was in his charge, and he had signalled to the engineer to back up, when he attempted to cross the track in front of the cabooses which were approaching him.

His foot caught between the rail and the tie, and before he could extricate himself from his perilous position or make known to the engineer his plight, the train was upon him, and his leg was broken and frightfully torn and mangled.

He was brought to Peterborough and placed in the care of Dr. Young and Dr. Gray, who did everything possible to save his life, but without avail.

Mr. Basil Smith, the deceased's father, is a conductor running out of Havelock, and came to town to-day to take his son's body home for burial.

Teh deceased was only 21 years of age, and was highly respected by the large circle of his friends in Havelock.

A BOUQUET AND FERN POT

Miss Howson Remembered by Her Business College Class

A Pleasing Event Which Took Place Yesterday Afternoon at the Closing Exercises

A pleasing feature of the closing exercises of the Peterborough Business College yesterday, was an address and presentation which was made to Miss Howson, who has charge of the instruction in the Shorthand and Typewriting Department of the College.

Mr. W. Pringle formally closed the school, offering a few words of good advice to those who were completing their course, and wishing them all a very Merry Christmas.

At the conclusion of his address to the school, he called Miss Howson to the front, when the following address was read by Miss Smith, and Miss Detcher presented Miss Howson with a silver fern pot and fern, and a handsome bouquet of roses.

Dear Miss Howson,—As the Christmas season approaches, we who are fortunate enough to be under your charge, feel that we cannot let this opportunity go by, without at least endeavouring to show our appreciation for the care you have exercised and the undivided attention you have given to each of us during our course of instruction.

You have always shown marked kindness to us all, unselfishly disregarding your own interests, in order to favour any of us. It is needless to say that we have profited under your careful instruction and shall look forward with eagerness to the New Year, when we shall once more resume our studies under you.

We beg of you to kindly accept of this small gift as a slight token of the warm friendship which your pupils have always had for you.

In closing we wish you all the joys and pleasures of this happy festival of the year, and not only that, but may success crown your efforts in the New Year as it has done in the past.

Signed on behalf of the pupils of the Shorthand Department,

HAZEL HICKEY,
ANNA RITCHIE,
LYDIA HIGGINS,
ELLA G. DETCHER.

Miss Howson acknowledged the gifts in a few apt words in which she thanked the members of the class very heartily for their kind remembrance of her expressed in this way.

She was very grateful not only for the gifts, but for the good feeling which had existed between the class and herself, and she expressed the hope that this feeling would long continue.

Mr. Pringle added a few words endorsing the terms of the address, and paying a high tribute to the ability of Miss Howson, with whose work he was very highly pleased. He also referred to Mr. Harnett, the commercial teacher, and said that he felt that he had an excellent staff of teachers.

After this the College term closed for this year.

PRESENTED WITH PURSE OF GOLD

St. Andrews Congregation Remembers Mrs. Rev. J. G. Potter.

Last night at the close of the prayer meeting in St. Andrew's church a very pleasing incident happened, when on behalf of the whole congregation, Mrs. A. McFarlane read the following address to Mrs. (Rev.) J. G. Potter, and Mrs. F. L. Robinson presented her with a purse of gold containing $60, and a handsome silk gown.

Dear Mrs. Potter:

We, the congregation of St. Andrew's, at this Christmas season, desire, in a tangible way, to express our appreciation of the zeal and self-sacrificing spirit which has ever animated you in your labours of love and devotion towards St. Andrew's church and congregation.

Your thoughtfulness for others, and noble Christian character have done much to strengthen the hands of our beloved pastor, and enable him to successfully carry on the Master's work among our people.

The goodly feeling existing throughout the different departments of the church work, is in a large measure attributable to the "Mistress of the Manse," and our earnest prayer is that you and yours may long be spared to advance His cause and His kingdom.

In conclusion we ask you to accept of this small remembrance from us, and our hope is that you and your family may enjoy a very pleasant Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

Peterborough, Dec. 21, 1904.

Rev. Mr. Potter responded on behalf of his wife and thanked the ladies very feelingly for the kindness they had shewn Mrs. Potter and himself during the time that they had been here. They appreciated very fully this further mark of kindness on their part.

MISS M. CASEY WAS HONOURED.

Presentation and Address to a Retiring Teacher.

Teachers and Pupils Unite to Show Esteem, for one, who for Five Years has Been Associated with Them.

During the school sessions at the Murray street Separate School, yesterday afternoon, a very beautiful scene was enacted, when the teachers and scholars of that institution said farewell to Miss M. Casey, who, during the past five years, has been teaching in that school, with credit to herself, and with satisfaction to those in charge of the school, as well as those whom she taught.

That the regret expressed by all concerned at Miss Casey's retirement from the school was genuine, was amply evidenced by the attitude of those who were present at the farewell event yesterday afternoon.

Shortly after dinner Rev. Father W. J. McColl, the local superintendent, the teachers and pupils of the school, were assembled in one room, when the following address was read to Miss Casey, and she was presented with a handsome gold-mounted fountain pen and a large bouquet of roses on behalf of the teachers and pupils of the school:—

To Miss M. Casey,
Teacher St. Peter's Separate School,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Miss Casey,—On this, the eve of the departure from our midst, we, the Reverend Local Superintendent Teachers and pupils of the Murray Street Separate School, have assembled to express in a few words our sincere and heartfelt regret.

One of the saddest experiences of life is to part with friends we have learned to esteem and love. Is it any wonder, therfore, on looking on us assembled here this evening, that you can be able to realize, that, even the most eloquent language cannot express the feeling of gloom which overshadows us at the thought of severing that golden link of love and friendship, which has united us so long?

Those who have been under your guidance and have experienced the kind and patient manner in which you have striven to encourage their efforts, and whom you have laboured so strenuously to direct along the paths of wisdom and righteousness, will for years to come feel the effects of the good work you have begun.

And those who have been associated with you and have witnessed how zealously you have laboured in the discharge of your duties, and the loving relations and friendship which have existed between yourself and your co-workers, will continue to remember and cherish you as one who has been a valued friend.

In conclusion we ask you to accept this gift as a token of our esteem and regard for you and we wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Signed on behalf of the Reverend Local Superintendent, Teachers and pupils.

The presentation was a complete surprise to Miss Casey, and in a few words she expressed her deep appreciation of the kindness shown her, not only on this occasion, but also during the whole length of time in which she had been connected with the school. It had always been her earnest desire to do her whole duty and to give the very best service to those whom she had been engaged to instruct, and that her efforts in this direction had been appreciated was a great pleasure to her.

Miss Casey, who is retiring from her position on the staff of the Murray street Separate School, is a young lady whose place will be hard to fill. Her work in the class room has been of a high order, and her literary abilities have found expression in other avenues as well, and the success of the Ladies' Literary Association of the T. A. S., in which she is one of the leading spirits, is another evidence of her capabilities.

Empty Stockings.

Santa Claus is not always as thoughtful as he might be — he sometimes forgets, and the night of the 25th of December sees some empty stockings. Take this thought with you to Warne's popular little cut price drug store, George street south, and as you choose the gifts for your own child or some grown up person — as you select the dainty boxes of candy, the delicate perfumery, the pretty brushes, and combs, and other useful gifts, have a few stowed away for somebody else.

PRETTY WEDDING AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Nuptials of Dr. Johnston of Lakefield and Miss May McPherson of Town.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated in St. Andrew's Church at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the contracting parties being Dr. John Nesbitt Johnson, Veterinary Surgeon of Lakefield, and Miss May McPherson. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. J. G. Potter.

The bridesmaid was Miss Nellie Kerr, of Toronto, while the groom was supported by Mr. Frank Jory, of Lakefield. The bride was given away by Mr. E. W. Gardiner.

The bride was very handsomely gowned in rich white silk and wore the conventional bridal veil. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid also wore white silk and her bouquet was of red roses.

After the ceremony a large number of relatives and friends enjoyed a delightful wedding breakfast at Mrs. McGill's, Harvey street, at the conclusion of which the bridal couple were driven to Lakefield where they will reside.

Long Afore I Knowed

JES' a little bit o' fellur—I remember still—
Use to almost cry for Christmas, like a youngster will.
Fourth o' July's nothin' to it!—New Year's ain't a smell;
Easter Sunday, chore day—let' all dead in the shell.
I set, though—at night, you know—to set around and hear
The old folks wrack the story all about the dodgs and deer
And Santy threadin' round the roof, all wrapped in fur ans hair—
Long afore I knowed who Santy Claus was.

JUST to wink and set up late a week or two ahead;
Couldn't hardly keep awoke nor wouldn't go to bed
Kinds stayin' on the fire and mother sittin' here
Danglin' socks and rockin' in the shonky rockin' chair;
Pap'd quit' and wonder where it was the money went
And wasn't with his fourt hook and split his liniment,
And me a-dreamin' dolphuls when the clock 'd whiz and burr,
Long afore I knowed who Santy Claus was.

SIZE the fireplace up and figure how Old Santy could Manage to come down the chimbly like they said he would;
Wisht that I could hide and see him—wondered what he'd say
If he ketched a fellur layin' for him that-a-way.
But I bet on him and 'loved him, some as if he had Turned to pat me on the back and say, "Look here, my lad, Here's my pack; jes' he'p yourself, like all good boys does,"
Long afore I knowed who Santy Claus was.

WISHT that yarn was true about him, as it 'peared to be—
Truth made out o' him, that ain't good enough for me!
Wisht I still was on confidin' -I could jes' go wild
Over hangin' up my stockin's, like the little child
Cuddlin' in my lap tonight and beggin' me to tell
'Bout them reindeers and Old Santy that she loves so well.
I'm half sony for this little girl sweetheart of his—Long afore She knows who Santy Claus is.

South Africa was discovered by the Portuguese, who were searching for an ocean road to India. Bartholomew Dias was the commander of the two little ships that formed the expedition in 1486. CHRISTMAS CHILDREN.

Some Famous Men Who Were Born on Christ's Birthday.

Even were it not for its celebration as the birthday of the Saviour, Dec. 25 would rank as quite a notable date in the year for the number of eminent persons whose natal day it is. Curiously enough, however, we seldom think of the day as the beginning of the career of any one on earth other than He to whom custom has assigned it.

We know that historical events of all sorts—battles, sieges, and so forth—have occurred on Christmas, for articles almost without end dealing with this interesting side of the history of the day have been written, but of its biographical side little has been said, the more odd this because the fact that many notables have been born on the day cannot fail to prove of interest.

The biographical index of Christmas is comparatively long and includes such names as Sir Isaac Newton, William Collins, the lyric poet; P. S. Gilmore, the musician and bandmaster; Richard Porson, the greatest classical scholar England ever produced; Johann Jacob Reiske, the celebrated German orientalist; Clara Barton, Admiral S. C. Rohan and a number of others. Unhappy little shavers they must have been in their childhood with their birthday and their Christmas rejoicings all merged in one.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Christmas Cards.

The Christmas card as we know it has an origin easily traceable, and it is doubtless at least sixty years since the first was designed. The artist who claimed to be its originator and who was, at any rate, the first to see its possibilities was W. C. T. Dobson, R. A., who, when quite a young man, in 1844, was prompted at Christmas to make a little sketch symbolic of the season's joys and festivities and to send it to a friend. It seemed to give great pleasure, and the next year Mr. Dobson determined to follow up the idea on a larger scale, and by having his card photographed was enabled to send copies to twenty-five or thirty friends. The delight with which they were received was so great that Mr. Dobson was quick to perceive that he had found out a new pleasure for Christmas.—New York Mail and Express.

A... New Year Proposal

"WHAT resolutions have I vowed to keep the coming year?
Come, sit beside me, maiden fair,
And straightway you shall hear.
I've pledged myself to choose one girl from out the throng so gay,
And love her with an honest love forever and for aye.

"I'VE MADE NO PLEDGE."

"I'LL work for her with brain and brawn, with all my might and main
Until I've won her everything that boneety can gain.
I'll fill her life with all that's good till life itself is done—
And while we train our minds and hearts we'll not neglect the fun.

"NOW tell me, won't you, maiden fair, what you have vowed to do,
For I've told here my truest soul to no one but to you?"

"I've made no pledges," she replied in so demure a tone,
"But, if you don't object, I'll try to help you keep your own!"

New Year's Calls.

The custom of visiting and sending presents and cards on New Year's day is recorded almost as far back as history goes. The practice of using visiting cards can be traced back for thousands of years by the Chinese. Their New Year's visiting cards are curiosities. Each one sets forth not only the name, but all the titles, of its owner, and, as all Chinamen who have any social position at all have about a dozen, it makes the list quite appalling. These cards are made of silk or else of fine paper backed with silk and are so large that they have to be rolled up to be carried conveniently. They are, indeed, so valuable that they are returned to their owners.

A Polish Kissing Bee.

In Poland New Year's eve is observed in a dance called St. Sylvester's ball. The dancing proceeds decorously until the clock strikes 12. Exactly at that moment the men fall to kissing their own and their neighbor's partners, each taking particular pains to thus salute the one he loves best before the one with whom she chances to be dancing can perform that duty. Those not in the mood for dancing gather in another room or remain at home to entertain one another with stories about the departing year.

Conference With Franklin.

Kingston, Dec. 21.—The News and Times states that Col. Sherwood and Detective Cranden visited the home of Returning Officer Franklin of Frontenac and conferred together for some time, going over the election papers. It was shown that Hawkeye did not return to Mr. Franklin the box given him.

WALL TOPPLED OVER.

Eight Innocent Persons Meet Sudden Death in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 21.—The side wall of the O. H. Peck Building on South Fifth street, which was left standing by the great fire of last Tuesday night, toppled over in a high gale early yesterday on to the Crocker Hotel, a three-storey structure adjoining. The tons of brick and mortar crashed completely down through the flimsily constructed building, carrying floors and all into a mass of debris in the basement. There was no warning of the disaster, and the fourteen persons who were sleeping in the various apartments were caught in the crushed structure. Eight of them were killed.

Responsibility for the accident will be the subject of thorough investigation.

J. C. Houghton, city building inspector, had made an inspection of the standing walls Monday, but had given no orders concerning them.

He had earlier ordered the demolition of the other parts of the walls that seemed likely to fall.

The total loss is $16,000.

Sisters From Quebec Saved.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Thrilling rescues of nine nuns, sisters of the Order of the Hotel Dieu, of the French Hospitaller Sisters, marked the progress of a fire that swept through the convent and destroyed it yesterday. Two of the nuns were injured, and were carried from the building almost overcome by smoke. The stairs fell before the sisters could reach them. The women were rescued by the timely arrival of firemen, who carried them down ladders from the burning building. The sisters came from Quebec, Canada, a short time ago. The loss on the building was $5,000.

Stevenson Died From Injuries.

Toronto, Dec. 21.—David George Stevenson, who was struck by a Metropolitan car at Lansing on Monday afternoon, and taken to the General Hospital, died at that institution at 4.30 yesterday afternoon. The unfortunate man never regained consciousness.

Deadly Gas Jet Again.

Toronto, Dec. 21.—Michael Hayes of Watertown, N.Y., who has been working in the city as a stonemason, was asphyxiated in a room at the Power House during Monday night. He had been drinking. His son, who had been staying with him, returned home last Saturday. Owen Holland, aged 60, was found dead in bed at 87 Jarvis street.

Railway Wrecks Out West.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 21.—The Moose Jaw local was wrecked by a defective rail at Portage la Prairie yesterday morning. The engine and one car left the rails and the engine toppled over into the ditch. No person was injured.

Melford, Dec. 21.—An accident occurred yesterday on the Canadian Northern Railway, four miles west of Tisdale. An engine, a caboose and a tank were ditched. Engineer Smith was badly injured but will recover. He was left at Star City. The company sent three doctors at once, but there were no other casualties.

Kidney Cells Destroyed

BY REPEATED ATTACKS OF DISEASE—SURPRISING RESULTS OBTAINED BY USE OF

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Because it is sometimes a slow and lingering malady, people are prone to overlook the destructive tendencies of kidney disease.

They forget that the wasting process brings about a change in the cellular tissue, which practically renders the kidneys useless as filtering organs.

Continued paleness and loss of flesh, pains in the back and loins, dry, harsh skin, severe headaches and backaches; scanty, highly coloured urination, stomach troubles and irregular bowels are among the symptoms of kidney disease.

As a cause of downright suffering few diseases are to be compared with kidney disease, and the results are frequently, the end coming suddenly and unexpected.

By their direct and wonderfully prompt action on the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills call a quick halt to the advance of kidney disease.

By their combined action on kidneys liver and bowels they prove effective in complicated cases, in which ordinary kidney medicines bring little or no relief.

Mrs. H. Trollope, 850 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., states: "I have used two boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and found them an excellent medicine. I had very severe pains across the back which came came from my kidneys being out of order, and since using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for a time, I began to feel a wonderful improvement in my health.

"I have no more pains in my back now and am feeling as well as ever I did. Consequently, I am glad of an opportunity to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have thoroughly proven their genuine and indisputable merit, and you can see them knowing of a certainty that you will receive all the benefit that would be derived from attention of the most skilful physician. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The Substitute

By WILL N. HARBEN,

Author of "Abner Daniel," "The Land of the Changing Sun," "The North Walk Mystery," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by HARPER & BROTHERS

(Commenced Dec. 19)

"Bob," began the merchant, "I believe I'm yore friend an' that I have yore intrust at heart."

"Well, I've always thought you treated me decently, Mr. Hillyer. I was just telling George out there in the car that I could work like a steam engine for a man like you. Mr. Hillyer, I may look like a pretty tough specimen, but I'll give you my word that I am sick and tired of living like I am. That's God's truth."

"What sort o' work do you think you would like, Bob?" Hillyer could not suppress the round note of sympathy that dominated his voice.

"It may seem very silly to you," Bob declared slowly, "but I am just as sure that I could run a business for myself as I am that I'm sitting here talking to you. To make a clean breast of it—for I know you will understand my fix—I was on a trade with A. C. Sandford, up the street, for his grocery store. Sandford's wife has got Indian blood in her an' she's entitled to land in the territory. He wants to move out there and quit here. I've looked into his books an' his trade, an' he's got a good thing—a thing that could be built up till it would pay big. He's got old fogy ways an' hasn't kept up to date, an' I believe money can be made in this town according to late methods. Well, when I heard he was thinking of selling out I had a talk with him. I told him I had no money, but if he'd sell the stock to me on time I'd pay him. Well, that pleased him and his wife, too, for they are anxious to get away, and we even took stock. It invoiced about $2,000, an' he doesn't owe a cent in market, but somehow my father got wind of it, an', Lord, the row he raised over it! He made me go out in the yard an' cut weed all that morning, an' he went down to Sandford and said so much against me that Sandford backed clean out."

Hillyer stared for a moment at George, who was listening, and then he flicked at Bob. "Are you twenty-one?" he asked.

"I was last July, Mr. Hillyer."

"Then you are yore own boss?"

"I reckon I am, as far as age goes," said Bob, with a good natured smile, "but my credit doesn't seem to amount to much."

"Bob"—Hillyer was not looking at him—"you must not lose that chance. It's a good one, and I believe you can run the business. I believe it's in you. You are interested in it, an' that's the chief thing."

"Thank you, Mr. Hillyer. I like to hear you say that, but I don't much blame father. I haven't been living just like he wanted me to, and I have thought seriously of getting away from this town. It's pretty hard to do the right thing surrounded by a gang like I've been in—a crowd that thinks it beneath a fellow to work."

"They wouldn't laugh at you if you were the proprietor o' that grocery," said Hillyer. "Look here, Bob; I've got a lot o' money lent out on a sight wuss security than yore word, an' ef you'll give me yore note for two thousand I'll make the rate o' interest so you kin stand it, an' I'll give you jest as long time as you want to pay it off."

Bob went to the wash pan in the corner of the room and cleansed his hands.

Bob Hanks' eyes were wide open in astonishment. He caught his breath and gazed alternately at George and the merchant.

"Oh, Mr. Hillyer, are you in earnest?" he asked finally.

"So much in earnest that I'm goin' to close this thing inside o' the next ten minutes, 'fore somebody else comes along an' buys Sandford out. George, make out the note, an' when Bob's put his name to it stick it in the safe. I'm goin' uptown an' tell Sandford it's a deal."

"Mr. Hillyer!" Bob cried out as the merchant was leaving the office, but the old man did not look round.

"Let him alone!" said George Buckley to his friend. "If you had lived with him as long as I have you'd know that you are giving him the keenest pleasure he ever had. He believes in you, and so do I, Bob."

Bob Hanks turned around once or twice in an aimless way and then said under his breath, "Well, I'll be blamed!"

CHAPTER X.

THE next morning Kenner came into the office and greeted Hillyer and George with a smile.

"I'll be hanged ef I don't believe Bob Hanks has struck his proper element," he said. "He's turned that old store upside down already. Seed 'im burnin' a half bushel measure o' live cockroaches jest now. Stores all about had to shet their doors, thar was sech a stench. Bob's got his coat off an' up to his neck in business. A feller told me Bob was thar at 5 o'clock to open up an' swept out hisse'f. I sorter call that a good joke on Lib. He's always keepin' his eye peeled for somebody to lend money to an' overlooked his own boy."

Half an hour later Hanks slouched in and sat down in his accustomed place at the stove. Kenner was eying him curiously, a quizzical smile playing on his face. Hanks swung his foot to and fro, his unlighted cigar in his hand, till he caught Hillyer's glance, then he grunted:

"Thought you was powerful smart, didn't you?" he said dryly.

"I don't know as I did," replied Hillyer, flushing a little.

There was silence for a moment, then Hanks said, "Well, you'll see whar yore money's gone ef you'll keep a watch out."

"It'll be gone clean to the Indian Territory as soon as Sandford's packed up his effects."

Hanks grunted again. "You never 'd 'a' done it ef you hadn't 'lowed I'd make it good, but I'll tell you now you'll never git a cent on that dratted note from me."

"I never expect to," said Hillyer, smiling agreeably.

"Oh, that'll do to talk," answered Hanks. "You think, though, that I'd never stand by an' see a body lose by a child o' mine; but this is different. I was fetchin' up that boy accordin' to my lights, an' you come in an' interfered."

"He told me he was twenty-one," said Hillyer, still amused, "and I saw a chance to lend 'im some money. That's all there is to it."

"Oh, well, you kin afford a little loss like that," retorted Hanks, "an' when Bob's run through with the pile I kin show everybody I was right in the stand I tuck with 'im."

As it was a busy hour, nothing more was said on the subject. A ragged farmer in a slouched hat came in to talk to Hanks about mortgaging a mule and a milk cow for his next year's supplies, and Hanks went out to see the mule and hear a minute description of the cow—her age, weight, progeny and habits.

That afternoon, as George and the merchant were closing the warehouse to go to supper, Kenner came along on the way to his boarding house. "They say old Lib's been hangin' round Bob's store all day watchin' 'im like a hawk," he informed them, with a laugh. "He cayn't hide his interest. As soon as Bub ud make a sale the old man ud run up to the cash drawer an' count the change an' ask the cost of the article. He's neglectin' his own matters. I'll swear it's funny. Ef he's talked with one man today he has with forty about Bob's venture. He wanted to find out what folks thinks, an' he's astonished to find so many believe Bob knows what he's a-doin'.

"I seed 'im a-standin' in Bob's door watchin' Bob an' Heneker Brothers biddin' agin one another to buy a load o' mountain chickens. I spoke to Lib, but he jest kept chawin' his tobacco, so much absorbed he didn't hear me. Then we seed the feller start to drive up to Bob's door, an' old Lib clapped his hands together an' said: 'By gum! Bob got 'em!' But he sorter cooled down when the chickens was unloaded an' he heard Bob had bid 15 cents apiece all round. He grabbed Bob as he was passin' an' said, 'Say, don't you think you went too steep on that load?' Bob was purty red, anyway, from lifting at the coops—he was so anxious to get 'em in his shebang—an' he got redder, but he pulled the side o' his face down an' looked to see that the feller couldn't hear, an' said: 'Shh! I've got 'em already sold in Atlanta at 20 cents apiece, an' that galoot's goin' to take his pay in coffee at 18 cents a pound—coffee that cost 10 in New Orleans. Yon see whar I come in, don't you?'

"'You better go it sorter slow at the start,' Lib said, but he was simply tickled to death. I'll swear it was fun to watch 'im! He'd rather see that boy learn how to handle money than for 'im to be elected governor o' this state."

Old Hanks seldom left his home after supper, but that evening he dropped in at Hillyer's, finding the merchant and his wife before a cheerful fire in the sitting room. He came in awkwardly, but his self possession was a thing he always had with him. Kenner had once said that Hanks could sell scrap iron in a pigeon tailed coat and white vest and never realise the oddity of his appearance. His brogan shoes were untied, as if he had started to go to bed and changed his mind.

"I see Bob's got that store to goin'," he said dryly. "I've been sorter watchin' 'im today. I hardly know what to make of 'im."

Hillyer looked knowingly at his smiling wife and replied:

"So he's got opened up, has he?"

"Opened up? I reckon he has; tuck in ninety odd dollars today, an' the Lord only knows what profit he'll average. I don't reckon Bob does, from what I observed, though he ain't losin' so fur."

"Oh, he'll hold Sandford's trade," said Hillyer. "You kin count on that."

"Well, I reckon he will," said Mrs. Hillyer. "I've changed my account to him from Waters & Co. An' why shouldn't I? Do you reckon I'm not goin' to encourage rail enterprise? Jest the minute he told me he was a-goin' to run a free delivery wagon to take orders an' deliver goods twice a day I put my name down. The idee o' them old fogies waitin' for young Bob Hanks to start a free delivery! Why, the minute I told Mrs. Dugal about it she mighty nigh had a spasm, she was so glad. I seed her ag'in jest before supper. She'd been down an' ordered a whole raft o' stuff she didn't need jest to see 'em come up like they do in cities. She's been trampin' from one end o' town to t'other tellin' folks they won't have to make a step either way to git what they want for the table. Bob's boy 'll call the first thing in the mornin' an' write down what's wanted, an' up the stuff comes. He's got some little—have you seed them little books he's givin' away for a body to write orders in? Oh, you have! Well, it's a powerful good idee. Nobody kin dispute the'r account when it's writ in the'r own handwritin'. Mr. Hanks, as shore as yore a-settin' thar, Bob's goin' to succeed."

Hanks looked at the fire. His eye, usually a dead thing, held a twinkle, or was it only the reflection of the flames in the chimney?

"I sorter like his start," he admitted. "I was always afeard o' the influence o' that triflin' set o' boys he was runnin' with, but today Bill Bogle—the wust of the lot—drawed up a chair in front o' the door whar Sandford used to set an' whittle an' started to take a seat, but, bless you, Bob called 'im to taw—told 'im he wasn't a-goin' to have his friends settin' round the front o' the store that a-way—said it didn't look businessike, an' he was goin' to start right an' sorter hew to the line. Then, ag'in, one o' the clerks that Sandford used to let do purty much as he liked was startin' to light a cigar behind the show case, an' Bob yanked 'im up too. 'Cayn't have no smokin' in the house, Jim,' he said politely. 'We sell firecrackers an' gunpowder, an' have to be careful. Besides, it don't look right durin' business hours, an' ef we was to ketch fire an' burn out we'd want to collect our insurance without bein' accused o' carelessness.'"

"Yes," Hillyer said, his amused glance on the face of his wife, "I believe Bob's goin' to do all right. My daddy used to think I was dead lazy bec'se I didn't like to chop sprouts in the middle o' August as well as I did to play ball twice as hard, but the sprouts was his fun an' the ball game mine. This here's Bob's fun, an' the only way to amount to a hill o' beans is to enjoy what yo're at. You think yo're a model business man, Hanks, but thar's as much fun at the job you have as playin' poker with a full hand. You'd go to sleep sellin' supplies on time fer anybody but yoreself, but yo're wide awake as it is. The truth is, you never tried to find out whar Bob's talent lay."

Hanks drew himself up. He had not smiled during his visit, and he rarely made concessions. He did both now rather sheepishly.

"Well, I've come ever to tell you that I'm goin' to take up that note," he said.

"What note is that?"

"Why, the one Bob give you. I reckon I'm able to stand the—the resk as well as you are."

"Well," and Hillyer smiled again at his wife, "I think you've got a lot o' gall to come tell me a thing like that. When did I ever ask you to give up a good loan to me?"

"I think so myself," joined in Mrs. Hillyer, who had caught her husband's drift. "Why, Mr. Hillyer was jest sayin' t'other day that it was mighty nigh impossible to put money out whar it would be safe an' draw any sort o' interest, an' Bob's got a good payin' cash business."

Hanks shrugged his shoulders. His small smile had vanished; he looked shrewd.

"I reckon I'll have to give Bob the money, then, an' tell 'im to pay it off. I don't want 'im to be owin' anybody."

"Oh, that's entirely a different matter," smiled the merchant. "But you kin bet I ain't a-goin' to transfer any note without knowin' how it would suit my customer."

"An' that's nothin' more'n fair," said Mrs. Hillyer as Hanks rose and started to leave.

The next morning at the warehouse Hanks seemed somewhat preoccupied. Presently in a lull in business and conversation he turned to Hillyer. "I—I mentioned that note to Bob this mornin' at breakfast, an' what you reckon he said? Huh!"

"How do I know?" replied the merchant.

Hanks opened the door of the stove, a cigar in his hand, and began to look for a coal of fire. "It sorter flustered 'im, but he finally said that he believed he'd rather not take my offer; that he wanted to sorter work out his own salvation. What do you think o' that?"

Hillyer shook his head, a pleased expression on his face. He made no reply, but Kenner spoke up. "The boy don't intend to ax you no odds, Lib," he said, "an' I glory in his spunk."

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN.

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over forty years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment cures in the privacy of your home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands of bad cases. It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., —take his advice and be well.

Mrs. E. D. Monfort, of Lebanon, Warren Co., O., writes: "I have received the 'Medical Adviser.' A crisp, new five dollar bill could not tempt me to part with it."

On receipt of $1, one-cent stamps, to pay cost of mailing only, we will send to any address a paper-bound copy of Dr. Pierce's great 1000-page book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser." Or, for 50 stamps the same in cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Peculiar Name "ANTI-PILL"

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

The Remedy named Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill is so called to distinguish it from anything and everything else in the way of medicine.

It is like nothing else, and nothing else is like Anti-Pill.

It is the opposite of Pill. It is the successor to ordinary pills, just as the electric car is the successor to the old-time horse car.

Its final results are the opposite of Pill Results.

The use of Pills creates a necessity for their continued use. Take them once and you must keep on taking them. You become a slave to Constipation and Pills.

Anti-Pill accomplishes just as satisfactory immediate results and leaves behind no pill habit, no necessity for further dosing. Anti-Pill makes you free.

Pills—all pills—leaves a resinous residue which dries up the mucous membrane lining of the Stomach and Bowels, creating Chronic Constipation.

Anti-Pill contains nothing of a resinous nature. It acts directly and curatively on the mucous membrane and cures Chronic Constipation.

Anti-Pill positively cures Indigestion, Constipation, Biliousness, Headache and every symptom of stomach or bowel derangement. Read what those who have tried Anti-Pill have to say:—

"Best Medicine on Earth"

"I have used three boxes of Anti-Pill, and I would not be without it, as it does away with salts, senna and mineral water, and you would never know you had taken a thing. No pain of any kind; no trouble at all.

"I have tried almost everything that anybody would tell me about, and all with the same result—No Good—until I used Dr. Leonhardt's Anti-Pill, and I think they are the best medicine on earth. I recommended Anti-Pill to many people, and they have always proved satisfactory.

"GEO. F. MOWAT,
"Winchester, Ont."

"Feel Like a New Woman"

"For the last five years I have been troubled with dizziness in the head, so weak and tired that I could scarcely do my work. I was drowsy after meals, and my food would not digest properly—everything turned sour, causing me great distress after each meal so that I was compelled to eat only certain foods. I tried a small sample of Anti-Pill and found it was doing me good. I continued and there has been a complete change in my whole system. I am now able to do my own work, and I feel like a new woman.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS

Owing to the special nature of our business, which is largely one of trust and confidence in the ability, judgment and honor of the salesman, it is utterly impossible for us to fill our store with salespeople who know nothing about the watch or jewellery business, or of the quality of the goods they are selling. We wish, as a very special favor, to ask the many friends and customers of "Diamond Hall," who wish to look over our stock or make selections for Christmas, to be kind enough to come as early as possible.

HOCKEY.

Never in the history of Peterborough has there been so many hockey teams in the town as is the case this year. Besides the numerous "scrub" teams, such as the Review and other like organizations, there are thirteen clubs playing in leagues, including intermediate and junior O.H.A., Trent Valley, City and Guild Leagues. That's not so bad either.

• • • •

The Executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club will meet to-night at 8 o'clock at the rink.

• • • •

Winchester is playing at rover for Lindsay.

• • • •

The Victorias of Montreal, play the St. Georges in Toronto, on Saturday night.

Remember the Queen's University-Peterborough game here next Wednesday.

• • • •

The juniors go to Belleville on New Years night for the first league game.

• • • •

A number of promising juniors have turned out to practice and the youngsters should meet with better success than was experienced by the septette of last year.

• • • •

The Peterboros expect to have both Wasson and Glover in the game next week. They will strengthen the team very materially.

A WALLET FOR MR. P. ISRAEL

Foreman of Manufacturing Department of Colonial Weaving Co. Remembered.

A Popular Head who was Pesented with Address and Wallet.

A pleasing event took place yesterday noon at the office of the Colonial Weaving Company, when Mr. Peter Israel, the superintendent of the manufacturing department of the company was presented with a handsome wallet, by the members of his staff.

Mr. Israel leaves on Saturday to spend the holidays in Philadelphia and his associates took this opportunity of expressing their appreciation of him. He is exceedingly popular with those under him, and the presentation and address were but recognitions of the esteem in which he is held. The following address was read, and Mr. Israel was made the recipient of a wallet:—

Peterborough, Dec. 21, 1904.

Mr. Peter Israel,
Town.

Dear Sir,—We, the employees of the Manufacturing Department of the Colonial Weaving Company desire at this season of the year to express in some way our appreciation of you.

We have always found you courteous in your instructions to us as well as willing to help us in our work, which was a benefit to both the Company and ourselves. We believe you are leaving to spend Christmas at Philadelphia and before you go we wish you would accept this little gift as a slight token of your many kindnesses.

Trusting your visit will be a very pleasant one, we wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

GEO. STEINMETZ,
R. CLEGG,
A. GILGOUR,
V. BILLINGS.

In responding, Mr. Israel made a brief speech inwhich he referred to the pleasure it had been to him to have been associated with those who had so kindly remembered him in this way. He assured them that he was very grateful to them for their mark of kindness, which he should never forget.

JAP TORPEDO BOATS AMONG TRAWLERS

Boatswain of the Ava Makes This Sworn Statement.

USED BRIBERY AND DRINKS

Russians Reported to Have Bribed Hull Trawlers to Give False Evidence—Underhand Methods Used to Secure Testimony—Attack on the Sevastapol Result in Her Practical Unseaworthiness.

London, Dec. 23.—The publication in St. Petersburg of the statement that the Hull fishermen have voluntarily deposed that foreign torpedo boats were among the trawlers off Dogger Bank when the latter were fired on by ships of the Russian second Pacific squadron probably is a repetition of similar statements recently emanating from Hull and appearing in London papers. These are circumstantial, and it would certainly appear to be true that some men of the game cock fleet have made statements before the Russian Consul.

The name of only one of these has been revealed. He is the boatswain of trawler Ava, and he said yesterday that he was induced to make the statement while intoxicated. He admits that he received money, but now says the statement he made is untrue. All published reports from Hull say positively that these statements were secured by two agents of the Russian Government; but the Russian Embassy in London last night repeated its general denial of Dec. 21 regarding the subject.

Russia's Underhand Methods.

It was pointed out, however, that although Russia had offered a reward for information the Russian Government was not responsible for the course taken by any person desiring to secure the reward. The sensational press of England directly charges the Russian Government with using underhand means, by bribery and intoxicants, to secure false statements from men of the game cock fishing fleet. The Russian Consul at Hull last night said the boatswain of the Ava swore before the commissioner on oath that he saw Japanese torpedo boats with the trawlers. The Consul says he knows other trawlers who are ready to make similar statements, but that they are afraid of the consequences.

Altogether an air of mystery surrounds them there, but no credence is responsible quarters is given to the allegations that unfair methods have been used by Russia.

One explanation emanating from Paris is that two reporters of The Petit Parisien recently visited Hull to interview men of the game cock fleet and secure independent information concerning the Dogger Bank affair, and that they are the ones who figured in the incident.

New Torpedo Boats.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 23.—According to a local paper, a number of English have appeared before the Russian consul in London and have deposed to having seen foreign torpedo boats among the Hull fishing fleet. Their depositions, it is added, will be submitted to the International Commission in Paris, the circumstances under which they were obtained being explained.

Russ Battleship Disabled.

Tokio, Dec. 23.—Admiral Togo reports: "After personal observations outside Port Arthur I find that the Sevastopol, which was attacked by our torpedo flotilla, is now anchored in the shallows about 400 yards from the shore of Chengtao Mountain. The Russians are engaged in pumping, but the Sevastopol is listing at least 10 degrees with her bow slightly sunk. There can be no hope of restoring the vessel to fighting trim, considering the present condition of Port Arthur, and I judge that she has been completely disabled. I also observed that the enemy's destroyer, which was torpedoed by us has been destroyed."

An Improbable Story.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 23.—General Kuropatkin has telegraphed to the general staff that he has received a report from Chinese sources to the effect that the Russians have recaptured 203-Metre Hill at Port Arthur with the guns mounted by the Japanese. Kuropatkin's despatch, which is dated Dec. 21, also reports further reconnaissances of both the Russians and Japanese, but says they were not productive of important results.

Jap Progress.

Tokio, Dec. 23.—A despatch received by telegram yesterday from the Japanese army before Port Arthur says:

"The right column of the army at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, taking advantage of the enemy's excitement, drove the enemy off an eminence north of Housanyentao on Pigeon Bay, and occupied the position, and at 7 o'clock dislodged the enemy from a height on the peninsula west of Housanyentao, which we occupied, capturing one small gun. After the Japanese occupation of the positions the enemy made a counter attack, but was immediately repulsed. At present our occupation of the position is practically secure."

Escape in Snow Storm.

London, Dec. 23.—The Daily Telegraph's Che Foo correspondent reports that eight torpedo destroyers have escaped from Port Arthur, where for the last twenty-four hours he says a severe snowstorm has been raging.

Japs Lose 20,000 By Sickness.

Mukden, Dec. 23.—The Japanese are reported to be suffering severely from cold and sickness in the vicinity of Palasandzia and Shilkihe, where it is said they lost 20,000 men in a single week.

Jap Boats Move.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 23.—The announcement that four Japanese cruisers and 12 torpedo boats are proceeding west from Singapore is received here with much interest.

THIS WOULD FINISH WAR.

New Cannon That Would Sink Every Ship Tested By France.

Paris, Dec. 23.—Great interest has been caused here by recent experiments with a new cannon, a secret invention. The new cannon has a calibre of 9½ inches, firing a projectile weighing 359 pounds. The principal merit of the invention is its extreme simplicity of mechanism. Three men can operate it; one to sight and one to attend the breech, while the duties of the third are a secret depending upon the invention.

The shell fired has a muzzle velocity of 500 metres (1,640 feet) a second and produces a whistling noise heard a mile and a half away.

So powerful is the force of the shot, it is said, that no ship of any navy would be able to withstand it.

Apple Trade Falls.

London, Dec. 23.—(C. A. P.)—The abundant home crop has somewhat seriously affected Canada in the Christmas trade in apples, which falls considerably short of last year. The result has been, however, that the Canadian fruit is of finer quality than in previous years.

Badly Injured By Falls.

Toronto, Dec. 23.—John Kelly, painter, working on the Goulding Building, on Wellington street, was laying a plank over an open staircase yesterday when he lost his balance and plunged through the opening, falling on the ground, feet below. Several ribs were fractured, the broken ends of which pierced the pleural cavity. He was in a semi-conscious condition when taken to the Emergency Hospital, and was suffering severely from the shock. He has only a fighting chance for his life.

Joseph Scholay, 344 Berkeley street, fell through a trap door in a planing mill at 198 Ontario street. His spine was injured. He was taken home in the ambulance.

Found Crazed in Woods.

Sault Ste. Marie, Dec. 23.—Wednesday a man was found wandering in the woods about three miles from here in a crazed condition, suffering from cold and hunger. His name is supposed to be Griggs, but nothing can be learned as to where he came from or who his relatives are. About a year ago he went into the woods 25 miles and built a log cabin and lived on what he could kill and dig from the ground. He has been taken to the hospital.

GIRL SHOT BY HER BROTHER.

Miss Miller, of New Carlow Accidentally Killed.

Bullet From her Brother's Gun Entered Her Breast Killing Her.

Miss Bertha Miller, daughter of Ernest Miller, of New Carlow, was accidentally shot and almost instantly killed last Sunday. Her brother Max was handling his rifle after having, as he supposed, emptied the magazine, but one cartridge had remained and was discharged. The bullet entered his sister's breast and passed out at her back. The deceased was about 24 years of age and much respected. The mother also had a narrow escape, the bullet passing through her arm and inflicting a nasty flesh wound.—Tweed News.

ORDERED TO RETURN MONEY

Interesting Case Connected with the Canada Woollen Mills.

A despatch from Toronto gives some interesting information with reference to the Canada Woollen Mills, Limited, of which until recently Mr. Jas. Kendry was manager. It says:

Mr. George Davidson, the liquidator of the Canada Woollen Mills, Limited, was ordered to-day by a judgment of the Master in Chambers, personally to pay to the court the amount of $10,000, the amount of a cheque which he had illegally returned to George F. Benson, of Montreal.

The latter had offered $375,000 for the assets of the Canada Woollen Mills putting up a cheque for $10,000 as a guarantee.

The inspectors of the estate did not accept the offer, deciding to put the property up at auction, so the liquidator returned the cheque.

The court, however, held that the offer made by Benson was still binding on him, and that Davidson as an officer of the court had no right to return the cheque without authority.

Davidson has 16 days within which to return the money.

Davidson is under a $10,000 bond, but will appeal from the judgment.

JAPANESE LOSSES IN WARM SKIRMISHES

Two were Killed and Several Taken Prisoners—Suffering From Cold.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 23.—Gen Kuropatkin reports that during skirmishes on Dec. 21, two Japanese were killed and several taken prisoners. These captured were poorly dressed and ill; protested from the cold. The life of one of the prisoners was saved by amputating his leg which had been frost bitten. Kuropatkin adds that warm clothing and boots have been distributed to the Russian troops.

CO-OPERATIVE FRUIT SHIPPING.

What co-operation has done for the dairy industry in Canada bids fair to be repeatd in the development of fruit growing. The principle is not new, even as applied to fruit culture, a number of co-operative associations having been in successful operation in Ontario for years to a small way. But it is only within recent times that the substantial advantages of co-operation have come to be generally understood and appreciated, and there is much to be gained by a full and free discussion of the principle.

Briefly, co-operation means that a number of farmers within a convenient radius combine and ship the product of their orchards to a central packing house, where experienced graders and packers sort, pack and market the fruit, the proceeds from sales being subsequently divided among the members of the co-operative association according to quantity and quality of the fruit offered. The advantages of such a system are at once manifest. It is a recognized fact that the market value of fruit depends nowadays quite as much on proper packing as on the quality of fruit offered. The farmer with a small orchard finds it difficult properly to sort and grade his own crop, because he has not enough to enable him to classify it as he should do. On the other hand if he should "pool" his crop with a number of neighbouring farmers the total offerings would permit of strict grading and proper packing by experts. Better results would follow also from the marketing of fruit. Left to himself, the farmer fruit grower is left very much at the mercy of railways, commission men and packers. Co operation makes quantities, and in demanding better freight rates and better accommodation from transportation companies, quantity naturally is an important factor. From one small village station in Quebec 35,000 barrels of apples were shipped last season. It is reasonable to suppose that had these 35,000 barrels been at the disposal of one man, say the manager of a co-operative association, better freight terms might have been obtained than would be obtainable of members of shippers, each with a few hundred or thousand barrels. The manager of a co-operative packing house, having facilities for storing fruit, having exceptional means of studying the needs of markets, is enabled to choose the best time for marketing the different varieties, with the result that better prices are obtained.

These are the chief advantages, but there are many smaller points in favour of co-operation. A co-operative association in Ontario, by buying barrels in quantity in a knock-down condition was enabled to effect a saving of from fourteen to seventeen cents per barrel, an item of no mean importance in a season such as we have just passed through, when apples were plenty and consequently cheap. In this province, where fruit growing has not reached its full development, beginners might find it of advantage to co-operate in the purchase of suitable trees at lowest prices; uniform methods of orchard management might be adopted in order to ensure uniform quality of fruit; an effective and systematic spraying might be secured by means of co-operative power outfits serving a neighbourhood in the same manner as the threshing machine; cheaper supplies and chemicals might be procured.

The efficient well-directed efforts of the Department of Agriculture, which have placed the Canadian dairy industry in the lead of the world, should amply justify similar expenditure on the part of the Government in developing the co-operative principle of fruit culture and shipping. Without intelligent co-operation the fruit industry will always be attended by unnecessary losses.

GALWAY COUNCIL EXPRESS REGRET

Resolution Passed Regretting Retirement of Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Statutory Meeting of Galway Township Council—Accounts Paid.

Special to the Examiner

Galway, Dec. 18.—Council met with Messrs. J. Clark, H. Beckett, D. Curlin, W. Hunter, and Chas. Coben, present and the reeve in the chair.

Moved by Messrs. W. Hunter and D. Curlin, the minutes of last meeting be read and confirmed.

Moved by Messrs. H. Beckett and J. Clark, that County Treasurer be instructed to accept the sum of $15.00 as payment in full for arrears of taxes against part lot 42, concession A., Galway, known as the Betts lot and the clerk is hereby authorized to forward a copy of this resolution to the County Treasurer, asking him to accept said amount from John Dunbarr as payment in full.

Moved by Messrs. D. Curtis and H. Beckett that polling Division No. 1, be held in the house of Mrs. John McGee, and polling Division No. 2 be held at the house of Mr. John Jackson and that Mr. Jackson be D. R. O. and that the corporate seal be attached to this resolution to give it the force of a by-law.

Moved by Messrs D. Curtis and J. Clark that Wm. Dudman be refunded $3.40 over charge in taxes.

Moved, seconded and resolved that the Municipal Council of the Township of Galway and Cavendish, take this opportunity of expressing their deep regret at having learned of the retirement of the Hon. J. R. Stratton from his office as Provincial Secretary and that he has also ceased to be the representative of West Peterborough. Mr. Stratton has done more for his constituency during his term in the Legislature than any other member has ever done. This council feels that no member could have done more and done it so cheerfully as the Hon. Mr. Stratton has done and that there is no part of the constituency of West Peterborough that will feel more the loss of so able a representative as Galway and Cavendish.

Moved by Messrs. Wm. Hunter and H. Beckett, that the following accounts be paid and orders drawn on treasurer for the same.

Healthy and Vigorous

Mr. John Shelton, the well-known bridge builder of 101 Sherwood street, Ottawa, states:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Pills for kidney and liver derangements brought on by exposure, and find them better than any pill or medicine I ever used. They cleansed my system and made me feel healthy and vigorous, and better in every way."

PETERBOROUGH BOY'S SUCCESS.

Mr. Frank Lush, Formerly of This Town in the West.

Editor of Deloraine Advertiser—Some Interesting Facts With Reference to the New Country.

The Deloraine, Man., Advertiser is edited by a former Peterborough boy, Mr. Frank Lush, a nephew of Mr. N. Lush, of town, and in a recent issue a biographical sketch of the editor is given, and some interesting facts chronicled, not the least of these being the fact that the subject of the sketch received his first newspaper experience in the Examiner office.

The Advertiser says:—

Mr. Lush is an Englishman by birth, but knows nothing of the land of his nativity, for he was brought out to Canada at the age of three. The family home was at Shaftsbury—the seat of the late Earl of that name—in Dorsetshire, and from this home two of his uncles had previously emigrated to Canada. They had located at Peterborough, Ont, and thither the Lush family moved on coming to the Dominion. At this town young Lush received his education, and after a course at the business college at the age of eighteen, entered the job department of the Peterborough Examiner, of which the Hon. J. R. Stratton is proprietor. After spending five years in this office, he went into business for himself, buying out the print shop of Harper & Co. He had been so engaged for a year when the offer of Napinka citizens determined him to come west.

Mr. Lush is yet a young man, being less than thirty years old. He seems destined to succeed in other enterprises in addition to his chosen business of newspaper work, for he has recently gone into other lines of activity, and with excellent prospects. Among his townsmen he is respected and deservedly popular, and his career, alike as a journalist, a business man and a representative citizen seems full of promise.

Mr. Lush had come west in May, 1898, and up to the time of his locating in Deloraine he had had an uphill fight against fortune. He had come out from Ontario at the invitation of some citizens of Napinka, who wanted that place to have its own local paper. Whether or not they misrepresented to Mr. Lush the size of their town, and overstated the measure of support they were prepared to accord the venture, or whether, with characteristic western optimism, they depicted the business prospects of a local newspaper in the light of their own roseate visions of the town's future, cannot now be said. But it is certain that Mr. Lush, who had packed up and brought West his printing plant from Peterborough, Ont., to Napinka, was not favourably impressed with the outlook. To one accustomed to the larger centres at which papers are published in the East the idea of starting a paper at so small a place seemed doubtless preposterous. Nevertheless, Mr. Lush gave the proposition a fair trial. The Napinka Gazette made its appearance in due course, and for eleven months it struggled against adverse fortune. It was an eight-page paper, four of which were printed at home. But, after some months of experiment, Mr. Lush found that the proposition would not go, and he was forced to seek fresh fields and pastures new. Encouraging offers had been made by some prominent citizens of Deloraine, and thither Mr. Lush moved his plant and with new hopes, issued in March, 1899, the first number of the Deloraine Advertiser.

Against the keen competition of the long established Times, the Advertiser won its way slowly. But with each succeeding season its success was more pronounced, and to-day it is acknowledged as one of the best representatives of the local press of the province. Typographically it is one of the best looking sheets of the West, for Mr. Lush's long service in the mechanical branch of "the art preservative" has made him critical and exacting on that score. Its local news is covered adequately, the matter being written with brightness and vim.

OUT OF WORK TOOK POISON

Sad Fate of a New York Clerk Who Committed Suicide.

Wife and Six Children, no Work with Which to Support Them, Drives a Man to Suicide.

One of the most awful and pitiable incidents reported in a long time, occurred in New York last week. A poor clerk named Corcoran, was thrown out of work through illness, and at the end of three weeks found himself with all his little savings exhausted and his wife and six children in want of food. Essaying to get a day's work at snow-shovelling, he was so weak from illness that he had to abandon the attempt after an hour's trail. After trudging wearily over the city in search of employment he returned at night to find his wife and babies without food and a notice to quit on the door of his house. He again left the house saying he would be back soon with better news, but after remaining out for the night, he returned in the morning and poisoned himself with carbolic acid in the presence of his family, despite his wife's efforts to wrest the bottle from his grasp. Surely, surely, if there is not, there ought to be some way of saving a man from such despair as would lead to a scene like that. What a bitter, bitter commentary upon the extravagance, frivolity and selfish waste all around him, this poor clerk tramping the streets in search of work to give food to his starving little ones, and then meekly committing suicide, when his efforts proved all in vain.—Christian Guardian.

ARE ALARMED AT EMIGRATION

Minnesota Will Take Steps to Stop it.

More and More American Farmers Leave for Canadian Northwest Every Year.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 21.—Realizing that year by year more and more American farmers cross the border and take up land in the Northwest of Canada, the State Legislature of Minnesota, will make a determined effort to frustrate this, and to show the hundreds who yearly emigrate from this State that they can obtain land under as good conditions here as across the line.

The question, after considerable agitation, is being strongly entered into by A. L. Cole, member-elect for the local legislature, and he has declared positively that he will do his utmost to stem the tide of this emigration. "The only relief we can get in this irritating question is to organize an immigration board," said he. "This will counteract the influences of the Canadian immigration office in this city, representatives of which meet the land seekers' trains coming from the south to this state, and urge the foreigners of large communities to continue their journey into Canada. That will gain our end to a certain degree, but will be far from absolute in persuading our farmers to stay right here in this state, or on this side of the line at least. There are in Minnesota some 2,000,000 acres of swamp lands. At the next session of the Legislature I will bring up the matter of draining all these lands, and then selling them to men who will put them under cultivation at once. We will absolutely refuse to sell to speculators, and will have to have guarantees from purchasers that they will take up residence on the lands at once. I can tell you, however, that this scheme is only the beginning of an effort that will be made by this country to turn back the tide of emigration that each year flows with increased current over Canada's borders."

During the last three years the emigration from this country into Manitoba and the Canadian Northwest generally has increased with alarming rapidity. The Canadian Government has been particularly active in its efforts to advertise that country among the farmers of the border states and that it has been successful is apparent from the official returns. Besides this, Canadian land companies have shown wonderful enterprise in their methods of taking American settlers over their lands. This has all resulted very disastrously for the United States, and Uncle Sam has been forced to look on with ever increasing alarm. The thing has reached such proportions now that politicians are determined to stop it, or to do all in their power in that direction. It is believed that plans are being made for a huge campaign that will begin with the coming winter.

SALVATION ARMY BAND FUND

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In last night's edition of the Examiner, I noticed a communication, signed "Onlooker", referring to my position in the Band Fund difficulty, and asking me to come forward and make a public statement regarding my position in the matter, and also my opinion of the case. Now to do this, I, in the first place, must say, that "Onlooker" was slightly informed wrong as to my present position, for I think the public would in infer from his statement that I had altogether changed my views; and that I had found out that I was wrong from the start, in working along with our late treasurer. Now, while these monies were being collected for the Band Fund, I was commissioned Corps Secretary, and held that position until I sent in my resignation, for the reason, that I could not conscientiously pass through my cash book the statements rendered as being complete; and I also felt it was not duty as well as the treasurers to see that a full and complete statement was rendered our public citizens of the town who contributed so well towards this fund, as I felt they would naturally look to the financial officers of the Corps to see that was done. I also feel still if that was done that it would clear the matter up and bring satisfaction to all concerned, and I do not think my fellow citizens would cease contributing towards the same. I never doubted from the start for one moment, but that the money was used for the purpose it was collected for, and some time ago, after our present officer had taken charge, in an interview with him about the matter, he stated to me that he had examined the books and accounts, and had found them all in proper shape at that time, as far as he could see; and I, believing him to be, as I still believe, an upright and honourable man, took his word for it and said that I was satisfied and did not wish to carry the matter any further but did not give him or anyone else to understand that I was satisfied that they were in proper shape at the commencement of this trouble; but I thought if they were in proper shape now it was better to let the matter drop than to have it go into the press, a controversy in which I believe always does harm to any organization, and especially to a religious one. I made the remark more than once that I was sorry for being connected with the case, not because I felt I had done wrong, for I believe that what the treasurer and myself were contending for was right and proper, both for the interests of the Salvation Army and our fellow citizens. I also want it understood that I am not at the present time working in conjunction with Mr. Butcher, and I do not wish to carry on any more correspondence in the public press nor have my name used. Now, Mr. Editor, I hope that this statement as to my present position, personally, will be satisfactory to all; and it is my earnest desire that if the public citizens of the town are not satisfied that the proper ones will see to it that they get their rights and settle the whole matter.

Hoping you will allow me space in your columns.

Yours truly,

THOS. A. LANG.

Christmas Cards.

The first Christmas card ever published was issued in 1843 by a Londoner named Joseph Crandall. Crandall was indebted for his idea to Sir Henry Cole and employed the famous artist J. C. Horsley to make the design. It was lithographed by Jobbins of Warwick court and colored by hand. About 1,000 cards were sold. Such was the small beginning of what has grown to be a gigantic industry. Every Christmas after 1846 cards of some sort were put upon the market, but it was not until 1862 that they came into general favor. Then Goodall & Son of London began to publish cards inscribed simply with the words "A Merry Christmas" and "A Happy New Year" and in illuminated form, and the following year robins, holly branches, embossed figures and landscapes were added. With the succeeding years the popularity of the holiday cards increased, and the cards grew more elaborate until they have attained their present gorgeousness.

UNION OF CHURCHES

Efforts in That Direction Are Still to Be Continued.

PROGRESS WITH CAUTION

Joint Church Conference Appoints Sub-Committees—The Five Salient Problems Will Be Dealt With—The Denominational Recommendations—Official Report of Proceedings—Personnel of Committees.

Toronto, Dec. 23.—"It was universally recognized in the joint committee that a question so important and far-reaching in its results was not one to be unduly hurried, that a union of the churches, to be real and lasting, must carry the consent of the entire membership and that no final step could be taken until ample opportunity had been given to consider the whole question in the courts of the various churches and by the people generally."

Such is the concluding paragraph of the official statement issued last evening concerning the proceedings of the joint church union committee, which on Wednesday and Thursday considered the question.

With the appointment of five sub-committees on doctrine, polity, administration, ministerial training and law, the question will rest for a time.

"It shall be understood," says the statement, "that the committees above named will not be engaged at present in preparing a basis of union, but will meet together for further conference, to exchange views and ascertain whether it be practicable to reach a common basis that might hereafter be submitted to the churches concerned. In the meantime, a statement giving the history of the movement up to the present time and the action thus far of the joint committee, will be prepared and printed and a copy sent to each minister of the negotiating bodies, so that the churches may be kept informed of every step that has been taken."

Denominational Recommendations.

When the joint committee reassembled yesterday morning, the section of the separate sections of the preceding evening was reported. The committee of the Presbyterian Church reported their action as follows: "The committee, in view of the statements made at the conference by the representatives of the Methodist and Congregational Churches, deem it desirable to proceed to the appointment of the sub-committees referred to in their resolution of last night, and recommend to the joint committee that there should be five sub-committees to deal respectively with the subjects of doctrine, polity, administration, ministerial training and law."

The report of the Methodist committee was as follows: "The union committee of the Methodist Church, having had joint consultation with the committees of the Presbyterian and Congregational Churches, and having met in separate session, would report to the joint committee of the three churches as follows: "First, that we are of the opinion that while difficulties may present themselves to all of the churches there does not appear at present any insuperable barrier to the union of churches as suggested and promoted by our general conference; second, that, therefore, it is desirable under the direction of the joint committee that special committees be appointed on the various subjects that must be considered in this important movement."

An Executive Committee.

The report from the Congregational Committee was as follows: "The Congregational Committee beg to report that in view of the fact that the Congregational Union of Ontario and Quebec and that of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have passed a resolution in favor of the desirability and practicability of organic union, we are prepared to go forward in the effort to find a suitable basis of union, and would recommend that the consideration of the principles of the basis of union should first be committed to a central committee."

It was decided to appoint a small committee, consisting of a minister and layman from each of the three churches, to retire at once and draw up a list of sub-committees, assigning to each the topics that should be discussed by it and determining the number of members of which it should be composed. After some discussion, it was resolved to appoint a central or executive committee, to communicate with the sub-committees, to assign any subjects that may not have been specially assigned and generally to act for this joint committee between its sessions, this executive committee to consist of the chairman of the three union committees of the negotiating churches, the three secretaries of this joint committee and the chairman of the sub-committees appointed.

The Sub-Committees.

The following report of the committee appointed to draw up a list of sub-committees was then presented and adopted:

1. That the number of sub-committees be five, and that the subjects alloted to them be as follows:

(a) Doctrine.

(b) Polity. Under this head are to be embraced the organization and Government of the church; conditions of church members and rights and duties of members; ordinances of the church, including means of grace and forms of worship and the relation of Sabbath schools and young people's societies to the church.

(c) The ministry. This topic is to embrace the training for the ministry; the pastoral office, including period of service; the rights and privileges of ministers and their relation to the doctrines of the church.

(d) Administration. This shall include all the missionary, educational, benevolent, publishing and other agencies of the church.

(e) Law. Under this head will be included titles to church property, general and local, and legislation.

2. That the three churches be represented on each of the sub-committees in the proportion of two Methodist, two Presbyterian and one Congregationalist.

3. That each of these sub-committees on doctrine, polity, the ministry and administration be composed of 40 members (16 Methodist, 16 Presbyterians and 8 Congregationalists) and that the sub-committees on law consist of 15 members (six Methodists, six Presbyterians and three Congregationalists).

Boyd Case Adjourned.

London, Dec. 23.—William Boyd and Hugh Stephenson, alleged confidence men, will in all probability have to remain in jail for another week at least. In the police court yesterday morning an effort was made to secure bail, but the magistrate declined to alter the order made last week without the consent of the Crown Attorney. The latter's agreement to the proposal was not forthcoming and Ed. Meredith, K.C., had to accept the inevitable. The case was adjourned for a week.

Britain's Exports and Imports.

London, Dec. 23.—The Board of Trade returns reveal that British commerce in November made a startling record.

The imports amounted to £50,670,846; the exports of British goods to £26,113,288, and the exports of imported goods to £5,718,065.

The total for November is thus £82,497,000, which is at the rate of £989,964,000, or nearly £1,000,000,000 per annum.

G. & N. W. Railway.

Ottawa, Dec. 23.—The Ottawa and New York Railway was disposed of yesterday morning at sheriff's sale in St. Regis for one million dollars to a committee of the bondholders, most of whom are on the directorate of the New York Central Railway.

Died Aged 104.

Grand Valley, Dec. 23.—John Small died here yesterday, aged 104. He was born in Antrim, Ireland, Aug. 7, in 1800. He came to the township of Erin 75 years ago. He was the oldest Conservative who voted in the recent elections.

Died At Peterboro.

Peterboro, Dec. 22.—Thos. Smith, of Havelock, who was injured in the C.P.R. yards, sustaining a comminuted fracture of his left leg, died in Nicholl's Hospital yesterday. He was 21 years old, and a son of Conductor Smith of the C.P.R.

Permanent Cure for Bronchitis.

"My second daughter was troubled with bronchitis from the age of three weeks. Oftentimes I thought she would choke to death. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine brought relief, and further treatment made a thorough cure. This treatment used to come back from time to time but now the cure is permanent." — Mrs. Richmond Withrow, Shubenacadie, Hants Co., N. S.

Convicted As Accomplice.

Toronto, Dec. 23.—Charles E. Higgins, who has been on trial in the sessions before Judge Morgan for three days, was found guilty by the jury of being an accomplice of "the mysterious Mr. Quigley." The jury evidently meant by the verdict that while "Quigley," an employe of the Thiel Detective Agency, working in the interests of the Molson's Bank, laid the trap for Higgins, that Higgins showed his willingness to continue in his career of crime by going into the counterfeiting game, after his release from penitentiary.

Frank Slattery, Higgins' counsel, will take the matter before the Court of Appeal, claiming that the verdict is illegal in that the Crown has all along concealed the identity of Quigley and even hinted that such a person had never existed, at any rate has declined all requests to produce him as a witness.

WHITNEY'S ANSWER

To Premier Ross' Speech Made Thursday Night at Napanee.

GAMEY WILL NOT BE MINISTER OF MINES

New Opposition Leader Would Distribute Public Accounts—Punishment For Campaign Fund Contributors—Mr. Whitney Would Not Reduce Sessional Indemnity—Three Other Speakers.

Napanne, Dec. 23.—A general endorsation of Gamey, coupled with a vague declaration that he would not be made the Conservative Minister of Mines, marked the speech of Mr. J. P. Whitney in opening his campaign here last night, following in the footsteps of Premier Ross. The meeting was a little lukewarm, and during the two hours which the Opposition leader's speech occupied in delivery there were not many outbursts of applause. There was much of the old ground covered, and there were many of the familiar phrases of declamation, so familiar, in fact, that they seemed to have little effect. In other ways the speech had its bright spots, was certainly full of variety, and included a declaration in favor of "severe punishment for any man who gives an unusually large amount to any campaign fund." Mr. Whitney would also put copies of the public accounts in all schools and churches, or wherever they would do most good. These new ideas Mr. Whitney received in inspiration from a list of questions which he said had been submitted to him. To one of these he would not assent. That was to reduce the sessional indemnity. This he refused, on the ground that the laborer was worthy of his hire. The references to Gamey were scattered, but the more direct statement was prompted when he said he had never thought of making Gamey Minister of Mines, he added that he was not engaged in making a Cabinet but in smashing one. However, the Minister of Mines would come from New Ontario, and the other side would be surprised to learn who would be the man. Mr. Whitney repeated his statements as to receiving three offers to join a coalition Government, and regarded this, together with his endorsation by 7,000 majority in 1902, as sufficient justification of his ability and his character for his present request to turn out the Government. The meeting was also addressed by Mr. T. G. Carscallen, Conservative candidate; Mr. W. J. Hanna of Sarnia, and Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, who has returned for the time being to the Conservative ranks. The meeting was lengthy, not concluding until a quarter to 12. Mr. Whitney has not arranged any further dates, but will go to Toronto to-day on that errand.

Mr. McWilliam's Country Meetings Will be Held Next Week.

To-morrow night the regular weekly rally in the interests of Mr. R. F. McWilliams, the Liberal candidate in West Peterborough, will be held in the Committee Rooms on Simcoe street. At to-morrow night's meeting the addresses will be given by some of the workers, and the meeting will be short on account of it being Christmas eve.

Mr. McWilliams' campaign is progressing most satisfactorily, and he is meeting with splendid encouragement in his canvass.

On Tuesday night the town committees, which are now fully organised, will meet and complete work as far as possible, and on the same day the first out of town meeting will be held. In the evening a meeting will be held at Bensfort, South Monaghan, and at Centreville on Wednesday. At these meetings addresses will be delivered by the candidate. Then on Thursday afternoon he will go to North Harvey and will hold a meeting at Simpson's School House at 3 p.m. In the evening a meeting will be held at Ventress' School House. On Friday two meetings will be held, that of the afternoon at Taylor's School House, and in the evening at Lakehurst. At these four meetings it is expected that Hon. J. R. Stratton will speak, in addition to the candidate.

A PRESENTATION.

Mr. Thos. Helson Honoured by the Employes of Matthews Company.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Thos. Helston, foreman of the Geo. Matthews Co., Limited, was presented with an address, accompanied by a handsome umbrella and a tobacco case and pipes, by the employees of the cutting department. The address, which was read by Mr. A. Clement, expressed a pleasing sentiment the appreciation of the employees for their superintendent, and of the esteem in which he was held by them. Mr. Helston responded in a neat speech, thanking the employees for their very kind remembrance, and referring to the kindly feeling existing between himself and the employees, all of whom were working for the best interests of the firm.

Of these two will be elected. Mr. Dennis Moloney and Mr. H. A. Moore are the retiring members, and no doubt Mr. Moloney will be elected again, with one of the two Dummer men. Both have had some municipal experience, and would no doubt serve their division well, if elected.

PETERBORO' MAN MARRIED HERE

Mr. A. E. Scott who Left Here 12 Years ago Wedded.

Miss Emma Therese Howden the Bride A Quiet but Pretty Wedding.

A quiet home wedding took place last night at the residence of Mrs. Robert Howden, 678 Bethune street, when her youngest daughter, Emma Therese, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert Edward Scott, of Winnipeg, senior member of the firm of Scott and Bathgate, wholesale commission merchants and manufacturing agents, of that city.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Torrance, of St. Paul's church, in the presence of only the members of the bride's family. The bride and groom were unattended, and the former was dressed in an exquisite gown of castor broad cloth, trimmed with light green broad cloth and applique, and hat to match.

After the wedding, a dainty dejeuner was served in the drawing room, and Mr. and Mrs. Scott left on the midnight train for Montreal, from where after spending a few days they will go to Toronto, and home to Winnipeg by way of Chicago and St. Paul.

Mr. Scott will be remembered by many persons in town, he was at one time a teacher in the Central School ,and later was a member of the local staff of the Sun Life Assurance Co., in the capacity of accountant, in Mr. Hill's office. He left here twelve years ago for Winnipeg.

At the time of going to press the funeral arrangements had not been completed, but the funeral will in all probability take place from the family residence on Sunday afternoon.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

Young Man Charged with Stealing—One Month for Vagrancy.

At the police court this morning, James Cain was charged with stealing a woollen rug from Smith Milburn on November 19th. He pleaded not guilty to the charge, and was remanded until next Tuesday.

Once again, or for the 'steenth time, Frank Meehan, whose name has appeared in these columns before, was seated in the prisoner's box, trying to look innocent. The charge against him was once more that of vagrancy. Frank wanted to know what constituted a vag. The Magistrate said a vagrant was one who was idle, and had no money, and no place of abode. The prisoner dived down deep into his trousers' pockets, and produced some coin, which, upon being counted, amounted to 70 cents. "I'm no vag, with that money !" he said. He asked for fair justice, and that the full extent of the law might not be meted out to him. But he had made the same request before, and the Chief read the record of his visits to the prisoner's box. He was sent to jail for one month at hard labour, with the promise of a reward of six months in the Central Prison should he again appear on the same charge after serving his month. Frank thought he would have no desire to call again.

CONDUCTOR STOPPED RUNAWAY HORSE

Stopped his Street Car and Did Likewise to Frightened Horse.

Street cars are sometimes the cause of a runaway but it is seldom that they are the means of preventing damage being done by runaway horses. But had the street cars not been running on Charlotte street at noon to-day, serious loss might have resulted from a runaway which occurred about 12.30 o'clock. A horse and sleigh, the property of a resident of Auburn were standing at the Grand Trunk station when the horse took fright at a passing train and dashed down Charlotte street. No. 11 street car was going westward at the time and was in charge of Conductor Harry Bradburn. Upon noticing the runaway horse advancing the conductor had the car stopped and leaving the car, succeeded in bringing the frightened horse to a standstill in front of the White House. There were a number of persons and vehicles at the corner of George and Charlotte street at the time, and had the horse not been brought to a standstill when it was the results might have been serious.

Fill the Little Stockings !

Make the boys and girls happy! Merry Christmas is coming, and coming right quick. The children are dreaming all night of St. Nick. The old folks delighted, and feeling quite young, as when they their own little red stockings hung, are plotting and planning, and hiding with stealth, queer parcels that come from Hawley's sweet shelf. What a charming store it is! So much to see! So much to select from! Very fine bon-bons, creams and chocolates, mixed candies, sugar toys, sugar animals, dogs, cats ,etc., and a great string of fancy sugar canes. Peep in at the enchanting window—it's a sight to see! Cakes galore! Our orange cake is a special favourite. H. E. Hawley & Son, Confectionery and Lunch Parlours George street. 4

ROBBERY IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

Little Daughter of Mr. J. A. Fife Robbed.

Boy Snatched Chatelaine From Her Hand While Waiting for Street Car.

The Examiner has learned of a theft perpetrated by a boy not more than 12 or 13 years old, which, if it indicates that the criminal instincts of the boys of this age are represented by the boy in question, augurs ill for the future of this land.

Marion Fife the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. J. A. Fife, of the Collegiate Institute, was standing at the corner of Argyle and Water streets, on Thursday afternoon waiting for a street car, and a boy came up behind her, snatched her Chatelaine bag from her hand, and ran with it. The little girl did not get an opportunity of seeing the boy's face so that she could not recognize him again, and it is doubtful if the property will be returned, but the incident may serve to call attention to the fact that there are some extraordinary bad boys in Peterborough, and the sooner they are discovered and punished as their actions deserve, the sooner will the morals of the youth of the town have an opportunity of improving. That such an occurrance as this should have taken place in broad daylight on a street frequented like Water street, is a monstrous thing, and demands the utmost efforts to apprehend the guilty one and punish him.

WINNIPEG GREAT METROPOLIS.

Has Doubled its Population in Last 12 Years.

An Interesting Interview, with Mr. A. E. Scott, of Winnipeg.

Mr. A. E. Scott, who yesterday figured prominently in an interesting social event, was interviewed by the Examiner, and gave some exceedingly interesting information about the great Canadian West.

Mr. Scott left here twelve years ago for Winnipeg, after he had lived here a number of years, first teaching school in the Central School, and later being employed on the staff of the Sun Life Company.

Mr. Scott left here to represent the Laing Manufacturing Company, of Montreal, biscuit manufacturers, in Winnipeg, and about seven years ago he entered his present business connections, and formed the firm of Scott and Bathgate, of which he is the senior member. The firm engages in the business of wholesale commission merchants, and manufacturing agents.

The firm has been most successful since its inception, and is now considered one of the most prosperous business houses in the great city of Winnipeg.

Mr. Scott gives some exceedingly significant facts with reference to the tremendous growth of the western metropolis.

In the twelve years during which Mr. Scott has been in Winnipeg he has seen the population of that city double in size, and he is very optimistic as to the future of Winnipeg. He states that it is becoming a great wholesale centre, all the important houses in the east having warehouses in Winnipeg, and it is not uncommon to see the branch in Winnipeg surpass in size that of the original business place in the east. There are whole blocks of wholesale houses in Winnipeg, and each house is served with a spur of railway to the rear of the building, which greatly facilitates the shipping.

Mr. Scott recalled to mind, while he was talking, three large wholesale houses which were either solid brick or stone, and were more than 100 feet square, and five stories high.

He is of the opinion that there is not another city in Canada in which there were as many fine wholesale houses as there are in Winnipeg. He believes also that the future is very promising, and looks to the inception of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to still further increase the prosperity of Winnipeg.

During the period just prior to the elections, when they were not sure as to the results of the elections, the real estate market in Winnipeg, was quiet, because the capitalists recognized the fact that if the Laurier Government was returned the prospects for the early construction of the G. T. P., and the consequent boom in real estate, were good, and the results have proven the truth of this, for the market has taken a jump, and real estate is moving rapidly.

The crop this year is found to be much better than was at first expected, and the times, as a result, are good, the higher prices for grain helping the farmers considerably.

Mr. Scott does not place much reliance in the reports that there will be hard times in Winnipeg this winter, and said that he has seen no evidence of it in any way.

Mr. Scott has the typical western optimistic spirit, and believes that there is a great future in store for that part of the Dominion.

OPENING GAMES IN CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

Two Fast Games Last Night Before a Fairly Large Number of Hockey Lovers.

Colonials Defeated the Earl Greys by 6-1 and Karnots Won From T.A.S. by 4-1.

Games for Examiner Lockets Were Well Contested, and Some Good Hockey was Played. League's Success is Assured.

The City Hockey League commenced operations last evening, at the Brock street rink, and the opening games were quite a success. There was a good attendance of spectators for the opening games, and there was all kinds of enthusiasm displayed. There is no doubt but that as the schedule progresses, the interest will increase, and the attendance will also be larger. The success of the League is assured, and there is no doubt but that the object of the League—to develop pure amateur hockey—will be attained and the existence of the League will do much for the game generally in Peterborough.

The competition for the Examiner lockets, to be presented by Hon. J. R. Stratton to the members of the winning team, promises to be very keen. The teams winning over 50 per cent. of their games will enter the semi-finals at the close of the scheduled games.

The style of hockey exhibited last evening was fairly good, considering the fact that none of the teams had had any extensive practice, and many of the players were quite inexperienced in the game. But the players "dug in" in good shape, and both were good games. The second contest was much the faster, and the style of hockey was considerably superior.

COLONIALS, 6; EARL GREYS, 1.

The first game was between the Colonials and the Earl Greys, and resulted in a victory for the former septette by a score of 6—1. None of the players had had much experience in the game, but there was all kinds of good material, and by the time the season is further advanced both teams will show much better form. The players skated and checked well, but as a rule, were deficient in the art of stick-handling and shooting, but these difficulties will soon be overcome. The checking was hard but the game was clean, only two players being ruled off for a minor offence.

For the Colonials, Clancy in goal made some splendid stops, and cleared quickly. Thompson, at point, played a steady game and was always effective. Overend at cover-point, used his body advantageously. On the forward line Folley at right wing, played a star game. He had speed to throw away, and is a nice stick handler. He scored three of the goals, and incidentally won the shirt offered by Messrs. Lang & Maher for the player scoring the first goal. Rouille and Frost played well at centre, the latter shooting very effectively. Callahan did good work at left wing.

Lang between the nets made a number of fine stops for the Earl Greys. Brand was a good man at point, and Gilbert, who figured at cover point in the first half and at left wing in the second, was about the most effective player on team. With some improvement in stick handling he will make a first-class player. McFadden and Howson work hard at centre and Latimer had good speed and checked hard at right wing.

Combination play was not a very conspicuous but good attempts were made at it, especially by the winners and the results were sometimes gratifying. The Colonials were better shots and faster on the line than their opponents.

The Colonials uniform was yellow, green and white and the Earl Greys red, white and black. Both uniforms were quite attractive.

The teams were:

Colonials.		Earl Greys.
	Goal.
Clancy		Laing
	Point.
Thompson		Brand
	Cover point.
Overend		Gilbert
	Rover.
Rouille		Howson
	Centre.
Frost		McFadden
	Right wing.
Folley		Latimer
	Left wing.
Callaghan		beward

Referee—W. Parnell.
Goal Umpires—V. Williams, S. Hallahan.

THE PLAY.

The play was fairly even at the start both goals being attacked in turn. After eight minutes' play Frost passed the rubber to Foley, who won the shirt by landing the disc in the nets by a pretty shot.

The Colonials were pressing. Rouille made a long run but Brand stopped him. Callaghan passed neatly to Foley and the score was 2—0 in 10 minutes' time.

The Earl Grey's defence was easily drawn out, Gilbert playing too much on the forward line and as a result the goal was often exposed. Frost got passed the defence but Laing made a neat shot. Foley and McFadden were ruled off. After five minutes' Overend shot and missed, but Foley was in front of the nets and made the score 3—0. Half time was called.

Howson missed an easy chance. Laing stopped two hard ones but Frost finally scored by a clean side shot in five minutes.

Foley was working in some pretty runs down the side. Seward and Gilbert exchanged places and the change was a good one. Frost passed to Rouille and the score was 5—0.

Gilbert shot from three-quarters way and the puck got away from Clancy after he had stopped it. Score 5—1.

Gilbert was through the whole defence, but shot wild. Frost and Foley rushed the puck down the ice and the latter scored just before time expired.

KARNOTS WON FROM THE T.A.S.

A great deal of interest centred in the second game between the Karnots and T.A.S., which was very closely contested. Until the second half was nearly over it was anybody's game, but the winners finished strong, notching all their goals in the second period. The game was very fast for so early in the season, and the quality of hockey displayed was superior to that of the first game. The players were more experienced and were better stick-handlers. The checking was hard and close, and, especially, during the first half, players were sent regularly to the fence, the chief offence being heavy body checking. The players mixed it up in good style, and there was not a dull moment in the contest. The teams are still somewhat deficient in the art of effective combination play, but will improve in this respect as the season progresses.

The Karnots presented a fast and well-balanced team, that will take a lot of beating. They have plenty of weight on the defence and speed on the line. The forward line got working together in good shape in the second half, and did some hard and fairly accurate shooting. Kingscote in goal showed fine form, blocking cleverly and relieving quickly. Dormer at point, played an excellent game, checking accurately and lifting finely. He made several dangerous rushes up the ice. Ross Craig, at cover point, did effective work, though a tendency to use his weight too freely resulted in his being disciplined at times. Campbell at centre worked like a Trojan and his shooting was deadly. Quinn is a neat stick handler and good dodger. Gilman had a royal battle at left wing with his check, and did not "get going" until the second period, when he did brilliant work, and scored two goals. Grose played a good game at right wing, checking well and doing effective work generally.

Though defeated the T. A. S. were by no means outclassed, and at all times they were dangerous. The forward line is fast, all good stick-handlers, and play fairly well together. The defence is strong and check hard. Derocher made some good stops in the nets, especially in the first half. He has a tendency to drop to his knees, however, which should be overcome. Dorris at point was always in his place, and broke up many a well-meant rush. Kelly played a steady game at cover-point, and was a hard man to pass. The forwards all did good work. Callaghan made several dangerous rushes, and with Rose made a pair of fast centres. Quigley at left wing, is a splendid stick-handler and a fine all-round player. Kennealy was always in his place at right wing, and showed up prominently. The team is a good one and is by no means out of the running.

The Karnots appeared in very natty uniforms of purple and white which at once took the fancy of the crowd. They were secured from Lang & Maher. The T. A. S. wore the old reliable red and black.

The line up was:

T.A.S.		Karnots.
	Goal.
Derocher		Kingscote
	Point.
Dorris		Dormer
	Cover point.
Kelly		Craig
	Rover.
Callaghan		Quinn
	Centre.
Rose		Campbell
Kennealy		Grose
	Left wing.
Quigley		Gilman

Referee, W. Parnell.

THE PLAY.

The puck went to the T.A.S. end and Grose sent a wicked shot which Derocher did well to stop. Grose and Rose got into trouble and both went to the fence. Craig followed for a heavy check. Kingscote stopped a hot one from Rose. Craig made a long run but Dorris was "Jimmie on the spot." Callaghan decorated the boards. Gilman sent a hot one at Derocher which was neatly blocked. Craig was off again. The play was of the end-to-end variety with little advantage for either team. Finally after 20 minutes' play Quigley went down the wing passed to Kelly, who handed the goods to Rose and a score resulted.

Campbell was hurt, but resumed play. Rose was sent to the fence. Quinn had his head hurt and had to stop for repairs. Rose was ruled off again. Craig was made a spectator and half time was called.

The play was even faster in the second half. In two minutes Grose went down the wing and passed to Gilman whose shot punctured the nets and tied the score.

Craig was ruled off. Quigley made a pretty rush down the side, but Dormer was like a wall. In ten

A TERRIBLE DROUGHT.

Industries in Pennsylvania and Ohio May Have to Shut Down.

Pittsburg, Dec. 22.—It is feared that within the next ten days almost every industry in Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio will have to close down. The drouth is the worst in the history of this part of the country. The weather bureau cannot see any relief in sight. There is only half a foot of snow on the level. If this is melted it would only be equal to six-tenths of an inch of rain, and it will take at least one inch of rain besides to be of any benefit.

UNDESIRABLE SETTLERS.

Dr. Bryce Reports the Necessity of Greater Stringency.

Ottawa, Dec. 22.—Dr. P. H. Bryce, of the Immigration Department, who returned Tuesday night from a trip through Western Canada, found that a good many undesirable settlers are entering the country, both by the Pacific ports and along the international boundary. As a result of his inquiry the medical inspection will probably be made much more stringent.

After Amendments.

London, Dec. 22.—(C. A. P.)—The Birmingham Chamber of Commerce will ask the Colonial Secretary to secure such amendments of the new Canadian customs regulations as would facilitate legitimate trade between Canada and the United Kingdom, which might be done to some extent by increasing the permissible margin between the selling price and the fair market value to at least ten per cent., and by requiring the production of certificates of value only when the customs authorities have reason to believe goods are being dumped.

Died in Dauphin, Man.

Winnipeg, Dec. 22.—Word has just reached here of the death of John M. Campbell, father of Hon. Colin Campbell, Attorney-General of Manitoba, who passed away at Dauphin, Man., yesterday afternoon, suddenly. For the past three years the deceased has resided with his daughter, Mrs. Hooper, at Dauphin. He was 70 years of age. The body will be taken to the family home at Burlington, Ont., for burial.

Will Pay 10 P. C.

London, Dec. 22.—(C. A. P.)—The North of Scotland Canadian Mortgage Company made a profit of £22,500 for the year and will pay 10 per cent dividend.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Three Die in Fire.

Bangor, Me., Dec. 22.—Three lives were lost in a fire which destroyed the home of John Johnson, a laborer, at Stillwater Park, a section of this city, yesterday. The victims were Mrs. Johnson and two sons, Kenneth, aged 7, and Theron, aged 9. The financial loss was small.

Hay Memorial Burned.

Simsbury, Conn., Dec. 22.—The Hay Memorial Chapel given to Westminster School by United States Secretary of State Hay in memory of his son, Adelbert S. Hay, was burned yesterday. The loss, estimated at $12,500, is only partly covered by insurance.

Berlin's Red Letter Day.

Berlin, Dec. 22.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and the Minister of Education were in Berlin yesterday for the official opening of the Berlin Collegiate and Technical Institute. The distinguished visitors both made excellent educational speeches.

Oldest Minister Dead.

Facial Paralysis.

Mr. W. J. Brennan, Western Hill, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "My face was twisted all out of shape by facial paralysis, and five doctors failed to cure or even relieve. CHRISTMAS IN WEST INDIES

How the Darkies of the Antilles Celebrate the Holiday.

Christmas in the West Indies is a very jovial, rollicking affair—at least in the estimation of the darkies. The great feature of the season is the series of masquerades or mystery plays enacted by strolling negro performers.

These are of two sorts. Representations of such Biblical stories as that of David and Goliath—when you may see the dramatis personae clad in such historically accurate garments as "bedtick" trousers and cretonne coats of flaming pattern—and those of a purely local character. Of these last is the mongoose play, which is peculiar to St. Kitts, and the object of which is to wage mimic war against the destructive pest which is the curse of the island. These strolling players are the chief feature of Christmas celebrations.

They are quite an imposing lot of men, with a good ear for music, and as you watch their antics you might easily imagine that, instead of being in a civilized British colony, you were back in the heart of Africa, assisting at some savage death dance or other heathen rite.

Christmas In Tibet.

Tibet, the home of the strangest and least known people on the face of the earth, is also the home of the strangest of Christmas customs. The feast of Queen Winter in Tibet corresponds with our own Christmas festival. The figure of this queen, or goddess, is painted blue and mounted on a camel, surrounded by a string of human skulls. The dance celebrated at this feast is called tsam, and the masked figures which take part in it would be comic if they were not so horrible. One represents a horned bull, another a deer, but this deer, peculiarly enough, has a horse's head, an ancient symbol among the Tibetans of the messenger of death. There are evil spirits in devils, demons and other bad spirits to shock the ignorant people into blind obedience to the lamas. One god curses another, and every town has its local protecting divinity. There are serpent gods representing the spirit of evil, but they are fought by such protecting divinities as Garuda, who is always represented in lamaism with a stout body, human arms, wings and the head of a bird.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Teacher's Present.

The old schoolmaster was deeply affected. His scholars, noticing the dilapidated appearance of his chair, had presented him with a new one for Christmas. "My dear boys," said the kindly old man, with tears in his eyes, "I can never hope to tell you how you have made me feel by this token of your love for me. All I can do is to thank you for the sacrifices you have made of your little purses for the sake of my comfort. If you have found me severe at times I trust you realize that it has always been for your own good." As the old schoolmaster prepared to sit down in his new chair he unconsciously ran his hand over the seat in search of bent pins.—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Man Wants but Little"—

"Made known your wants for Christmas yet?"

"Sure. Asked the forty-seven friends who sent me suspenders last year to send trousers to match them this."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Saint Nicholas The Good

At this season of the year it is easy to guess who it is that holds the first place in the hearts of the children of America. Today dear old Santa Claus may be out of sight, but he is undoubtedly not out of mind. He is probably receiving hundreds of letters daily—via the fireplace or through the register routes—telling of the fond hopes that are fixed upon some especial toy, and in the meantime, as if to bring the thought of this genial old saint ever freshly to us, on the streets and in the shops we can see men dressed like Santa Claus.

In the midst of all this holiday turmoil how many children ever stop to ask who Santa Claus really is, or who he was, for he died centuries ago? I know that some little girls and boys are longing to say now:

"Oh, we're too old for that sort of thing. We know there is no such person as Santa Claus. Our presents are given us by our fathers and mothers. We know all about it."

So far as the presents are concerned, perhaps they are right, but when they push dear old Santa Claus out of the way as a myth they are quite wrong, for Santa Claus was once as much alive as any little girl or boy who reads this.

St. Nicholas lived about the year 300 A. D., and he was a bishop of the early Christian church in Asia Minor. The name Santa Claus is merely a different form of his real name, just as Carl and Carlos are varying forms of the name Charles, and Maria and Marie are of Mary.

During his busy and useful life St. Nicholas was very good to all the little children he met, giving them presents and making them happy in every possible way. He is, therefore, to be remembered at this season because it is especially the children's feast day, and his memory should be kept more green in our hearts than the greenest leaves of the mistletoe that decorate our homes.

One story told of St. Nicholas relates how he found three lovely maidens who were very unhappy because there was no one to take care of them, and they were so poor they feared they might starve to death. The good old saint, hearing of their grief, went and tapped softly on the window of their home. When it was opened he threw three purses filled with gold into the window and hid before the girls could see who it was that sent this unexpected gift.

The next night he did not go, but the night following he tapped softly again and threw three more purses into the window. He waited a like time and then threw them a third present, but did not hide quickly enough, for they saw who it was—the kind old bishop who loved children so tenderly. Of course, they were very grateful for helping them out of their trouble this way. Some people think that the custom of giving presents originated from this old legend.

In Germany they keep the feast of St. Nicholas on Dec. 6. At this time some one dresses in the traditional costume worn by Santa Claus, gives presents to the children who have been good and sorrowfully says "I have nothing for you" to the naughty ones. —Philadelphia Ledger.

QUEER CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Small Particles of Radium Presented by London Women.

There is this to be said of the latest fad of London society women—the giving of small particles of radium as Christmas presents—that none of the recipients can complain of having received a cheap gift. To give radium in this way costs from $10 to $50, the outfit necessary therefor consisting of a "spinthariscope" and a speck of the new metal hardly big enough to be seen with the naked eye.

Sir William Crookes, the English scientist, invented the spinthariscope, which is a kind of microscope through which small quantities of the precious stuff can be examined to better advantage. The spinthariscope sold by a London chemist who has the radium monopoly is about the size of a finger ring case and has an opening for the eye something like that in a child's kaleidoscope. By taking the apparatus into a darkened room and squinting through the eyehole one can see flashes of constantly varying light shooting in all directions, like miniature fireworks.

The idea of making Christmas gifts of radium has proved uncommonly infectious, and the run on the chemist's stock necessitated hasty communication with the firms in Bavaria and Austria who supply most of the radium that reaches England.—Washington Post.

Christmas Hints.

A simple and tasteful homemade picture frame may be constructed from common gas pipe cut into suitable length and tied together at the corners with shoe strings. A neat paperweight may be made by wrapping half a brick in paper such as butchers use and tying it with red tape. A dainty towel rack may be fabricated from a baseball bat and two cigar boxes. Shellac the boxes and sandpaper the bat. An ordinary cobblestone hand painted with lampblack and household ammonia makes an excellent door weight. A novel pipe rack for fastidious smokers may be made from a small strip of one inch plank. Bore holes in it for the stems of the pipes to pass through. A dried muskmelon shell makes an attractive tobacco jar.

Wise.

"What was the cause of your barn burning down?" asked the drummer.

"Spark from the railroad, stranger," drawled the farmer.

"You used to blame it on tramps."

"Railroads have more money than tramps, stranger."—Atlanta Constitution.

Those Girls!

Carry—Maude is such an original girl! She told me once she wouldn't marry the worst man in the world.

Martha—I know. That was the time they thought she was going to marry the man who afterward became your husband, dear.—Boston Transcript.

An Insult.

The pianist rose in disgust.

"I shall have to say good night," he said grouchily, feeling that he had been insulted.

For they had carelessly asked him to play something that had a tune to it. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

What He Won.

"Did your husband ever win anything at the races?"

"No," said young Mrs. Torkins, "nothing except the esteem of the bookmakers and the sympathy of his friends."—Washington Star.

Take no Risk With a Cold.

FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS MAY PROVE FATAL. THERE IS CURE FOR YOU IN

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE.

If you could depend on a cold passing off of its own accord it would be all very well to let it run its course. The risk is too great.

Consumption and pneumonia always have their beginnings in a cold.

If you take prompt means of curing every cold you will never be a victim of these or other fatal lung troubles.

Did you ever stop to think of it that way?

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is best known on account of its extraordinary control over croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and severe chest colds.

As a means of overcoming ordinary coughs and colds, throat irritation and the many diseases of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, it has made an enviable reputation for reliability.

Pleasant to take, thorough and far-reaching in action, and certain in its beneficial results, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine should have a place in every house as a safeguard against consumption and other fatal lung diseases.

Mrs. J. Provost, Renfrew, Ont., states: "My fourteen-year-old boy had a very severe cold in the chest last winter, and I really thought he was going to die. He coughed nearly all the time and sometimes would spit up blood. We had about given up all hope of his recovery, when I heard of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. After using one bottle there was a great change in his condition and I can positively say that he was completely cured by two bottles, and he has not been troubled since. I never saw medicine take such quick effect, and I can sincerely recommend it."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box. 9

CHAPTER XI.

MAJOR CRANSTON lived in an old fashioned, roomy house at the end of the widest and longest street Darley afforded. The exterior of the house was not very attractive, though it stood on a spacious, well kept lawn, but it was equipped throughout with fine old furniture the Cranstons had brought from Virginia. There were rare pieces of solid mahogany in the big parlor, a piano which was a relic of the days of Washington, and sofas and chairs quite as ancient in appearance. On the white plastered walls hung family portraits in massive gilt frames.

It was one Sunday night about the middle of November. Lydia had retired to her room and the major was reading a newspaper in the lamplight before a cheerful fire in the sitting room when Mrs. Cranston came in from the parlor.

"Well, you may be satisfied, Major Cranston," she said, "but I'm not."

"Oh, you are not! What's wrong now?" He put his paper down and looked up at her inquiringly.

"Well, I don't like the way Lydia is doing at all," replied the lady.

"What's she done now?" The major spoke with just a little irritation, for he was interested in the political news he had been reading.

"She hasn't done anything—that's the trouble," answered Mrs. Cranston. "If she only would do and be like she was in Richmond I wouldn't care, but she's as different as can be."

"Why, I'm sure the child seems well enough to me," grumbled the major.

"Well enough? She's the picture of health. But are you blind? Can't you see an inch before your nose? Don't you remember how she cried when we moved away from Richmond, and all the visits she promised Kitty Cosby and the other girls back there? Then you remember how she moped about the first month down here, and the fun she made of this place and the people. But now look at her. She's tickled to death over everything here. What do you think it means, sir?"

"Oh, she was sick and tired of that silly social set up there," said the major, "and this simple, healthy life here in the mountains agrees with her, as it has with me and you. I never knew what a good appetite or a pleasant night's sleep was till I"—

"Oh, do dry up!" Mrs. Cranston sat down by him. "You are as blind as a

"Don't insult your own child."

bat. Don't you know Lydia never was that way till George Buckley got to coming here and bringing her books and papers and going out with her."

"Stop!" Cranston's brow was clouded over. "Don't insult your own child." He stood up, his short legs quivering with excitement. "Do you think I'd let that man come here—he, a son of a convicted thief—if I dreamed—why, I'd shoot the top of his head off if he dared—eh!"

"There is no use waking up the servants out in the yard," said Mrs. Cranston in a tone modulated to that she wanted him to use. "We don't want any bloodshed; what we want is common sense. I don't think there is much danger so far. Girls will often allow themselves to enjoy the admiration of men they would not dream of marrying, and Lydia has too much family pride to think of encouraging him to any serious extent, but it is well to take time by the forelock. I was against letting him come here at all, you know, but you said it would shock the religious folks in the place for us to try to establish social lines when he stood so well, and"—

"I'll send her off tomorrow!" cried the major, still excited, his voice rising high and cracking.

"No, you won't unless you really want to drive her the wrong way," said Mrs. Cranston. "I've seen many unhappy, mismated marriages made through that stupid course, and I've always said I'd act differently if it came to me. Lydia would get as headstrong as a bull if we showed her that we were trying to drive her, and opposition naturally makes a girl think more of a man who is unfortunate. No, we must simply go on as if we never imagined she could demean us by marrying a man of that kind. She's not a fool; she may admire George Buckley and be sorry for him in his trouble, but she'll think several times before she marries him if we simply go on as if we are trusting her to protect our family name."

The major sat down. "I guess you are right," he said more calmly, "and I'm not really afraid when I think about her pride and all she has in her favor. Why, she could take her pick of the whole country. Governor Telfare is simply crazy about her an' has plenty of money. Do you suppose Lydia—or any girl, as for that—could resist the temptation to be the mistress of the executive mansion on Peachtree street and lead the society of Atlanta to marry a penniless bookkeeper in a grain warehouse and the son of—Shucks, if she had it in her, I'd disown her!"

"Oh, she's all right," smiled Mrs. Cranston, as if he had forced the absurdity of her fears down upon her by his warm words, "but we must handle her most carefully. I've tried making fun of her 'country beau,' as I always call him to her, but I've never been able to make out how she took it. She'd die before she'd let anybody know how she felt about a matter of that kind. I'll tell you what I'm going to do. She has invited Kitty Cosby to pay her a visit, and when Kitty comes I'm going to get her to help me. She's always had great influence over Lydia, an' Kitty is blue blooded to the bone. I'll coach her how to act, and she will hold Lydia in check an' keep me posted."

The major took up his paper.

"I rather admire the fellow's way," he said frankly. "I'm sure he doesn't overstep himself; he hasn't been here so often since his trouble, and that looks like he had some idea of the eternal fitness of things."

"No, that's true," admitted Mrs. Cranston, "and, really, I'm quite sure there has never been an intimate understanding between them, and if we play our cards right there won't be."

The major resumed his reading, and Mrs. Cranston went up the smooth, winding stairs to her daughter's room. Lydia was seated before the fire, her beautiful and abundant hair hanging loose over her shapely shoulders.

"I thought I'd see if Tom had made you a good fire, dear," Mrs. Cranston said gently.

"Oh, yes; it's all right, mamma, thank you," Lydia returned, with a smile.

Mrs. Cranston hesitated. "When do you look for Kitty to come?" she asked.

"Next week, toward the end, I think, mamma. She wanted to stay over for the guards' ball. Then she'll be ready for a rest here."

Mrs. Cranston pinched Lydia's fire reddened cheek caressingly. "Don't you miss all those things, dearest?"

"Not one bit, mamma." Lydia gave her mother her eyes trustingly. "In fact, sometimes I'm just a little ashamed of all I went through since I realize the beauty of this full, vigorous life here in the mountains. Mother, I can have a better time on Prince, galloping helter skelter over these ronds and fields, than I ever had vying with other girls for the most dances and favors in the german with a lot of boys. Oh, mamma," Lydia laughed, "sometimes I'm awfully ashamed of having done all that when—when"—

"When what, darling?" Mrs. Cranston's lips were compressed, her eyes fixed half fearfully on the speaking countenance.

"When there are so many of God's creatures here in their shells of poverty and misery trying to rise, trying to grow out into the sunshine of life. I think I could be perfectly happy if I could only help those people in some way. I want to teach them, to encourage them, not to believe in their degradation. Mamma, just the other day I saw an old woman selling eggs from a wagon at the gate, and in the wagon was her daughter, poorly dressed, but her features were finely drawn, and when I stopped to speak to them the girl looked at me as if I were a princess. Oh, mamma, that sort of thing cuts me. I have not done anything to deserve that, and, poor thing, what has she in store for her? Nothing but to fall into the sort of life her mother is leading."

"That's all true," agreed Mrs. Cranston, "but there are different grades of society, and we can't alter the condition." Then the speaker's face became more rigid, her tone tense and tentative. "And the mixing of the elements, my dear," she put in guardedly, "sometimes produces sad complications. You remember how Hallie Dunwoody married beneath her in Lexington and that it actually killed her father and broke up a happy home?"

"That was awful, simply awful!" remarked Lydia. "You know I saw her two months afterward, and the poor thing tried to keep me from recognizing her. She told me she was trying to adapt herself to the ways of her husband's family, but could not do it. Her husband meant well enough, but even he seemed unable to make it bearable for her."

Mrs. Cranston sat perfectly still; she seemed hardly breathing. She was very anxious to have her next remark seem casual.

"I have never heard you say before what you thought about that marriage, dear, but I never thought Hallie treated her father and mother right."

"No, she didn't," answered Lydia. "Hallie knew the extent of her father and mother's pride, and she had no right to crush it for her own selfish love. If she had sacrificed her own desires, and even those of her husband, she would have been happier in the consciousness of having done her duty. I don't think self sacrifice has ever brought about bad results—in the long run."

Mrs. Cranston breathed freely. She was all aglow as she bent and kissed Lydia good night.

Going down to the major, she said: "I've had a very, very satisfactory talk with Lydia—oh, no, not openly on that subject!" she hastened to correct as he raised his brows in surprise, "but in a roundabout way. We need not be afraid of her. If she cares particularly for George Buckley she doesn't know it, and if she should realise that she was drifting in that direction she would pull herself up."

"Well, I'm glad she's that sensible," said the major as his eye fell to the paper and began to search for a remembered paragraph. "I didn't think she was a fool."

CHAPTER XII.

KENNER was at the cotton compress the next morning watching the gang of negro hands compress and load several cars of cotton to be shipped to New England. This big piece of machinery and the extensive sheds and platform surrounding it belonged to Hillyer and stood directly across the railroad tracks behind the warehouse. When a bale of cotton was compressed there was a loud escapement of steam and a clatter of rough shod feet as the negroes hastened to bind and buckle the iron ties and truck the bale into the open car.

"Look out thar, you trifin' scamp!" Kenner yelled to a negro who stood too near the descending press for safety. "Who'd pay damages on that bale of it got stained through and through by havin' you mashed on it? Jake, it seems to me you get a green hand on every pressin' day."

"I tol' dat fool nigger to look out, Marse Kenner," replied Jake, who, with bared arms and neck and wet with perspiration, was bossing the others. "Ef he git smashed ter a jelly I reckon he'l be more careful next time."

Just then old Hanks came out of the rear door of the warehouse and laxily picked his way across the cinder strewn tracks. He did not go round to the steps, but climbed on to the platform like a schoolboy.

"Jake, gi' me a match," he called out as he fished a cigar from his pocket and bit the end of it.

"Match!" snarled Kenner. "Ef that coon handled matches around this platform I'd bust his skull."

"Well, I reckon I'll not smoke anyway," said Hanks, and he seated himself on a bale of cotton and took a small piece of tobacco from the pocket of his vest and began to chew it. "Say, Jim," he went on, "what do you think about the way Hillyer is actin' about wheat? Is he plumb losin' his mind?"

"I was jest a-studyin' about that myself," replied Kenner. "It's quar to me."

"I reckon you don't feel like you are exactly a Solomon," smiled Hanks, "with the market at $1.42, after all the row you made about him payin' $1.05."

"Not exactly," and Kenner burst into a harsh but hearty laugh. "That's whar I was wrong, I'll admit it, but most o' what I said was jest to keep George from makin' a mistake. It don't do a young feller any good to start out with a record for bad judgment. But what's got me is Hillyer's quar excitement all along. Why, he is as nervous as he can be. It don't look like he'd be that a-way with all that profit on his side. An' then, whenever thar'd be a rise an' anybody advised 'im to sell, he'd always turn to George and ax 'im what about it—never knowed 'im that way before—an' whatever George would say went. But the old man is rattled bad this mornin'."

"You say he is?"

"Yes; I was in the office just now when he got the reports. Two brokers wired that the top notch price was $1.42 and that nobody could predict whether she'd advance or decline. The old man was as white as a sheet as he handed the telegrams to George an' watched his face. That boy is simply wonderful. He's as cool as a cucumber in a barrel o' frozen vinegar. He's read every newspaper bearin' on wheat all over the country an' knows the thing from a to izzard. He's on to every grain that's exported, every flourin' mill that's shut down on account of the rise—in fact, every detail concernin' wheat in America an' everywhar else. I acknowledge I was excited just now watchin' the two. George didn't change countenance one bit; he jest sorter laughed an' said, 'Well, thar's one thing certain, Mr. Hillyer, this strain ain't a-doin' you any good, an', as fur as I'm concerned, I reckon we'd better try to unload.'"

"Good Lord, he said that, did he?"

"You bet, an' the old man got whiter an' more excited of anything. 'Remember, it is jest with you, George,' he said. 'Tell me positive, would you sell right now if it was yore deal?' George hung his head a minute an' then he said: 'Yes, Mr. Hillyer, since you leave it to me; I've hung on jest as long as I'm willin' to. It may climb to $1.50 or even higher, but I don't want to reak it.' Then the old man shot around the office like a dog after its tail, wirin' fer cash offers. I never seed the like. I tell you, old man, thar's some'n at the bottom o' this."

"Whar are they now?" asked Hanks. "They wasn't in the office when I come through."

"Both of 'em struck off uptown fer the telegraph office lickity split. They was too anxious to wait fer a messenger boy to bring the reports. Ha, thar comes George now, long by Bob's store—see 'im?—an' right behind 'im is the old man. Did you ever see Hillyer walk like that? Let's go over to the office an' meet 'em."

Kenner and Hanks stood under the awning in front of the warehouse when George and the merchant arrived. They all went into the office together.

"You think Jacobs & Co. are the best to deal with, then?" the old man was saying eagerly. "Lord, my boy, of we slipped up now I couldn't stand it. We must trade with solid parties."

"Jacobs & Co. is all right," put in Kenner. "They are as good as the bank."

"Some banks ain't wuth shucks," said Hillyer. "Look 'em up, George. See what their commercial rating is."

A rich man died the other day. He died in the very midsummer of life, and he left his family $1,000,000. The doctor's certificate showed that death resulted from typhoid fever. The doctor himself said to a friend: "That man was a suicide. He had a splendid constitution. I could have pulled him through if his stomach had been sound. But he ruined his stomach by hasty meals, snatched in intervals of business and by neglect of symptoms which have been warning him a year past, that his stomach was failing in its duties."

The symptoms of a disordered stomach are, among others, variable appetite, sour risings, heartburn, undue fullness after eating, dull headache, dingy complexion, discolored eye, fluctuations in physical strength, nervousness, constipation despondency. No person will have all these symptoms at once.

The restoration of the stomach to sound health begins with the first dose of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The cure progresses until the functions of the stomach are in healthy operation. Then the nerves are quiet and strong, the appetite healthful, the sleep restful, the eye bright, the complexion clear.

"Please accept my thanks for the benefit which my child received from your medicines," writes Mrs. W. A. Morgan, of Effie, Mo. "He had been troubled for nearly a year with liver complaint, indigestion, and constipation. I gave him your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and they did him great good. I gave him the 'Discovery' about eight months, and several vials of the 'Pellets.' He seems to be perfectly well now."

If you want a cure accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

These ORIGINAL Little Liver Pills, first put up by old Dr. R. V. Pierce over 40 years ago, have been sugar coated. They're made of purely vegetable extracts (roots and herbs), and contain no alcohol, cocaine, or other narcotic. They gently, but promptly, cure biliousness, sick headache, dizziness, sour stomach, and constipation. Druggists sell them. They govern the Liver and Bowels and their attendant disorderly elements. One or two a laxative, three or four a cathartic.

Owing to the special nature of our business, which is largely one of trust and confidence in the ability, judgment and honesty of the salesman, it is utterly impossible for us to fill our store with salespeople who know nothing about the watch or jewellery business, or of the quality of the goods they are selling. We wish, as a very special favor, to ask the many friends and customers of "Diamond Hall," who wish to look over our stock or make selections for Christmas, to be kind enough to come as early as possible.

minutes Gilman shot a hard one which Derocher partially stopped, but a goal was allowed, putting the Karnots in the lead by 2—1.

The play was very close but the Karnots were pressing. Campbell put in a beautiful shot from the side which beat Derocher and the score was 3—1.

One minute later Gilman dashed down the side and shot a few inches wide. He got the rubber again and passed to Campbell who scored.

The T.A.S. pressed and Kingscote was called upon to stop a few sizzlers. Time was called and the score was 4—1.

NOTES.

The opening games were a success.

Wallie Parnell gave good satisfaction as referee.

The knowing ones say there will be a great game when the Farriers and Karnots meet.

The T.A.S. are not at all downcast and expect to win most of the remainder of the games.

There was a good sized attendance for the opening games.

The Earl Greys team is composed of the pattern makers at the C. G. E. Works.

The ice was in fine shape considering the mild atmosphere.

The new lights at the rink are splendid and give the best of satisfaction.

Foley, by the way, who played such a good game for the Colonials and who won the Laing & Maher shirt, for scoring the first goal, plays with Best's "Happy Thought's."

"Win that shirt" was the slogan which filled the air when the first game opened.

As a rule the players stood the pace well.

HOCKEY.

At a meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club last night W. Cavanah was elected captain of the senior and Robt. Hall, of the juniors.

The Toronto papers state that Armis improving at every practice and is showing up in much better form than in the Waverly match.

Four intermediate and three junior games are scheduled for next month in the O.H.A. series.

• • •

Port Hope has dropped out of the Trent Valley League because of the inability to get enough players out to practice to put anything like a fairly strong septette on the ice. Their withdrawal will be a loss to the league, and it is to be regretted. The Guide says, in commenting on the situation: "And now Port Hope, that was always looked upon as one of the best sporting towns in the province, cannot secure enough players who will play for the love of the game. It is shameful, but we refrain from saying anything further on the subject."

CURLING.

The following curling games were played last evening at the rink:—

• • • •

Great enthusiasm prevails at the rink these days; the membership is large and many new faces are seen on the ice and some of them are showing wonderful aptness for so early in the season.

• • •

Christmas day will be an open day at the rink. No regular schedule games. All members will be welcome and games will be started at 10 a. m., 3 p. m. and 7.45 p. m. There will be accommodation for all members.

New Years day the annual match, President vs. Vice-President, will be played—notice of the draw will be published later.

The schedule committee have arranged an Inter Rink Schedule for the season which will open on the 3rd of January and continue until each rink has played 20 games. CHIEF SECRETARY MAKES A REPLY

Letter From Clement Jacobs of Salvation Army.

Toronto, December 22, 1904.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Our attention has been called to two open letters, which have appeared in the columns of your papers, dated December 15 and 20, being signed "Army Well-wisher" and "Contributor" respectively, and referring to the Salvation Army in your city.

I would like to make it clear, that it is not our custom to reply to anonymous letters, and in making an exception to this rule, we do so, because of the probability of some of our friends being under a misapprehension.

Regarding the matter mentioned by your correspondent, I beg to say that Territorial Headquarters has made an investigation and every facility has been given to Mr. Butcher to make good his statements, according to the requisitions of the Salvation Army. Not only he refused to do so, but has definately stated that he had "no charges to make against anyone, nor any grievance."

We wish to again call attention to my letter of September 20th, which states that the headquarters of the Salvation Army examined the books in question, and came to the conclusion, that Mr. Butcher was under a misapprehension. Since then nothing has transpired to alter our opinion, and we consider the matter definitely closed.

Yours faithfully,
CLEMENT T. JACOB,
Chief Secretary of the Salvation Army in Canada.

The Aftermath of Xmas

The Holiday Shopping is all over, and this store is beginning to settle down to normal ways again. Our Christmas business was greater than it has ever been before, and our vast stock was pretty well picked over. Of course this picking leaves in its wake many things that are tumbled and bedraggled, and these have no place in a clean, fresh stock. So we've put them out and put hurry-out prices on them. Intrinsically, just as good as ever, merely lost a part of their good looks, that's all and for this you get the reduction on—

PORT ARTHUR'S SPEEDY FALL

Jap Naval Attaches and Legislators Sail to See It---Six Hundaed Japs Killed---Sharp Fighting Beneath Payulseau Mountain, in Which Mikado's Men Suffered Heavily ---Force of Japanese on Shakhe River Surprised---Progress ef Port Arthur Siege Indicates Fall is Near.

Yokohama, Dec. 27.—The steamer Manchu, bound for the neighborhood of Port Arthur, left here yesterday. She carried as passengers ten naval attaches, four peers, seventeen members of the House of Representatives, one Secretary of the Diet, and a lieutenant-commander. There will be no press representative on board during the voyage, which it is expected will occupy three weeks.

Japs Lose 600 Men.

London, Dec. 27.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Che Foo in a despatch dated December 26, says: "A messenger from Port Arthur describes a Japanese attack the evening of December 22 with a light column of a thousand and machine guns on the northern defences. They dashed along the railway, carried trench after trench, and succeeded in reaching the watercourse beneath Payuiseau Mountain, whence the Russian artillery worked terrible execution. A fierce bayonet fight occurred at midnight.

"A strong Russian force, advancing eastward of Payuiseau Mountain, threatened the retreat of the Japanese, who, after a desperate struggle, retired to the north, leaving several machine guns, 300 rifles and 80 prisoners. It is estimated that they lost 600 killed. The Japanese halted near the cemetery, and, finding that both the flanks had carried all the works forming the outlying range of the main forts, they entrenched on small hills near Etze Mountain under a severe enfilading fire, which caused them further heavy losses."

Surprised the Japs.

Mukden, Dec. 27.—Volunteers who crossed the Shakhe River on Friday surprised a force of the enemy, killing about 100 and taking 15 prisoners. The Russian losses were trifling.

Mobilization Causes Disorders.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 27.—While the new mobolization is proceeding quietly in most places, disorders are reported to have occurred in Poland. The most serious disturbance was at Razon yesterday, where one colonel was killed and a gendarme wounded. There has also been considerable rioting at Bakhoug, where 6,000 conscripts pillaged a few houses and fruit stalls. No one, however, was killed.

In Jap Hands.

Tokio, Dec. 27.—The following report was received from the besiegers at Port Arthur Sunday morning:

"A body of our right wing surprised the enemy at Housanyantun (Housanyentao), and Siaofantun (the latter about six and a half miles northwest of Port Arthur), at 10 o'clock Saturday night, and occupied the villages, and subsequently dislodging the enemy, occupied the whole of Taliuchiatun (about five miles northwest of Port Arthur), at 2.55 o'clock this morning.

"Our repeated attacks during the past few days were uniformly successful, and now the whole of the enemy's advanced positions fronting our right wing is in our hands."

BLOCKADE OF PORT ARTHUR.

Togo Reports Main Strength of Russians Completely Crushed and Work of Jap Fleet Practically Over.

Tokio, Dec. 26.—Admiral Togo telegraphing under date of Dec. 22, says:

"After 203-Metre Hill was occupied as a result of a gallant and desperate attack by the besieging army the bombardment of the enemy's squadron by a siege and other heavy guns became effective. In consequence the battleships Poltava and Retvizan were sunk and subsequently the battleships Pobieda and Pereviet, the protected cruiser Pallada and the armored cruiser Bayen were sunk. The battleship Sevastopol escaped the land bombardment, left the harbor, Dec. 9, and anchored near Chentao Mountain. She was attacked there continuously by our torpedo boats and heavily damaged. The main strength of the enemy is completely crushed. Only a weak gunboat, the Otvashai, and several torpedo boat destroyers remain afloat. Under the circumstances our combined fleet has been removed as unnecessary from the blockade of Port Arthur, which has been maintained since May 1. I have arranged for a closer watch for ships attempting to run the blockade, and then watch the remnant of the enemy's squadron.

Mines Were Damaging.

"During the blockade we suffered from the enemy's mines, both laid and floating on the high seas, and from dense fogs. The Miyako, Yoshino, Hatsuse, Kaimon, Heiyen and Saiyen were sunk, and many gallant and loyal officers and men were killed, but we succeeded in maintaining the blockade. When the enemy emerged from the harbor our fleet successfully engaged them and finally with the valuable support of the besieging army succeeded in crushing nearly all the enemy's squadron.

"Our second squadron so heavily damaged the Vladivostock squadron that it has been unable to leave port.

Where Credit Is Due.

"All this success is gratefully attributed to the brilliant virtue of our Emperor. During the blockade all the ships under my command splendidly accomplished the work and duty assigned to them. Especially to be noted are some of those who were engaged in the difficult and risky task of blockading or who tirelessly accomplished the work of laying mines in the presence of the enemy, others who, braving all dangers, were engaged in the work of clearing mines away, and others still who were posted to watch the enemy and guard against the enemy's ships, their combined works strongly contributed to the accomplishment of the blockade. I deem it my duty to especially mention my recognition of the valuable services rendered by the officers and men."

KEKWAN FALLS TO JAPS.

Most Furious Fight of Port Arthur Siege—Real Feat of Arms Replete With Brilliant Daring.

Headquarters of the Japanese Third Army before Port Arthur, Dec. 20.—(Via Yinkow, delayed in transmission via Tientsin, Dec. 26):

Since the general assault of Nov. 26-27 against the forts of Rihlung and Kekwan Mountains, resulting in furious fighting and great loss of life, and described at length by the Associated Press correspondent in a despatch filed Nov. 26, the Japanese have been engaged in tunnelling under the northern fort of Kekwan Mountain. The main tunnels ran under the north wall of the fort from the moat for a distance of 40 feet, and there were four short branch tunnels. On the morning of Dec. 18 seven dynamite mines were laid, the object of which was to destroy the north wall and so give the Japanese access to the fort. The fort had so long resisted the assaults of the Japanese that it was considered necessary that the explosion of the mines and the subsequent attacks should be carefully planned. General Samejima, commanding the left division, asked for volunteers who would be prepared to capture the fort or to die in the attempt. Two entire battalions answered the call. The first battalion remained in the caponiere galleries during the explosion of the mines, while the second battalion was in a parellel, close to the wall of the counterscarp.

In order that the dark blue uniform of the men might not show against the brown of the soil, which would be turned by the force of explosion, the attackers were brown woollen underdrawers over their trousers and brown sweaters over their tunics. Instead of a cap, each man wore a brown woollen headpiece, which extended to shoulders, leaving only the face visible. Every man carried a rifle and dynamite grenades, while a lighted slow match was attached to his cartridge belt, with which to ignite the fuses of the grenades. In this peculiar garb, with the lighted matches at their waists, the troops presented a strange appearance. The soldiers of the battalion in the caponiere gallery, who were distinguished by white badges on their arms, were to make the second assault. General Samejima personally conducted these assaults at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Dec. 19, after the explosions had taken place.

Waves of Explosion.

The first mine exploded without warning, and the explosion was not entirely successful, owing to the heavy concrete above the mine. The explosion of the second mine followed immediately, and this was succeeded by five smaller explosions. The sight was wonderful in the extreme. Huge clouds of brown earth and debris of all kinds were thrown two hundred feet in the air, and it looked as if the whole fort had been sent heavenward. When the clouds of earth had settled down the snow for some five hundred yards around the fort was covered with brown earth, pieces of timber and blocks of concrete.

The explosions made two large breaches in the north wall of the fort through which the Japanese in the moat swarmed. They charged so quickly that 50 of them were either killed or wounded by the falling debris. The Japanese succeeded in gaining the ramparts and charged the interior of the fort, but they were repulsed by a portion of the garrison from behind a wall at the rear of the fort, which had not been touched by the force of the explosion. Behind this wall there were four field guns and three machine guns.

From Hole to Hole.

In the meantime the Russians had rushed reinforcements of some 300 to the fort through the covered wall at the rear. The second battalion of attackers were unable to advance immediately, as the sapping trenches from the parallel to the moat were filled with debris. When this debris had been excavated the battalion gained the moat and reached the ramparts through the breaches that had been made by the explosion. The commander of this enterprise realized that any attempt to gain the interior of the fort would end in disaster if his whole force advanced in one body, so he disposed his men along the wall and ordered them to gain the lower level of the interior of the fort by twos and threes and to find cover in the holes which had been made in the surface by the Japanese shells, and these offered good cover from the rifle and machine gun fire directed from the rear of the fort. In these holes 150 of the attackers had found cover by 5 o'clock in the morning.

Advancing carefully the Japanese approached the Russian defences in the rear of the fort, and by working from hole to hole under cover of darkness the entire battalion gained the interior of the fort, notwithstanding the desperate resistance made by the Russians. The final charge made against the wall of sand bags proved unsuccessful, but charge followed charge until midnight, when the last corner of the Russian defences was captured.

Fiercest of Fights.

The fighting was desperate in the extreme, with bayonet and dynamite hand grenades, and the entire garrison was killed with the exception of a party of 20, who escaped through the covered wall, which they destroyed behind them by exploding four mines, and thus prevented the Japanese from pursuing them. Though the numbers engaged and the area of fighting were small, both assaults and defence were more furious than any in the previous history of the siege of Port Arthur. With the exceptions noted, the garrison died fighting to the last man, with wonderful determination.

The final rushes of the Japanese were irresistible. Their wounded refused to retire, and insisted on continuing the fighting, saying that they had vowed to take the fort and that they must succeed.

Four field guns and three machine guns were captured, and over 300 Russians were killed. The skilful manner in which the second assault was executed prevented heavy losses and insured the capture of the fort, which, though not the largest, is one of the strongest of the eastern fortified ranges.

Important For Both.

The fort is important to the Japanese, as it opens a way up the gorge between it and the eastern end of Kekwan Mountain, and is the easiest point at which to pierce the principal line of fortifications for the purpose of gaining a foothold on the higher hills of the ridge.

The stubborn resistance made by the Russians was due to the fact that the captured fort was the key of the position at this point of their western flank.

WAR ON PERE MARQUETTE.

Town of Leamington Cuts Off Railway's Water Supply.

Leamington, Dec. 26.—Because the Pere Marquette Railway has neglected, it is claimed, its local freight service as a result of which the town is almost out of coal, the civic authorities cut off the railroad's water supply Saturday, causing a tie-up of four freight trains at this place.

The town has been borrowing coal to keep the waterworks in operation, and last week a car of the fuel arrived in Walkerville for the town, but it has lain there ever since. It is claimed, and all efforts to have it brought down have proven futile. Friday night the council ordered that the water supply to the road be cut off, excepting passenger trains, until the road gives better freight service.

In nine days there were supposed to be nine mixed trains for local traffic daily or a total of 81. The number actually run was only 34, all more or less late, and 47 trains were cancelled. During the same period of time 70 through freights, drawing in all 1973 cars, passed over the two divisions. The chief train despatcher explained the frequent cancellation of trains by saying there was not enough motive power and that engines were set off for repairs.

RE CHADWICK'S ARREST.

Sheriff Refused Requisition Papers By N.Y. State Authorities.

Albany, N.Y., Dec. 27.—Sheriff Barry of Cuyahoga County, Ohio, who expects to arrest Dr. LeRoy S. Chadwick, husband of Mrs. Chadwick, when he lands in New York to-day, on the charge of forging the name of Andrew Carnegie, met a check in his plans yesterday when he failed to obtain from Gov. Odell the requisition papers necessary to permit the transportation of Dr. Chadwick to Ohio for trial.

He called at the executive chambers in the capital yesterday morning; but was informed by Judge John T. Boyce, the Governor's pardon and requisition clerk, that his papers were defective in that they failed to prove that Dr. Chadwick was in the State of Ohio on March 5, 1903, when the alleged forgery was committed Sheriff Barry decided not to try to correct his papers now, but to go on to New York and arrest Dr. Chadwick and arrange for his requisition afterwards.

SHIBLEY IN BOSTON.

Bail For Harryett Granted in $20,000 By Judge Teetzel.

Kingston, Dec. 27.—W. J. Shibley, of bogus ballot box fame, is in Boston, and has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The estate will not pay one cent on the dollar.

Bail For Harryett.

Toronto, Dec. 27.—On Saturday T. C. Robinette, K.C., secured from Justice Teetzel an order allowing bail for Samuel Harryett, police magistrate of Bancroft. The amount is $20,000, half of which is personal and the remainder in four sureties of $2,500 each, which his brothers will probably provide.

—The streets and sidewalks to-day were in a treacherous condition on account of the freezing rain.

The morning was frosty and the horses being spirited started to run, heading up Peterborough street going west. The king bolt came out when opposite Mr. Thos. Rahall's, leaving the hind bobs and the body of the bus on the road. This not stopping them they went as far as the Daisy D cheese factory and turned north. They were found late in the afternoon at Mr. D. Fitzpatrick's about nine miles from Norwood, apparently none the worse for their run.

LITTLE DENMARK'S HIGH POSITION

As Producer of First-Class Bacon and Butter.

This Fact Fully Realized, by Canadian Exporters—Some Interesting Information.

The little kingdom of Denmark occupies an almost unrivalled position as a producer of first-class bacon and butter, as Canadian exporters of these products fully realize. This pre-eminence has been brought about chiefly by the general diffusion of agricultural information and the hearty co-operation of the farmers along every line that will be to their mutual advantage. There are many directions in which Canadians might profitably imitate these energetic rivals of ours, not the least important being in the improvement of dairy herds. The aim of intelligent dairymen, in Canada as well as in Denmark, is to produce the largest amount of first-class milk, butter or cheese at the least cost. Let us see, then, what co-operative testing has done for the Danish dairy herds in the way of cheapening the cost of production.

The first of these co-operative testing associations was formed in 1895. Each society is composed of a limited number of farmers, about twelve or fifteen, who agree to have careful tests of their cows made at frequent intervals during the whole milking period by a competent man hired for the purpose. Fairly accurate records are thus obtained, not only of the yield of milk and butter fat, but of the amount, kind and cost of the feed consumed. The information thus secured has proved remarkably effective in inducing the Danes to adopt better methods of breeding, feeding and culling dairy cows.

In 1895, when the first testing association was formed, the value of the butter exported from Denmark was $19,000,000. In 1901, when over three hundred of these associations were scattered over that country, the value of the butter exports amounted to $33,000,000, and increase of over fifty per cent. in six years. It is generally agreed that the greater part of this enormous increase was due to the work of the testing associations in weeding out the poor cows. Not only was the average production of the milking cows largely increased, but so much additional skill in feeding was acquired that the cost of feed necessary to produce a pound of butter is now estimated to be less than two-thirds of what it was when the first co-operative association started operations in 1895.

Canadian dairymen who are looking for dividends on their investments should consider these figures. The reports of the testing associations showed that the cost of keeping yearly records was from forty to sixty cents per cow, while the increased returns per cow, as a result of five years' testing, were from six to fifteen dollars per annum. Surely this is an eminently satisfactory rate of interest. The extraordinary increase in the number of these societies in Denmark shows how highly their work is appreciated. The tests made by the original associations were sufficient to convince the Danish farmers that they were not dairying on business principles—that they were allowing a lot of robber cows to eat up the profit is produced by their good cows—and they were quick to adopt better and more profitable methods.

The hundreds of co-operative cheese factories and creameries doing business throughout Canada prove conclusively that we can work successfully along co-operative lines. It is only a short step from the co-operative factory to the co-operative testing association, and it would seem that methods which have proved of such marked benefit in Denmark could not much longer remain unheeded in this country. In every dairy community there is at least one particularly intelligent and progressive man, who would have little trouble in inducing twenty or thirty of his neighbors to join him in an enterprise that has proved so profitable elsewhere.

It has been demonstrated by the census returns and other official statistics, by the work of the experimental farms and agricultural colleges, and by numerous private investigations of dairy herds that a large proportion of our cows are kept at an actual loss.

An educational campaign that will bring dairy farmers face to face with facts as they exist on their own farms is urgently needed in this country. The problem of weeding out the cows that cannot be made to yield milk at a profit is by far the most important one that confronts our dairymen to-day. The possibilities in this connection were illustrated by Prof. Grisdale at the recent Winter Fair at Guelph. He told of a friend of his who had increased the average production of his herd from $35 in one year to $48 the next, although the price of cheese remained the same. In the third year, with cheese considerably higher, the average of this herd came up to $60, and the year following to $70. This was accomplished by more skilful feeding, by weeding out unprofitable cows, and by buying from neighbors better producing cows, of whose value the owners were ignorant!

GREEDY MONTREAL.

An Interesting Controversy With the Militia Department.

Ottawa, Dec. 24.—The Militia Department owns thirty-three acres in the centre of Montreal, known as Logan's farm. Part is occupied by stores and buildings; the rest is used by the city for park purposes. The department proposes erecting barracks on the site, but the city has asked to be indemnified and also to be presented with St. Helen's Island. The latter property is worth $1,500,000, whereas the value of the militia land used by the city is only $200,000.

Montreal Company Gets It.

Peterboro, Dec. 24.—The contract for the erection of the new lift lock at Kirkfield on the Trent Canal has been awarded to the Dominion Bridge Co. of Montreal. The lock is to overcome a lift of fifty feet and it will differ from the lock here in that the towers will be of steel.

Thrilling Rescue of the Crew of a Canadian Schooner.

STRUGGLE IN TURBULENT SEA

Terrible Experiences of the Crew of the Josie M. Calderwood of Sydney, C.B.—Great Gallantry Displayed in Their Rescue By Officer and Four Seamen of the German Steamer Barcelona.

New York, Dec. 24.—The fate of the little 79-ton Sydney, C. B., schooner Josie M. Calderwood, which sailed from Dalhousie early in November, was first learned yesterday, when the German steamer Barcelona came in with a story of a thrilling rescue at sea. The capatain and four men composing the crew of the Calderwood were taken from their little craft after a frightful experience, when they were ready to abandon hope. The schooner, herself waterlogged and hopeless, was fired and was ablaze from water-line to main truck when the Barcelona steamed after her. The Barcelona came upon the Calderwood when she was three days out from Baltimore on Nov. 27. Strong gales with hurricane squalls had prevailed for 48 hours, and the seas were running mountains high when the signal of distress set by the Calderwood crew was sighted. When the steamer was within hailing distance the crew of the Calderwood begged to be taken from their sinking vessel. A lifeboat manned by an officer and four seamen was sent away from the steamer after a terrible struggle in the turbulent sea and rescued the crew of the Calderwood. Before leaving the sinking vessel the torch was applied, and it is believed that the hulk remained above the surface but a few hours.

According to the story told by the rescued men, the Calderwood had fared badly in a long succession of heavy gales. Wrenched and twisted by the wind and waves, her seams had started early in the voyage, and for days the crew had been at the pumps without rest. On the 27th the pumps became choked, the water gained rapidly and the crew was about to take to the little boats when the Barcelona hove in sight.

JAMES MARKELL MAY DIE.

Quarrel At Morrisburg Ends With Very Serious Stabbing.

Morrisburg, Dec. 24.—Alfred Jannack and Jas Markell, of this town, got in an altercation Thursday which ended in Jannack stabbing Markell in the shoulder. The man with the knife was arrested, and given a hearing before W. B. Cook, J. P. The witnesses for the prosecution were Mrs. Jas. Markell, wife of the wounded man; George Markell, his brother, and Dr. Ford, who gave evidence as to the wound, which, he said, was a dangerous one, one and a half inches long and two or three inches deep. Markell was unable to appear, owing to his injury.

His wife and brother did not see the stabbing, and could only swear what the injured man had told them. They said Jannack had called at the home of Markell, whom he said had promised to go to the woods with him. Mrs. Markell stated that when the prisoner inquired at the house for Markell, and was told that he was in the wood-shed, he became wild in his manner. On reaching the woodshed he asked Markell if he was going to the woods, and, the latter replying that he was not, Jannack became angry, and, as Markell raised up with an armful of wood, stabbed him in the back, upon which Markell knocked him down twice with a stick of wood.

The prisoner, who had no witnesses, pleaded guilty, but said that he had acted in self-defence, as Markell had called him a liar and knocked him down twice before he stabbed him.

Jannack, who is 18 years of age, was committed to Cornwall Jail to wait his trial, and was taken there by Chief Hopper. His weapon was a big-bladed jackknife. Markell's wound has become considerably inflamed, and he may die.

Seven Sutherland Sisters:

Dear Ladies,—I take pleasure in acknowledging the great benefits I have derived from the use of your Hair Grower and Hair and Scalp Cleaner. Three months ago when I commenced using them my hair was very thin and short and nearly all gone from the top and sides of my head. It had been in that condition for nearly three years. Since using your preparations it has grown at least four inches and is very heavy as my photo will show. I think it very remarkable considering my age. I have had my photo taken showing the new growth of hair which I give you permission to use in any way you desire. Also my letter. I remain,

Yours respectfully,

POWDER EXPLOSION

A Ton of Powder Blows Up at Waverley, Near Halifax.

SHOCK FELT FOR 30 MILES

Caused a Panic, But No Lives Lost—Earth Rocked As If From Earthquake Shock —Windows Smashed in Halifax 14 Miles Away—Drying Mill of Acadia Powder Mill Wiped Out.

Halifax, N.D., Dec. 27.—A terrific explosion occurred at the Acadia Powder Company's mills at Waverley, fourteen miles from Halifax, yesterday morning. Nearly a ton of high-class powder in the drying mill exploded at 10.30 o'clock, but happily caused no fatalities. Owing to the holiday few employes were about the works, and only one man, Geo. Murray, who was struck by a flying timber, was injured, not seriously. The building was wrecked, causing a loss of $10,000. The shock was tremendous, and was felt throughout a radius of thirty miles. In Halifax buildings were shaken, window panes smashed, doors forced open, and in the King Edward Hotel the dishes were swept from the tables of the dining-room. The earth rocked as if from an earthquake shock, and a panic prevailed for a time.

Panic-Stricken Skaters.

Bedford Basin, within five miles of the scene of the explosion, was covered with skaters. The ice heaved and rolled with a rumbling sound, and the panic-stricken skaters hurried to the shore.

The explosion devasted the woodland surrounding the building for a hundred yards square, as if a tornado had struck it.

The company's plant is very extensive, comprising ten buildings, but to guard against such accidents they are placed far apart. Several of them contained large quantities of high-class explosives, dynamite and powder, and had the explosion communicated to them the result would have been disastrous. The cause of the explosion is believed to be the overheating of the powder in the drying house, although the President of the company states that the heat registered before the explosion was only 150 degrees, one-half of the maximum for safety.

WINNIPEG CHURCH BURNED.

German Lutheran Shares Some Fate As Icelandic Lutheran.

Winnipeg, Dec. 27.—On Friday the Icelandic Lutheran Church was destroyed by fire. Yesterday the German Lutheran Church shared the same fate. The fire started through the falling of the stovepipes, while the janitor was heating the building for the morning service, and the stove being filled with wood, the building was immediately a mass of flames.

For some minutes the janitor ran around telling of the fire and calling for assistance; then the fire alarm was turned in. When Chief Buchanan arrived he saw the building was doomed, but at once turned in a general alarm and put men to saving adjacent buildings.

During the fire John Zoller dashed into the burning building, and at the risk of his life, rescued the crucifix, which had been given to the church by the Ladies' Aid Society as a Christmas present.

Last night a meeting of the parishioners was held, and it was decided to at once rebuild a larger church. The loss was $7,500, one-third covered by insurance.

Fatal Slip On the Stairs.

Arnprior, Dec. 27.—On Saturday night, while Mrs. Brennan, wife of John Brennan, county councillor and contractor, was ascending the basement stairs at her home at Sand Point, six miles from here, her foot caught in the top step, and, falling backward, she hung head downward for some minutes. After being extricated and carried to her room, she died in five minutes.

A Fatal Holiday.

His body went under the wheels, and his legs from the hips down were fearfully crushed. He expired within a few minutes after being carried into the Power House.

Five Die By Fire.

Montreal, Dec. 27.—A fire broke out in St. Agathe street, an Italian resort, Christmas Eve, and although the damage to property was not great, five persons perished. Signors Donni, Servettonne, and an unknown man, and a Mrs. Enn were suffocated, while Mrs. Cellina died later at the hospital. They were all working people.

Wagon Breaks; Two Drown.

Dunnville, Dec. 27.—Christmas Eve Daniel Dunham of Stormness, was driving down the Welland Canal feeder to his home. With him were his wife and two children and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anger. When about a mile from Dunnville the wagon broke, throwing the occupants in the canal. Charles Anger and Mr. Dunham's 3-year-olold boy were drowned.

Cars Passed Over Head.

London, Dec. 27.—Yardmaster Navin of the G.T.R., who resided with his wife and three children at 277 Grey street, while crossing the track near Waterloo street, was struck by a freighter and thrown to the ground, the car passing over his head, causing instant death. Navin stepped in front of a car standing on the track alone, when a Pere Marquette engine, with three coal cars, struck the other end.

Seven Die in Railway Wreck.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 27.—The passenger train which left St. Louis at 9 o'clock Christmas Eve on the Southern Railroad collided head-on with the passenger train leaving Louisville about the same hour, near Maude Station, Ill., Christmas day. One passenger and six employes were killed and two passengers and eight employes were slightly injured. The dead all resided in Indiana or Illinois.

Belanger, of Beauport Asylum, after having taken some drinks with a soldier of the garrison, named Charley Beaupre, cousin of the shopkeeper, quarreled with and shot him. Thinking that he had killed his man, he shot himself through the head on St. Valier street. Beaupre's wound is not serious; the bullet slipped on the ribs of the right side, and went away under the armpit. Spenard was a bachelor, and 40 years of age.

DR. PITCHER'S BACKACHE-KIDNEY TABLETS

CLEANSE THE SYSTEM FROM HEAD TO FOOT AND PURIFY THE BLOOD.

THESE Tablets act on the three great blood purifying organs of the body—the kidneys, liver and bowels, and clear away the bile, uric acid and all other poisons and impurities. They positively cure blood humors, skin diseases, headache, backache, dropsy, gravel, rheumatism, all kidney and urinary troubles, liver torpor, constipation and give sick, disheartened men and women a new lease of life.

J. Williams, telegraph operator, Port Hope, says "Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are the only thing I have found in the last four or five years that has done any good and they certainly are marvelous in their rapid and good effects. I suffered from backache, kidney, and liver trouble, with loss of appetite and strength, but these conditions are entirely gone, and I feel generally better and stronger every way."

Price, 50c. a bottle. 3 for $1.25 at druggists or by mail. The Dr. Hess Pitcher Co., Toronto.

LINGERING COLD.

Withstood Other Treatment But Quickly Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"Last winter I caught a very severe cold which lingered for weeks," says J. Urquhart, of Zephyr, Ontario. "My cough was very dry and harsh. The local dealer recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and guaranteed it, so I gave it a trial. One 25 cent bottle of it cured me. I believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be the best I have ever used." This is one of the most staple medicines in use. Thousands have testified to its excellence. It not only cures a cold quickly and effectually, but counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It is equally valuable for children and may be given to them with implicit confidence. It always cures and is pleasant to take. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no opium or other harmful drug. Sold by all druggists.

Demers and his helper, Fred Pelletier, who, after tugs had made three visits to the island and returned each time without having been able to land or get any sight of the men, had been almost given up for lost. The men themselves had come to the conclusion that they were to remain on the island for the winter, and were preparing to do their best towards subsisting upon a half-barrel of flour and a large quantity of fish. A large crowd of people was at the dock to greet the lightkeepers on their return.

REFORMS IN RUSSIA

An Imperial Ukase Makes Very Liberal Promises.

M. WITTE NOW HIGH IN FAVOR

General Kuropatkin Added His Voice in Favor of the Broader Activity of the Zemstvos—Question of Constitutional Assembly Untouched, and There Is No Special Mention of the Jewish Religion.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 27.—An Imperial Ukase issued last night makes decidedly liberal promises under a number of heads:

It promises a full and equal enforcement of existing laws.

Assures the Zematvos of the fullest possible measure of self government, and the enforcement of the laws now existing in their behalf.

Promulgates a scheme of workman's insurance.

Extends the liberty of the press.

And promises a full legal trial of all persons accused.

M. Witte seems again to be high in the favor of the Emperor, and is almost a daily visitor at the Tsarkoe-Selo.

There seems to be no evidence of a cessation of the agitation in different parts of the country in favor of liberal reforms. The situation is most acute in Moscow, where the university is closed and other societies are in a constant state of ferment.

It develops that the social revolution party in Moscow before the demonstrations of Dec. 18 and 19, practically issued a warning condemning to death Grand Duke Sergius and Police Master Trepoff, if, during these demonstrations there should be a recurrence of their police brutality, which was witnessed in St. Petersburg. Subsequently the students decided not only to cease attending lectures, but to demonstrate on the occasion of the burial of the victims of the rioting of Dec. 18 and 19, to ally themselves with the labor movement and to take up arms in their own defence.

Gen. Kuropatkin, according to an interview with Prince Dolgorouky, head of the Moscow Red Cross detachment at the front, has added his voice in favor of broader activity of the Zemstvos. This may be fraught with immense significance later.

Ukase Under Eight Heads.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 26.—Nicholas' long expected ukase was issued tonight. The document deals, under eight heads, with practically all the subjects brought to the emperor's attention by the memorial of the congress of zemstvos's presidents held here last month, and while not specially pledging the government to carry out the various reforms in their entirety as demanded by the memorial, promised that each shall be referred to the council of ministers, with orders to report promptly on the fullest measures of relief which can be accorded on the various subjects.

One question not touched by the ukase is that of the constitutional assembly. Neither is the Jewish religion specifically mentioned, the freedom for all creeds or sects, whether Christian or otherwise, is among the subjects which will be dealt with.

Among those competent to express an opinion, it was considered to be a document, the ultimate value of which depended largely upon the interpretation given by the various committees as to the measure of liberty which it is possible to grant under the various heads named. It has not met the fullest wishes of the liberals, but on the other hand it is regarded by the reactionaries as promising entirely too much in the direction of liberal reforms.

Facial Paralysis.

Mr. W. J. Brennan, Western Hill, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "My face was twisted all out of shape by facial paralysis, and five doctors failed to cure or even relieve. By the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been entirely cured and have returned to work well and strong. I have gained in weight and feel that I have a new lease of life.

MOTHER'S FUTILE JOURNEY.

LaPorte, Ind., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Sarah Corkwell of Toronto, Canada, arrived at Marion, this State, yesterday in search of her daughter, Anna Corkwell, aged 22, who disappeared from her home last August, and of whose whereabouts nothing is known. The aged mother received information a few days ago that her daughter was attending a school at Marion, and she at once let Toronto for the Indiana city in the hope of inducing her to return. Mrs. Corkwell spent several hours yesterday hunting for the girl, but failed to find any trace of her.

The police will continue the search to-day, and failing in the effort to find the girl, Mrs. Corkwell will visit other Indiana cities.

SMOKER WAS A DECIDED SUCCESS

Very Enjoyable Event at T. A. S. Rooms Last Evening.

The "Smoker" at the T.A.S. rooms last evening was in every way a most successful affair. There was a very large attendance and a fine evening's entertainment was provided. Mr. J. A. Sharpe was chairman.

Several very interesting wrestling bouts were on the programme and were quite keenly contested. One of the best events was between J. Doris and Kirk, resulting in a win for the latter who secured a fall in seven minutes.

The programme included a number of vocal solos by Mr. Jas. Browne, step dancing by Mr. D. Quinlan, dance by Mr. J. Callaghan, recitations by Mr. J. Doris and bag punching exhibitions by Mr. J. McDermith. The whole programme was one of much interest.

PONTYPOOL NOTES.

Anniversary services in connection with the Pontypool Methodist church were held on Sunday, when Rev. W. B. Tucker, of Orono and Rev. Mr. Oswald, of the Presbyterian Church, Pontypool, preached. Last evening a concert was held in the church, Rev. N. D. Drew, the pastor, presiding. The programme was given by Miss Richardson, elocutionist, Lindsay; Master Young, vocalist, Pontypool; Miss Clara Belleghem and Mr. B. N. Jolliffe, of Peterborough.

HOW PETERBORO' SPENT CHRISTMAS.

A Quiet Day of Social Enjoyment in Town.

Merchants Feel Elated at Volume of Christmas Trade.

Christmas of 1904 has gone into history!

Christmas day in Peterborough was spent very quietly, but the true Christmas spirit was abroad, and fully appreciated. The fact that the holiday came on Sunday, giving two full days from business, induced many to leave town, who would not otherwise have done so had there been only one day, consequently the trains running out of Peterborough on Saturday were crowded, and many hundreds of citizens spent the two days with out-of-town friends.

The railway traffic this year was almost, if not quite as heavy as that of last year, which was the largest in the history of Canadian railways. Saturday's travel, however, was spread over a greater number of trains than was the case a year ago, consequently it was easier to handle, and as a result the trains were running more closely to time, nearly all the C.P.R. and G.T.R. trains got away within half an hour of their regular time, the Port Hope train on Saturday night, however, was late, leaving here about two hours behind time, part of the delay being caused by the Belleville local being late.

On the whole, however, the crowds were handled, and little fault was found.

Peterborough was more highly favoured than most Ontario cities in one respect at least. We had sleighing, a pleasure which most places had to forego, and it was enjoyed here to the full.

The church services on Sunday were well attended and the services themselves were of the Christmas character, the music in each being well prepared, and as well rendered.

Yesterday was spent quietly in town. Many visitors were here spending the day with friends, but the majority devoted the day to inside pursuits.

The skating rinks were well patronized both afternoon and evening yesterday. The band was at the street railway rink, and a large number of skaters took advantage of this to enjoy a skate in the open air. The Brock street rink, however, has lost none of its popularity. The attendance there yesterday according to the information gained from the superintendent was considerably larger than that of a year ago, and the ice was perfect before the hundreds of skaters cut it up some.

Last night the Karnot Hockey Club Ball was one of the chief social attractions, and it was well attended, and a splendid evening was enjoyed.

The smoker at the T.A.S. rooms was another event which attracted a goodly number, who were treated to a first class concert.

The merchants of Peterborough, as a whole, have no reason to be dissatisfied with their Christmas trade of 1904. Numbers have informed the Examiner that their trade this year was the best they have ever had in their history, and Saturday's sales mounted away up into the big figures.

This is a particularly pleasing feature, because, it was feared that for several reasons the Christmas trade this year would not be up to that of 1903.

REMEMBERED SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER

Mr. J.J.Jefferies Presented with Ebony Back Mirror.

Mr. J. J. Jefferies, who teaches a young men's Bible class in the George street Sunday school, was remembered very kindly by the members of the class on Christmas Eve. A beautiful double ebony mirror was presented to him by his class on Saturday, accompanied by the Christmas wishes of the givers.

Needless to say, Mr. Jefferies appreciates the action of the young men in thus remembering him again this Christmas.

GIFT GIVING AT CHRISTMAS

A Delightful day at the First Church of Christ Scientist.

The services on Sunday in connection with the First Church of Christ Scientist, Aylmer street, were of an appropriate and deeply spiritual character. The lesson from the Bible, and correlative passages from the text book, was "God," evolving the higher development of Christian life and thought. Golden text, II Sam. 22, 33; responsive readings, Ps. 67; 95, 1-7. Reader, Mrs. R. J. Todd; second reader, W. Todd. The Christmas anthem, by Mrs. Eddy, entitled "Christmas Morn," was pleasingly sung by the Misses McClellan, Grace Todd, Mabel Young and Stella Bailey. The Sunday School scholars were kindly remembered by their teachers and friends, each scholar being presented by several loving gifts. Mrs. Todd, the superintendent, was the recipient of an appropriate gift from the Sunday school.

NARROW ESCAPE OF MISSES LEE

Leaking Gas Main Almost Results Fatally

Miss Addie and Miss Emma Lee's Narrow Escape on Christmas Night.

On Christmas night Miss Addie and Miss Emma Lee, two well known ladies, had a very narrow escape from death. It appears that opposite their residence on the corner of Smith and George streets, there is a leak in the gas main, and the gas has been escaping into the cellar of this and other houses in the vicinity.

It became so strong Sunday night that one of the young ladies was taken ill and awoke to find that her sister was in even a worse condition than herself.

She was very weak, but managed to get outside and reached the house of her uncle, Mr. John Lee, who lives next door, whom she awakened and immediately fell in a faint.

Mr. Lee went into the house and rescued the other young lady, and at once sent for Dr. Scott.

Both ladies were very ill, and if they had not been attended to at once it is doubtful if they would have recovered.

DID NOT SURVIVE HIS SERIOUS INJURIES

Thomas J. Byers Died Last Sunday Morning at His Home.

Mr. Thos. J. Byers, who about two months ago was seriously injured in a runaway accident, died at her home, 627 George street, on Sunday morning. In the accident he sustained a broken leg, a fractured arm and internal injuries, his death being caused by the effects of the latter trouble. He underwent treatment for several weeks at the Nicholls Hospital, and until a few days ago, hopes were entertained of his recovery, but he passed quietly away on Sunday morning.

The late Mr. Byers was a teamster and contractor. He was 53 years of age, and leaves three sons and two daughters, all of town.

The funeral took place this morning to the cemetery at Omemee.

A PLEA FOR FREE DELIVERY.

Scenes at the Post Office Yesterday, Described.

"Indignation" Wants a Free Delivery as the Only Remedy.

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir, — After the scenes that have been enacted at the Peterborough post office lately, and which reached a climax yesterday, when children were crushed, and ladies (and men, too) had the sleeves torn out of their coats, is it not time that the proper authorities took action at once, and gave us postal facilities worthy of the importance of this town? The crush and jam at the post office yesterday was a disgrace to the town. It was brutal. It was simply a case of the weaker going to the wall. The scene was more like a Rugby football match than a civilized people endeavouring to get their mail. How long will our merchants, (for the extra cent postage they would have to pay for their dunners and circulars) stand in the way and oppose the people of Peterborough getting a free delivery service? An extra wicket might relieve, but it would only be a makeshift. Free street delivery is what is wanted, and what we must have.

A CONTEST IN NORTH MONAGHAN

Two Candidates in the Field for the Reeveship.

Township Nominations Held Yesterday —Address of Warden Hunter— County Affairs Discussed.

(Special to the Examiner)

North Monaghan, Dec. 26. — Nominations for the township council of North Monaghan, were held yesterday at the town hall, North Monaghan, with Mr. G. W. Bennett, the township clerk, acting as returning officer.

The fight for the reeveship will be between the present occupant of the office, Mr. J. Madill, and Mr. Robt. A. Dobbin.

The nominations were:

For Reeve —:

J. McIntosh, by J. Holmes and D. Doig.

Jos. Madill, by J. Armstrong and Adam King.

Robert A. Dobbin, by R. Lillico and Jas. Fowler.

Mr. McIntosh subsequently withdrew, leaving the two latter in the field.

For Councillors:—

J. Holmes, by W. G. Howden and T. Williams.

Geo. E. May, by J. Armstrong and Adam King.

J. Brown, by J. Armstrong and Adam King.

Robert Fowler, by John Lynch and Robert Sanderson.

Jonathan Smith, by J. Armstrong and Adam King.

J. Merrow, by J. Armstrong and Adam King.

After the nominations were closed Mr. G. W. Bennett was elected chairman, and a meeting held at which each of the candidates for municipal honours was given the opportunity of making short addresses in support of their candidature. The reception given to each was exceedingly cordial and great interest was shown in the respective candidates by the ratepayers without exception. The meeting was of that spirit which bespeaks a lively, yet friendly rivalry for the seats of honour for the year 1905.

A feature of the meeting was the presence of Mr. T. M. Hunter, warden of the county of Peterborough, and Mr. Robert Costello, a candidate for the county council for the Bridgenorth Division. They were called upon for a few remarks.

Mr. Hunter was given a very attentive hearing. He said it was very gratifying to him to know that though he had started at the bottom of the ladder, he had with the support of the electors, reached the top, and as now he was retiring he felt sure that he had made nothing but friends during his municipal career. He felt that to be posted in county affairs it required a second term, but as far as he was concerned he did not at the present time look forward to a further term in office. In referring to the present County Council Act, Mr. Ross had said that nearly every member of Parliament began his career in the municipal council.

In the council during his term there had been a great many important matters dealt with. Amongst other things was the straightening out of the finances. This had been done to the satisfaction of all, and instead of a large overdraught in 1903, there was a credit balance of about $1200.

In the two years Mr. Hunter had fought for grants towards the maintenance of roads in North Monaghan and had been successful in getting a Government grant for this purpose.

Altogether he did not approve of these special grants, as in many cases they did not directly benefit the municipality to which they were given. There are about seven wooden bridges to rebuild in the county, these will have to be built in the next 10 years, and such a large expenditure as this will make it practically impossible to reduce the county taxes in that time. In a county and town of such importance as the County and Town of Peterborough it was necessary to keep up the roads and bridges in a first class condition.

On being asked for his views on the County House of Refuge, Mr. Hunter stated that the Hon. Mr. Stratton had said that if the County would take care of their poor the Government would not require a strict observance of the compelling clause of the act.

It would cost from $25,000 to $30,000 to build it and about $5,000 to $7,000 annually to maintain it. There were already two charitable institutions in Peterborough and in his opinion it was not necessary to undertake the expense of a County House of Refuge at the present time.

Mr. Costello had great pleasure in coming before the electors of North Monaghan again. He had been used very generously by the ratepayers of the township four years ago. He was looking for a second term, and if elected would give a good account of himself. He hoped to receive the Wardenship during the term. He was opposed to a certain extent in his own township.

His opponent had been defeated with Mr. Foster; he had come out and won, and he felt that a second term for him would be a great benefit for the division.

Mr. Costello had never promised to retire from the council when elected before.

If the electors of North Monaghan came forward and give him a fair support he would be elected.

Mr. Costello and Mr. Hunter expressed the opinion that the affairs of the county would be better looked after if the council was constituted by the election of the Reeve to the County Council.

THE SPEECHES.

The Mayor-elect, Mr. Henry Best, was called upon for a few remarks, after receiving his nomination. He thanked the gentlemen who had nominated him, and said he would exert every effort to prove himself worthy of the confidence which had been placed in him. At the present time he did not propose discussing details of municipal affairs, but would do so at the public meeting to be held next Thursday. He was of the opinion that it would be of advantage to increase the tax rate and pay for local improvements out of the current income.

Ex. Mayor Roger congratulated his successor on his election. Mr. Best had had a long experience of a practical nature in municipal affairs, and had for a lengthy time been chairman of the Board of Works. He had always devoted himself to the affairs of the town and Mr. Roger felt sure he would make a capable Mayor. He discussed briefly the nature of the two bylaws to be voted on next Monday. It was his opinion that the town had come to pave the central portion of George street.

Mr. Jas. Stevenson thought that more care should be taken as regards expenditure, and ex-Mayor Yelland also spoke along this line.

Mr. Hartley thought that all the ratepayers were anxious for the prosperity of the town. He did not believe in spending money unnecessarily, but there were times when money had to be spent. There should, however, be careful consideration before any money was spent.

MR. JOHN TROMBLEY WAS WATCHED

The Members of C.G.E. Angling Club Honour him on Christmas Eve.

At 6.30 o'clock on Christmas Eve, the home of Mr. John Trombley, 442 Charlotte street, was invaded by about a score of the members of the C. G. E. Angling Club, who came to do honour to their "chef," who, for the past four years has performed his duty of chief cook in a most admirable manner. The occasion was an entire surprise to Mr. Trombley, but it was a most pleasant surprise. Mr. Trombley is one of the club's most popular members, and it was a delight for the fishermen to honour him.

Mr. A. W. Patterson read the following address, after which Mr. J. Wilson made the presentation of a beautiful gold watch, chain and locket bearing the following inscription: "Presented to John Trombley by the C. G. E. Angling Club, 1904." The locket was also engraved.

The address was as follows:

Mr. John Trombley, chief cook,—

Dear Sir, — The members of the C. G. E. Angling Club take this opportunity of expressing their hearty appreciation for the many favours you have conferred on them in the past four years. We have always found you a jovial companion and a painstaking official in looking after the inner wants of the hungry fishermen. No matter how large the denizens of the deep, your ability as "chef" had no limits.

We ask you to accept this token as a slight remembrance of the many hours we have whiled away around the camp fire. May we ever see your benign countenance at our outings and around our festive boards, feeling that when you provide no one goes hungry.

Wishing you and your family a Merry Christmas and a Happy New year.

Signed on behalf of the members of the C. G. E. Angling Club:

John Wilson, J. A. Sharpe, R. H. Shepherd, J. A. Brown, A. W. Patterson, J. Begley, W. T. Milliard, J. Williams, L. Patterson, W. H. Smith, F. A. Shannon, F. Bradburn, C. Gilbert, G. Tovey, H. Latimer, M. Breckenridge, T. Moldon, J. McCabe, F. Post, E. Sanders, G. Scott, W. Hill, N. Munroe, F. Howson, J. Y. Gerrard, J. O'Brien, J. Panter, F. Reutsch, J. Fuller, J. T. Anderson, R. McKeown, J. Mills, F. Derocher, F. Pope, D. Carlyle, J. Glover, J. G. Scott, F. A. Taylor, B. E. Layfield, S. Bennett.

Mr. Trombley was taken completely by surprise, but he replied in a neat speech, thanking the club most heartily for their kind remembrance.

ANNUAL BALL A GOOD SUCCESS

Karnot Hockey Club Ball Last Night Was Enjoyed.

The first annual ball of the Karnot Hockey Club held last night was a splendid success. There were about 30 couples present, and a delightful evening was spent. The affair was held in the Labour Hall, Water street, which was very tastefully decorated for the occasion.

Music was supplied by Wilson's orchestra and was perfectly satisfactory. Mr. W. J. McCallum, supplied the refreshments. The Club will hold an At Home in the near future.

ONE STEPPED ASIDE.

Other Workman Was Struck By a Train and Killed.

Montreal, Dec. 24.—Two workmen took a short-cut to their work yesterday morning over the St. Henri Bridge of the G.T.R., over the Lachine Canal. With their coat collars turned up round their ears, they did not hear the approaching Cote St. Paul train, and Cleophas Montpelit was hurled to the ice below and was killed. His companion stepped aside in time to avoid the train. Montpelit leaves a family and sick wife at home, who could not be told of her husband's death, for fear it would kill her.

Another fatality also took place at 259 City Hall avenue, when Miss H. Malcheiosne set fire to her clothing while removing hot ashes and burned to death.

Foot Crushed; Arm Broken.

Toronto Junction, Dec. 24.—William Keaney, 21 years of age, and a fireman on the C.P.R., while preparing last evening for a run to Havelock in the city yards at the foot of John street, was knocked down by an engine. Both feet were very badly crushed and his right arm was broken.

Runaway Killed Him.

Peterboro, Dec. 24.—Michael Cadagan, who was severely injured in a runaway accident, recently, died in St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday. He was about 69 years of age, and was a resident of Ennismore all his life. He leaves a wife and four children.

His Life For His Cash Box.

Winnipeg, Dec. 24.—John Currie, an old resident of this city was cremated in his house, which was destroyed by fire a few minutes after midnight yesterday, and residents of adjoining buildings had a narrow escape from sharing his horrible fate. Evidently, he sacrificed his life in attempting to save a cash-box, which was found under his head. The victim was 77 years of age.

Fatal Rear-End Collision.

Paris, Dec. 24.—During a dense fog which completely disorganized traffic, the London-Boulogne express ran into the Lille express, outside the North station, smashing the last carriage of the Lille express. Six corpses have been recovered, and it is feared that more are under the engine. A score of wounded have been taken to hospitals. All the victims are French.

CHRISTMAS TREES.

Where They Come From and How They Are Sold.

Where do all the Christmas trees come from? You would think there were not enough to supply the huge demand, but in almost all parts of the country there are big pine, fir and cedar tree forests that remained undisturbed for centuries until Mark Carr gave Americans the idea of cutting them for Christmas.

It used to be that Maine furnished 90 per cent of them, and for two months before the holiday the woodmen were busy chopping and the farmers were busy carting them to the stations, where they were loaded into cars and sent west and south to be sold to the dealers. Today Maine has rivals, and all the northern border states deal regularly in Christmas trees. Christmas tree selling is a paying business nowadays, and it is entered into with all the formality and shrewd business methods that you might use in disposing of acres of land.

The woods that furnish spruce and fir are sold on contract, and the jobber visits them in October to "size them up." He offers so much apiece for each tree as the trees run—usually about $3 a hundred—and makes the money payable on receipt of the package of trees at the nearest railroad station. On their arrival in the city the jobber sells them to the wholesaler, getting about $7 a hundred for the trees, after which the wholesaler sells them to the retailer at a good profit, and the retailer does his best to get big prices from the housewife and the head of the family.

The boughs of fir bring the highest price because of their symmetry and grace. After them come the stiffer pine and cedar, but when they are covered with gorgeous tinsel and brilliant baubles and strung with popcorn, candy, toys and presents you really do not see much of the form of the tree.

One of the most remarkable facts about the Christmas greens lies in connection with the people who handle them. Christmas tree merchants do a rushing business and work steadily from October to the 1st of January, after which they take a vacation and are the laziest of all idlers from January to the next October. Their season is only three months long, but they have to "step lively" during that time or it will pass them by unremunerated. —Washington Star.

PEG DRESSES.

A Grandmother's Hint About Gowns and Their Wearing.

"The way to be well dressed," said grandmother, "is never to have 'peg dresses.' That was my mother's rule, and I have always made it mine.

"What are 'peg dresses?' Why, gowns that hang in one's closet, are not often worn and get a little out of style. They are apt to be the 'best gowns,' by which I mean those for dressy occasions. Most of us have but one, which is worn so seldom that it becomes a problem to keep it always in style, for there is a limit even to the changing of sleeves and alteration of the adornment of lace. When that is reached the owner must be firm with herself and discard the dress in its present form. For this reason I think it a good plan to have this gown of rather inexpensive material and let its beauty be in the way it is made; then when it must step down from its high estate we can put the scissors to it with better grace, for I have always found that it takes moral courage to attack a rich gown which is just too much out of fashion to wear. As this dress must be made over, I think it well to purchase a material that will afterward be suitable to go with the rest of the wardrobe either as fancy waist, trimming or perhaps as silk petticoat."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Christmas Deal

By FREDERIC TREAT.

It was Christmas eve at the Eyrie, the country seat of the Martins, set on a pinnacle in the hills. The place had been opened for the holidays, and the family, with a number of guests, formed a delightful "house party." Tonight general merrymaking was in order. In the hall before the great open fireplace, in which logs were blazing, sat Edith Martin with Ralph Arnold, a recent arrival from the west who had been devoted to her since they had first met, a week before.

"You are not in harmony with the occasion," he said to her. "Instead of a happy Christmas look on your face there is a troubled one."

She drew back for a moment as if withholding a confidence, then suddenly let it all out.

"I must tell you," she said, "but you are not to breathe a word to any one. He is coming by the train that arrives at 11:40 and will be here at 12. He must go back to the city early tomorrow on important business, and"—here she lowered her voice to a whisper—"I am to accept him before this gay night is over."

"Who is he?"

"John Trotter, dealer in foreign laces, a thorough business man and rich. Papa has lost a great deal of money by the shrinkage in stocks, and Mr. Trotter is going to help him ever so much to enable him to hold what he has till the market rises again."

THE DOOR OPENED AND MR. TROTTER ENTERED.

"And the bonus is your hand?"

"That's very near the truth."

"The contract is to be signed at 12 midnight?"

"I have promised that if Mr. Trotter will come up this evening I will give him my answer."

"It will be yes?"

"It must be yes."

"That is, if he arrives."

"If he doesn't I shall have to nerve myself anew on another occasion."

"How much money is he to loan your father?"

"Papa said it was something like half a million."

"I think they might have left you to spend this Christmas happily. How miserable it is to be poor! If I were rich I might save you this sacrifice, and"— He paused reflectively.

"You wouldn't charge any bonus," she was looking very steadily at the leaping flames.

"Oh, the bonus! It wouldn't be any kindness to you to take you out of the frying pan and put you into the fire."

"I'd rather burn on a gridiron than sizzle in a pan."

The young man sat toying with his watch chain. Had the girl looked at him she would have seen that the expression on his face was not in keeping with the unemotional tones of his voice.

"If he fails to arrive on time and it is possible for you to jump into the fire, will you do so?"

"There is no fire to jump into."

There was another pause. The logs were crackling; the fire was sending a genial warmth and light through the paneled hall. From the rooms adjoining came shouts of laughter as some one was caught and kissed under the mistletoe.

"I am a promoter," said Arnold presently. "It is my business to secure funds for carrying out enterprises. Suppose I could get this loan for your father?"

They were speaking very deliberately—so deliberately that one might have thought they were two people of business making a bargain.

"At the same interest he will pay Mr. Trotter?" she asked.

"How much is that?"

"Now I think of it, I heard papa say 4 per cent."

"That would be satisfactory."

Miss Martin may have been considering the matter of interest. At any rate, it was some time before she reached the next step.

"The bonus?" she asked under her breath.

"That would depend upon whether you would rather 'burn' than 'fry,' or, rather, whether you prefer neither to burn nor fry."

"It would not be fair to withhold the bonus. Nevertheless if it were a burden instead of a blessing"—

He did not help her out. Instead he took out his watch and noted the hour. It was five minutes to 12.

"It is understood and agreed," he said, "that if the party of the first part doesn't show up when the clock strikes 12 the party of the second part shall consider herself released from signing the contract and will make the same arrangement with the party of the third part—that in lieu of the sum of half a million dollars at 4 per cent interest"—

"The bonus?" She was losing her business equanimity, tapping her foot on the lion skin beneath it. There remained only a few minutes to 12, and the party of the first part might walk in at any moment.

"The bonus shall be optional."

"With whom?"

"The party of the second part."

"But the party of the third part?"

"Will only accept it entire. The heart must go with the hand."

"It's a bargain," she said, extending her hand, which he grasped. At the same moment the clock at the other end of the hall began to strike the hour. It was an old fashioned timekeeper with enormous weights and wheezed out its arithmetic strokes with provoking slowness. The pair sat motionless, their clasped hands concealed under a fold of the lady's dress, their eyes turned upon the front door. Each stroke brought them nearer to a consummation of their bargain. At the fourth there was a tinkle of the electric doorbell. At the eighth a servant passed the couple on his way to open the front door. Arnold put out his foot, and the man went sprawling on the floor. At the eleventh stroke the servant was on his feet and rubbing his shins. At the twelfth he proceeded on his way. There was a pressure between the two concealed hands. In another moment the door opened and Mr. Trotter entered.

But what entered with him? Christmas morning. Twenty such mornings had come in the lifetime of Edith Martin, but none that brought her such relief and at the same time such happiness as this one. Instead of being obliged to sacrifice herself to save her father she had accepted a man whom the first moment she saw him she knew to be the man she could love.

Ralph Arnold was indeed a promoter and had made a fortune in organizing gold mines. The day after Christmas he telegraphed his acceptance of an offer he had had for his principal mine and loaned the proceeds to Mr. Martin, who in six months regained all he had lost. Mrs. Ralph Arnold on last Christmas eve, sitting before a blazing fire beside her eldest daughter, now sixteen, told her the story of her Christmas deal.

Christmas Service in Stable.

At Santa Cruz, Cal., there is an old Spanish church in which the people worship only on Christmas eve. Internally it looks like a stable and has no chandelier. The floor and walls are of stone, and on the eastern side there is a manger, looking through the bars of which one sees the scenes of the Nativity, with the towers of castles and palaces in the distance. In the foreground the Virgin sits by the manger, holding the infant Saviour, with St. Joseph leaning over her and the wise men offering sheep, oxen and various precious gifts. Outside this exterior stable there are figures of men carrying sheep and calves on their shoulders, hastening to the sacred scene. In this chapel worshipers remain all night on their knees. This manger side of the church is against the east wall, high upon which is the only window in the edifice, so that the first rays of the morning sun irradiate the scenes of the Nativity. The rays lend a roseate glow, and as soon as this reaches the worshipers they leave the church, light cigarettes and begin their festivities.

Visitors in Parliament.

The country cousin cares nothing for the Commons, but is all eagerness to visit the House of Lords. He persists in taking the clerks at the table for the Prime Minister and the leader of the Opposition. He asks for Mr. Balfour, and on being shown a pair of boots on the table brutally demands the Prime Minister's head, which, according to Mr. Lloyd-George, may be anywhere but on the treasury bench. "Where does Mr. Healy sit?" is an inquiry neatly countered by the reply that it is sometimes on Mr. Redmond, and the embodiment of the law seated on the woolsack prompts the query. "Is it alive?" a question to which Mr. Lloyd-George's dissenting friends in Scotland would mournfully respond, "Very much so."—London Outlook.

Practising Medicine at Ninety.

Longevity of Irishmen is proverbial, but even in that country for a doctor to be in practice at the age of ninety is unique. Dr. Woods of Birr has that distinction, and at the last meeting of the district board of guardians it was decided to grant him a full superannuation allowance.

Popular with his patients, whom he visited on a bicycle, the venerable practitioner strenuously objected to retiring when the proposal was first brought forward. He urged that he was willing and able to earn his salary and did not wish to take money from the public that he did not earn. —London Globe.

The Day of Hope.

The day of the Nativity is the day of hope—the day of hope to the struggling conscience of man; to the human nature which is uplifted in Christ and made partaker of God; to the families of men who believe that sacred human love is not given to perish with the earth, but in Christ is destined to some eternal purpose; to all who labor and pray for the coming of a kingdom where God shall reign in men, and men shall live in peace and good will, where

The war drum shall throb no longer and the battleflags be furl'd

FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS MAY PROVE FATAL. THERE IS CURE FOR YOU IN

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE.

Consumption and pneumonia always have their beginnings in a cold.

If you take prompt means of curing every cold you will never be a victim of these or other fatal lung troubles.

Did you ever stop to think of it that way?

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is best known on account of its extraordinary control over croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and severe chest colds.

As a means of overcoming ordinary coughs and colds, throat irritation and the many diseases of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, it has made an enviable reputation for reliability.

Pleasant to take, thorough and far-reaching in action, and certain in its beneficial results, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine should have a place in every house as a safeguard against consumption and other fatal lung diseases.

Mrs. J. Provost, Renfrew, Ont., states: "My fourteen-year-old boy had a very severe cold in the chest last winter, and I really though he was going to die. He coughed nearly all the time and sometimes would spit up blood. We had about given up all hope of his recovery, when I heard of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. After using one bottle there was a great change in his condition and I can positively say that he was completely cured by two bottles, and he has not been troubled since. I never saw medicine take such quick effect, and I can sincerely recommend it."

The Substitute

By WILL N. HARBEN,

Author of "Abner Daniel," "The Land of the Changing Sun," "The North Walk Mystery," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, by HARPER & BROTHERS

(Commenced Dec. 12)

Buckley did not encourage the old man to continue talking. He dipped his pen in the ink as if to resume work, and Hanks sauntered away. The ink dried on the pen in George Buckley's tense fingers. Finding himself alone, he turned around and for several minutes sat staring vacantly in front of him. His face was pale, his brows drawn together.

"Oh, my God, how am I going to face this?" he said suddenly. "I have been a blind, stupid idiot. She has simply been treating me as she has out of pity. She'll marry that man; she'll do it. It's the way of the world—her world. Oh, God, give me the manhood to meet it!"

Suddenly Hillyer loomed up in the outer doorway and came into the office. He had heard nothing that had fallen from the lips of his clerk, but he saw his gloomy face. "Somebody's told 'im," he thought. He started to speak, but changed his mind and sat down, his countenance very grave. There was one subject he had never broached to George Buckley—a subject that the young man had made him feel was not to come up between them, and yet—

"George," Was the result of the old man's sudden impulse, and he stood near Buckley's elbow, "I axed the Almighty fer a sign that I was on the right road to peace o' mind an' got it. I want to say to you now, my boy, that in every prayer I send up from this minute on I'm goin' to plead with 'im to give you all you want in this life. Do you understand? All—everything!"

George turned; the tensity of his features had given place to an inexpressible softness, into which a delicate flush was rising. He laid his hand on the old man's shoulder and smiled.

"I'm getting already more than I deserve, Mr. Hillyer," he said. "Don't bother about me."

"I've told you what my prayer is to be, George; we'll see if a God as good as ourn is won't grant it."

"A fellow can stand a great many disappointments, Mr. Hillyer, when he has as good a friend as I have in you."

The old man's lower lip was quivering helplessly. "It's awful—simply awful," he said, "to want to help folks you love an' cayn't, an' have to stand by with hands an' feet tied. An', George, that fellow they're all makin' so much over today is a low ring politician without any honor or a soul bigger'n a gnat's. He heads the procession, with his white shirt full o' diamond studs, shiny broadcloth an' silk hat, an' weak women fawn on 'im an' think he's God Almighty, but I tell you he's as empty as a bottle o' wind. He's goin' to make a speech to the children at Sunday school, an' the programme is fer 'em to decorate the altar with flowers. I hain't a-goin', George. That hain't what God's house is fer, an' ef I went I'd set thar with a heart full o' rebellion."

George stared at his friend with an expression on his face the old man had never seen before. It contained a frank admission of his helpless captivity to Lydia Cranston's charms, and yet it reflected tense manliness—manliness bound, bowed and beaten.

"He has been courting her over a year, Mr. Hillyer," Buckley said under his breath.

"So I've heard, George."

"She writes to him—she mentioned that to me once. She showed me some presents he had sent her—flowers from his own hothouse and other things. He's followed her everywhere; she accepts these attentions. Her family all favor the match."

"She's jest a woman, George—jest a woman, after all—and they are all pine blank alike except in the sight of the different men who dote on 'em."

George Buckley's face hardened as if under a sudden reflection. "In all your hopes for me, Mr. Hillyer," he said, "don't forget that I am the son of a Georgia convict. Remember that, and don't be too ambitious for me. I was stupid and blind to allow myself to—to become her—friend under the circumstances. I ought simply never to have entered that house. But—now listen, and let's never allow this to come up again. No matter what I suffer now or am to suffer in the future, I shall never, never be sorry I knew her. You say women are all alike. I can never agree with you, but even if she becomes his wife, and is proud in a way to bear his name, there will still be something, sir, behind—something that I have almost seen and grasped—something, Mr. Hillyer, that came up in her eyes once, only once, and then darted away as if frightened at the fear of the world's opinion. But, my God, Mr. Hillyer, for one second it was mine, and I have lived on it ever since and shall take its wonderful warmth to my grave."

"Oh, George, yon scare me!" gasped the merchant. "I didn't know you could"—

"Let's drop the subject forever," Buckley broke in suddenly. "You've confided in me; I have in you. God knows you have hope; I have none—none at all!"

CHAPTER XIV.

A STRONG man is to be pitied who deliberately shuns being thrown into contrast with a rival more fortunate in the estimation of the world. George was like a sensitive, high spirited dwarf trying to avoid seeing tall men. The whole town was going to hear the governor's address the next Sunday: the whole town was talking of his admiration for the belle of the place. For the remainder of the week George was uncertain what he should do, but when the eventful morning arrived he went to a livery stable, engaged a horse and buggy and drove out to his mother's. He might have chosen better, for the sordid surroundings of the farmhouse, which had never seemed like home to him in the highest sense, only made him feel more depressed.

"The Lord knows I'm astonished to see you," Mrs. Buckley said as she came to the door wiping her fat hands on her apron. "Why, all the settlement, it seems to me, has gone in town to see the governor, but somehow I didn't care to go. I'm too old to ride ten miles in a joltin' wagon to see jest a man. How do you come on?"

"I feel all right," George replied. "I didn't care to hear the speech."

"You say you didn't?" Mrs. Buckley's heavy brows ran together. She stood for a moment eying her son with sympathetic fixity. She had heard the rumor of the governor's attentions to Lydia Cranston. They were now in the sitting room, and he stood warming himself before the fire.

"Oh, George," she suddenly got out, "I wish you'd let me talk to you 'an' not git mad."

"Mad? Why, mother," he exclaimed, "how could I get mad at you?"

The old woman sat down in her low chair in the chimney corner. "You are my boy," she said, a tremor in her gentle voice, "an' some things hurt—cut me to the quick. Oh, George, I wish you would sort o' be content with common folks like we all are. You are as good, every bit an' grain, as that Virginia gal, but somehow she's situated different. Now, fer instance, they say she's got a chance, an' a good one, to marry the governor."

"I think she has," George said coldly, his lips tightening, "but what of that, mother?"

"Oh, it nearly kills me to have folks think yon—you want to get some'n' an' cayn't," replied the old woman plaintively. "An', George, as things go in this world, Lydia Cranston will have to take that offer. She cayn't git around it. Gals kin have the'r choice, an'—mind you, I don't know a thing—she may, down in her heart, like you the best on account o' you bein' younger an' better lookin', but folks in her walk o' life, I reckon, have to sorter look to the future. Her folks will make her, ef she draws back. George, I—I hope you don't feel bad about it."

"Mother, I'm all right." He sat down before the fire. He looked out through the small paned window upon a wide stretch of cotton land where he had toiled through his boyhood. To the left, inside the garden fence, was the log smokehouse, the barn and stables; to the right, the yard where the chickens and ducks were scratching the earth for food. The old woman said nothing—there was nothing she could say, for his reply had not reassured her.

"Why do you think anything is wrong with me?" he suddenly asked. "Has anybody"—

"You cayn't keep folks' mouths shet," Mrs. Buckley said. "You've got more friends 'an any boy in all this mountain country, but even a body's best friends will git jealous when he begins to rise in the world. Most of 'em thought you was flyin' too high, George, all along—in visitin' the best in Darley—an' they are tickled to be able to circulate the report that she's goin' to marry the governor of the state. You see, they kin say that an' not seem to be talkin' agin you, but they are chucklin' all the same."

"I can't help their talking nor their thinking," Buckley said, with a sigh.

"But I believe I'd put a bold face on it an' laugh at the idea o' marryin' anybody right now. Then I'd sorter slack off from goin' to the Cranstons'. George, I kin stand anything better, it seems to me, than havin' 'em all think you are miserable over it, an' when the wedding takes place"—

"Then you count on it as a certainty, do you?" His face clouded over, and, in spite of his self control, his voice rang harshly.

She stared at him pityingly. "Thar's no use talkin' about it," she said softly. "George, you hain't ready to admit it, an' that's the wust sign of all. You jest cayn't see it like other folks, an' thar's jest one reason fer that—you cayn't stand to think it possible."

He voiced no denial. What was the use? The old woman, crude as she was, had known him from the first pulsation of the life that was now raging like a mad torrent within him. In his mind's eye he had a glimpse of the village church, packed to the doors with an eager, expectant crowd. He saw the flowers on the altar. There was a profound hush. The Cranston carriage had driven up. The governor of the state was assisting two ladies to alight. All eyes were on the party of four as they came in and moved unconcernedly to the Cranston pew. Lydia and the guest of honor were walking together. She was being admired, envied. George Buckley bowed his head; the red light from the fire touched his powerful neck and shoulders; he was sinking into the deepest abse of despair.

"Mind you, I'm not sayin' one word agin the gal," Mrs. Buckley broke into his reflections abruptly. "In fact, I like 'er. I can't tell you how much I do like 'er. Folks may swear they hate kings an' queens beca'se they stand above 'em, but they'll feel honored by the notice o' royal folks. That may be one reason I like Lydia Cranston. I don't know, I'm only human, but I jest feel like she's of a different order. Do you know the time you introduced me to 'er? Well, a woman knows a woman, no matter how different they've been raised, an' I seed that she was surprised to—to see that I was—well, jest like I am, but I tuk a strong likin' to 'er for the way she acted."

"The way she acted?" George Buckley spoke under his breath, but the woman heard.

"Yes; I could tell she was doin' 'er level best to make me feel easy, an' it made me like 'er. Then the next time"—

"The next time?" George was really surprised. "Did you meet her again?"

Mrs. Buckley was silent; her eyes had fallen. She had said more than she intended.

"Did yon say you met her again, mother—again?"

Mrs. Buckley looked up resolutely. "I never intended to mention that," she said, "an' I don't know as I ort to now, bein', as it seems, she never told you about it. But it was when she was over at Shirley Springs last week. One mornin' she come here to see me, an', George, as God is my judge, I never spent a happier hour in all my life. I don't know how it was, but she jest had a way o' makin' me feel good. Ef she ever thought she was better'n common folks, nobody could 'a' told it. I was piecin' a scrap quilt, an' she set down an' set to work on it. I never seed the like. Her little, slim, white fingers jest moved like lightnin'. An' talk! She could think o' more cheerful things to say than anybody I ever seed. It was that way till nigh 12, an' then she left. George—she kissed me!"

Buckley was staring, an unfathomable expression in his big, yearning eyes.

"She kissed you, mother? God bless her!" And he rose and put his arms about the old woman's neck. His eyes were glistening.

"Yes, she did twice, out at the gate. I never intended to tell you about that, fer I—I didn't think it was exactly the sort o' thing to—to make you take yore mind off'n 'er, but she did it, an' to my dyin' day I'll always think well of 'er an' stand up fer 'er. They may make 'er marry that man or some other in the'r circle, but fer about one hour me an' her was on the level God's been tryin' fer centuries to bring folks up to. Yes; she may not be strong enough to go her way with all them ropes tied to 'er, but ef she's ever a mother she'll be a good un—with a soul an' heart. I like 'er, George, an' I don't blame you fer acceptin' her friendship. Ef I was a man I would, ef that was all the crumb she ever drapped my way. Lovin' a woman like that's jest ambition, an' ambition's right an' upliftin'."

Mrs. Buckley was looking at her son, but he had turned his face away. He stood still, his features working, his strong breast heaving tumultuously.

"The Truitts are a-havin' a world of trouble with Jeff," said Mrs. Buckley irrelevantly. "Somebody set fire to the'r barn last night. They managed to put it out, but Jeff got another White Cap letter o' warnin' to skip out. It had a skull an' bones on it. Mrs. Truitt's been tryin' to git 'im to leave, but old Bascom won't let 'im go. Now, George, git the rifle an' shoot me the fattest chicken you see in the yard. I'm goin' to fry it fer you. I'll bet you hain't half fed thar at Hillyer's. Them nigger cooks don't know how to prepare a meal o' vittles."

"Mother"—he turned suddenly and resolutely on her—"you haven't told me all about her coming here."

"Yes, I have, George, s' help me God!"

"Not all you—thought, mother."

The woman hesitated, and then she faltered: "No, I'll admit that. George. How could I? I laid awake nearly all that night studyin' over it."

"Tell me what you thought, mother."

"Why, George? I"—

"Mother, this is the darkest day I have ever spent. I had one other as bad, but I drowned it in whisky, but now"—he smiled rigidly—"I am facing the music with a clear head. Mother, what did you think?"

"Well, George," after another pause, "I sorter believed she kissed me an'—an' looked like she wanted to cry in my arms beca'se I was yore mother. I never could make out—women are sech riddles, even to the'rselves—I never could make out whether it was a goodby kiss intended fer you or—or another sort. I watched her tell she got clean across the pasture field, an' she walked all the way with 'er head down. Now git the gun."

He sat down suddenly. "Mother, I couldn't kill a living thing today," he said. "I want everything to live and breathe. How can I give her up when—when she kissed you?"

CHAPTER XV.

ONE evening after supper in the middle of that week Kenner met George in the office of the Johnston House, the only hotel in the place. It was full of traveling salesmen and wagoners from the mountains, who had come in to sell their cotton. "I've been honeyfuggilin' some of 'em up," Kenner smiled, "telling 'em this is the best market, an' so forth, in the south. They'll git to believin' it after awhile. Ef you hain't got nothin' to do let's walk over to Bob Hanks' store."

George agreed, and they started out together. "That boy's a big puzzle to me," Kenner continued thoughtfully. "Sometimes I think Hillyer did right in backin' 'im in his business, an' then ag'in I think maybe his own daddy knows 'im better'n anybody else."

"Why, I thought Bob was simply doing wonderfully well," said George in surprise.

"Ef he'd jest let his old habits go he'd be all right," replied Kenner, "but the boys say he's as bad about flirtin' with the gals as he ever was. You know thar's a little orphan in Mrs. Styles' boardin' school on the hill. The gal's from Louisville, Ky.; she hain't more'n sixteen ef she's that, an' she's a purty, daredevil little trick. Well, you know the old lady's powerful particular about the gals under her charge, especially the boardin' pupils, but Bob manages to meet that gal two or three times a week unbeknownst to Mrs. Styles, an' they take walks an' buggy rides together. She's a bright little thing, an' the boys say she's simply crasy about Bob an' everything he does. He's jest havin' his fun; but, George, you know that's unbecomin' in a feller that's makin' the start Bob is. Why, we elected 'im on the board o' trade t'other night."

"I should think it was unbecoming of him," said George emphatically; "the boy ought to be talked to."

"I generally do my lecturin' to the young gang in a roundabout way," replied Kenner. "I always tell 'em the devilment I used to do an' make 'em feel like I'm one of 'em, an' then end up by showin' 'em whar I was wrong. I'm goin' to try to talk Bob out o' this prank o' his."

They found the young grocer in the rear of his store, with his coat off, directing a negro porter who was stacking a car load of flour in bags against the wall.

"Hello!" said Kenner. "How's business today?"

"Little off," replied Bob, "but a fair average; we are goin' to have a rush tomorrow. Did you see all them paper sacks full o' coffee and sugar on the counter as you come in? That's to save the boys time in weighing up. Look out there"—to the porter—"didn't I tell you to stack 'em straight?"

Kenner and George sat down at the stove and Bob drew up an empty candle box and sat on it. The negro finished his work and went to the front. "Looky' here, Bob," said Kenner, with a seductive smile, "I've been bankin' on you, my boy, an' scotchin' fer you, but you are gittin' old enough to sorter quit yore devilment. I've been hearin' about the way you are a-carryin' on with that little Louisville gal, an' I hated it."

'A CLEAN MAN.

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues and fibers in every organ of the body. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood.

Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh. It doesn't make the flabby fat of corpulency, but the firm flesh of health. It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol to inebriate or create craving for injurious stimulants.

Mr. John L. Conghenour, of Glen Savage, Somerset Co., Pa., writes: "My appetite was unusually poor, and I was as weak and nervous as though I had been starved for months. My heart kept throbbing continually and I was short of breath. Finally I wrote to you for advice and you informed me that I had indigestion and a torpid liver. I did not think your diagnosis was right, but I ordered six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' from you and began to use. After using three bottles I began to improve slowly and soon went to work, and I have been working ever since."

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe.

LONG LIST OF CANDIDATES

Results of the Municipal Nominations Held There Yesterday.

IMPROVEMENTS AT BROCK STREET RINK

This Popular Winter Resort More Popular than Ever.

That the Brock street rink this season, is more popular than ever, was demonstrated yesterday, when the rink had the greatest day in its history.

The number of skaters on the ice was largely in excess of that of any day since the rink was opened, and the ice was in splendid condition.

A coal stove has been placed in the ladies' waiting room, and other improvements have been made which add to the comfort and convenience of those patronizing the rink. The old arc lights have been discarded, and in their place ten enclosed are alternating current lights have been installed, the rink is now one of the best lighted in the province.

The season tickets are selling rapidly, many finding their way into the stockings of the youngsters for Christmas.

The management is doing everything possible for the comfort of the rink's patrons, and that these efforts are appreciated is amply evidenced.

THE CHURCHES.

PARK STREET BAPTIST.

Christmas sermons were preached by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Brace, to large congregations. The morning text was taken from Matt. 2; 20, last clause, "They are dead which sought the young child's life." The choir sang "Hark! What Mean Those Holy Voices," in a very acceptable manner. In the evening the text was found in Psalms 85; 10,—"Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other." The Misses Pillings sang in a very pleasing manner, "Star of the East," at the offertory, and the choir sang "Saviour Hear Me While Before Thy Feet," in good voice. The Ordinance of Baptism was administered at the close of the sermon.

An Outsider on Canada.

The Hon. Charles D. Haines of New York, a former member of the United States Congress, said in Toronto the other day: "My impression of Canada, in part or as an entirety, both as to country and people can but be inadequately expressed by using the word great.

"I am fascinated with the country as it is to-day and am astounded when I study the possibilities of its future.

"It must be conceded that the great majority of people, both of Great Britain and the United States, have looked upon Canada as a drear, cold, barren country, and the inhabitants of the provinces have been unfortunately unable to fully extirpate such impressions, and while these delusions to a large extent still exist, they are rapidly passing away, just as rapidly as Canada is making itself really known and understood to and by all the civilized world, as, for all practical purposes, it is an independent entity, with a future growth and development, social and financial, that will not be eclipsed by any other people.

"While New York has been talking canals for years, Canada quietly went ahead and built her magnificent artificial waterways, and changed the route of transportation over and through her own territory, to the great markets beyond the sea.

"New York marvels, but does not yet understand her friends across the border, who have a way of doing things first and talking after. Why should we not feel pride in having such a people as neighbors?"

His Order.

Mrs. Hoon—"Deacon Ironjaws has such a commanding way!"

Mr. Hoon—"Yes, I noticed that he passes the contribution box with an air which seems to say 'Present alms!'"

Naturally.

Throgmorton—What do you suppose Jonah did when he first arrived in the whale's anatomy?"

Codlington—"Well, under the circumstances, I should suppose that he sat down to blubber."

THE METRIC SYSTEM.

Seem to Be Approved in Canada and Enforced After Due Notice.

One of the most important features of Canadian legislation will be the adoption in the very early future of the metric system of weights and measures. Steps are already being taken to supply the school children with a knowledge of the metric tables, but ample notice will have to be given to business men before the change becomes operative. This notice may be five years, or the Governor-in-Council may have power to make the transition stage even longer than that. The reform is one, however, that must almost inevitably come. The civilized world, outside of Britain, the British colonies, and the United States, to-day knows no other system of measuring than the metric. In these latter countries, including Canada itself, the use of it has been optional for years, and both in the United Kingdom and in the United States the reform is being advocated. A bill providing for the abolition of the British system, as the old tables are called, was accepted by both Houses of the Imperial Parliament this year, and at the approaching session there is every reason to believe that the measure will pass all stages and become the law of the land. Committees of Congress have reported in favor of the metric system being made compulsory throughout the United States, but inquiry has shown that the domestic trade of the Union is strongly opposed to the change, knowing nothing of the advantages they would themselves reap by doing business on this, the simplest, clearest, and most complete system of measuring that the mind of man ever devised.

It may be of interest to Canadians to know that although the metric system was first applied in France, the idea was that of a great Englishman. At the Imperial Conference in London two years ago, when representatives were present of the British Government and all the self-governing colonies, the following resolution was adopted:

"That it is advisable to adopt the metric system of weights and measures for use within the Empire, and the Prime Ministers represented at this conference promise to give consideration to the question of its early adoption."

B.C. Indians Dying Out.

The Indian tribes of British Columbia, tortured by insidious disease, for the introduction of which the whites are primarily responsible, and face to face with the fact of rapidly diminishing numbers that bespeaks extinction in the near future, are adopting heroic measures in the hope of check-mating fate.

It is not race suicide in the general acceptance of the term that is to blame, but the usual penalty of the red race when it touches the white, for the vast majority of the tribes are by constitutional disease ruined, and when children are born they are unhealthy from birth.

Thinking men of the tribes are seeking external remedies, and the adoption of white children by stealth—varied with an occasional out-and-out purchase—is becoming common. Only a few years ago the chiefs and sub-chiefs of one of the Vancouver Island west coast tribes united to pay Peter Bellinger $4,000 for his five-year-old son, who was received with honor, elected a chief with elaborate ceremony and alloted six wives, the sturdiest young women of the tribe, in order that extinction might be averted. The boy was rescued by the provincial police and the tribe was left disconsolate.

Two white travelers returned from Quatsino last week with the news that in all that once numerous tribe there is now only one child, a boy; and after a long and interesting pow-wow, the Haidahs of Queen Charlotte Island have sent their little girl to Quatsino to be his playmate and bride.

The Aftermath of Xmas

The Holiday Shopping is all over, and this store is beginning to settle down to normal ways again. Our Christmas business was greater than it has ever been before, and our vast stock was pretty well picked over. Of course this picking leaves in its wake many things that are tumbled and bedraggled, and these have no place in a clean, fresh stock. So we've put them out and put hurry-out prices on them. Intrinsically, just as good as ever, merely lost a part of their good looks, that's all and for this you get the reduction on—

COMPREHENSIVE REVIEW OF ONTARIO GOVERNMENT'S RECORD

Hon. J. R. Stratton, Speaking in Mr. Anderson's Interest at Douro, Opens the Campaign in the East Riding—Clear, Concise Summary of Liberal Government's Administrative and Legislative Record—Clean, Capable, Honest, Financial Administration, Represented To-day by Nearly $3,000,000 Cash in the Bank, and Surplus of Assets Over Liabilities of Over $2,5000,000---Triumphant Success of Development Policy of Ross Government---Magnificent Administration of Crown Domain and Timber Resources, Both From Standpoint of Revenue and Preservation---Vindication at the Soo of the Government's Enterprising and Advance Policy--Excellent Results of Agricultural and Educational Administration---Auspicious Opening of Mr. Anderson's East Peterborough Campaign.

The opening meeting of the Provincial campaign in East Peterborough was held in the School building, Douro, on Tuesday evening. Considering the very severe weather and the bad state of the roads there was a large attendance of electors.

Mr. D. Maloney occupied the chair, and in opening the meeting said it gave him a great deal of pleasure to preside over the meeting. He had known Mr. Anderson for many years and knew only good of him. He was elected by a handsome majority at the election two years ago and he believed he would be returned by a good majority again. He had only been in the House two sessions and should be given a longer term. The Ross Government was deserving of the support of the people. It had been a progressive Government and that he was satisfied that Mr. Anderson would make a faithful and useful representative for East Peterborough. (Applause.)

The Candidate Speaks.

Mr. Anderson, who was very heartily recived, said this was the first meeting of the campaign, which would close on Jan. 25th. He was glad to meet the people of Douro on the present occasion. It had been the unanimous wish at the Liberal Convention that he should again be the candidate. He accepted the nomination as heartily as it had been offered. He had been in Parliament two sessions. He thought he was entitled to a longer term. His predecessor was there twenty-two or twenty-three sessions. He didn't want to be there that long, but he thought he might reasonably appeal to the people for an opportunity to serve them by a renewal of the confidence which had been so liberally placed in him at the last election. He regretted the retirement from the House of Hon. Mr. Stratton who was present to address them that evening. He had been a close observer of the doings of the Government and the vote of the Legislature for two sessions and he could not come to any other conclusion than that the Ross Government should be again returned to power. It had been a progressive Government. Its majority had been close but that did not seemingly interfere with the opening of the country and the application of measures to procure within the province the development of our great resources. He had taken a great deal of interest in agricultural affairs, as he was a farmer himself, and represented a farming constituency. He had watched the course of the Hon. Mr. Dryden, and noticed the progress of the great cheese and butter interests, and had been well pleased by the advances they had made under Mr. Dryden's care. The transportation of our farm products to market was a very important matter, and the importance of cold storage could not be over-estimated. The progress in this regard had been very satisfactory. The results were that to-day our cheese and butter were taking a prominent position, and were being asked for, and it was only be producing the best quality that we would be able to hold our own in the British markets. The Agricultural College was doing a good work for the farmers, and the hundreds of farmers' sons taught there every year, went out and became means of instruction in better farming methods wherever they located. The fruit industry of the province was becoming very important, and the attention given to this branch of industry try was very highly appreciated in the fruit growing districts. Every interest of the farmer had been well looked after. The financial position of the province was very satisfactory. There were nearly three millions in the bank, and this had been brought about after liberal expenditure in the promotion of the public interests. He did not intend making a speech on this occasion; he would leave that to Mr. Stratton, as his audience knew that he (Mr. Anderson) did not pretend to be a speaker. He hoped the splendid vote given him by East Peterborough and Douro, especially, the last election, would be repeated on Jan. 25th. The electors might feel satisfied that he would always vote for measures in the best interests of the province, and the constituency he had the honour to represent. (Applause.)

HON. MR. STRATTON'S ADDRESS

Hon. Mr. Stratton, who upon rising to speak was received with hearty applause, said he was glad to have an opportunity for the first time of addressing the electors of Douro. He was pleased to see so many of the electors present. It showed that they had an interest in the affairs of the Province and in the public issues upon which the present contest was to be fought, which was, primarily, the record of the Government and the manner in which they had discharged their important trust. On that account he was well pleased to see so many present. The Liberal Government welcomed the closest scrutiny of their record—the closer it was examined, the better—the more it was looked into, the more would the electors be convinced that the Ross Government had administered the affairs of the Province wisely, and were worthy of a renewal of confidence.

He was glad to be present to speak on behalf of Mr. Anderson, the Liberal candidate. He could very consistently put in a good word for him, for he was a good man. (Applause.) As a man they all knew that Mr. Anderson was of the highest standing—modest, moderate, upright and faithful to his ideas of what was right. Experience of him in various capacities had taught the people that in whatever position of trust or responsibility Mr. Anderson was placed he would do his duty to the utmost of his ability. He had had a long, and creditable as long, municipal experience and the faithfulness and attention to his duties he had shown in this regard justified the expectation that he would make a good parliamentary representative. True he had had only two sessions in which to show his quality as a representative, having been elected in 1902 by a good majority. But the speaker could testify to the good quality of service he had given in that time. As every one knew, Mr. Anderson did not let off many fireworks, but he was nevertheless a good steady, safe man, and a quiet but close student of provincial affairs. He knew well what was going on, had a thorough knowledge of and interest in the needs of his riding. During his time in the House he was faithful in his attendance on committees where the private member is able to do his most effective work. In his parliamentary experience he had never taken an unjustifiable stand. When vague sectarian cries had arisen he had pursued a straightforward course, seeing that equal rights were extended and that justice was done irrespective of creed or nationality. While he had been a member of the Government and of the House he had been glad to have colleagues like the late Mr. Blezard and Mr. Anderson, straightforward and honourable men. Now that he was for the present out of politics, except to address an occasional meeting, he was freer to express his mind in regard to the Ontario Government than when he was a member of that Government. The Premier of the Province was an able man, surrounded and assisted by able colleagues. He knew the wants and requirements of the Province of Ontario, and had the enterprise and progressive instincts to look forward and devise a policy intended to meet those requirements and develop the best of the great possibilities of Ontario. Premier Ross was no pessimist; he had faith in the future and resources of the country, and had inspired his followers with the same faith and hopefulness in the future of the Province and commanded a loyal co-operation in building up and developing Ontario in order to keep her in the front rank of the provinces of the Dominion. (Applause.)

Mr. Stratton remarked that he might be expected to say a few words in regard to his retirement from politics, and he stated that he found the time required for the faithful discharge of his official and representative duties demanded so much of his time and energies that the interests of his personal business were necessarily neglected, and in justice to those interests he had sought release from the responsibilities of office. Those who knew him would perhaps admit that what he undertook to do he aimed to do well, and if he could not give the necessary time and attention to his official duties without sacrificing private interests which it was the first duty of every man to protect, he was justified in retiring.

The people were advised that the elections for the eleventh parliament of Ontario would be held on January 25th. The Ross Government was appealing to the people for a renewal of confidence and the real issues upon which the people had to decide was how that Government had discharged the trust in the past, and what promise for future good government and good administration its policy presented. Judged by this standard the Government had nothing to fear from the verdict of the electors. So strong was the Government position in both these regards that the Opposition did not venture to seriously attack the legislative and administrative record of the Government, because that record was not susceptible of successful attack. True the Government was composed of men, and no set of men was perfect. There were bound to be some mistakes and errors of judgment, but the fair ground of judgment, the fair enquiry to be made was whether the Government had honestly aimed to do the best for the Province, and whether the general line of its administration was good and beneficial. One outstanding feature of the Government was that it was an honest Government. During its long tenure of power, there was neither available nor possible, any evidence to show that the members of the Government had been false to the promotion of the best interests of the Province, or that they have betrayed their trust in the slightest degree. All the legislation, of the Government, all its administration and all its expenditure had passed before the review of a vigilant Opposition, keenly alive in its own interest, if not that of the country, in the finding of flaws and wrong doings. And in all that time no wrong doing on the part of the Government had been disclosed, and, to-day the Premier of the Province is in the proud position of being able to defy any one to show that the Liberal administration had been corrupt, that members of the Government have traded in their positions for political support, that they had bartered public contracts for election funds, or that the Government in the discharge of its duty had permitted a single dollar of the some 125 millions of dollars that had passed through its hands, to be wrongfully expended or diverted from the purpose for which it was voted by the Legislature.

The Government's Financial Record.

This accounted for the fact that no province of the Dominion nor any other state or country stands in the proud financial position which Ontario occupies to-day. The true test of business capacity in a Government or in an individual was the successful management of financial interests. Money is the touchstone, in a material sense the main object of all our efforts. If you have a man who has managed your business for years and has done it well, you have confidence in him and consider him worthy of being in your service. If under his management of the business you find that your money has been honestly expended and for good value, if you find that the value of your estate has been increased; that every interest of your business has been well looked after, and that after all this you have a snug surplus of ready cash in the bank, would you not conclude that you have a good business manager, that your interests were safe in his hands, and that he was worthy of being retained in your employment? This is analogous to the relations of the Liberal Government to the financial administration of provincial affairs.

Mr. Stratton went on to generally summarize the situation—The provinces entered confederation on equal terms as to financial condition. The contrast now was to be noted. The province of Quebec had a net debt of $32,017,902; on the contrary, Ontario has no debt unprovided for, but after deducting liabilities, has a surplus of assets of $2,549,164.12, and on Dec. 12th, 1904, when the Legislature was dissolved, the province of Ontario had in cash in the banks the splendid sum of $2,730,290. During the year 1903 the province of Quebec paid in interest and charges on its public debt the enormous sum of $1,577,-563.19; while the province of Ontario the same year collected interest on investments to the amount of $195,257.16, and this year, up to December 15, 1904, Ontario has received as interest on trust funds held by the Dominion, and on special deposits in the banks, the sum of $210,-208. Mr. Stratton invited his hearers to note the contrast. Next year, the province of Quebec, before it could have a dollar it could call its own, to expend upon public services, would have to pay a million and a half dollars in interest on its debt, while, on the other hand, Ontario would start the year with over $300,-000 interest on its investments. This contrast was not made in order to gloat over the sister province, but to show the different results flowing from respectively good and bad management of provincial finances. Was the excellent financial position of Ontario achieved by corrupt and extravagant expenditure, or inefficient management? And has not a government under which such results had been accomplished, been faithful to its trust, and was it not worthy of a renewal of public confidence? These results had not been accomplished by a cheese-paring policy or by starving the public service. On the contrary, every branch of the public service has been made the subject of liberal expenditure in the interests of the people. The total receipts of the province of Ontario since confederation in 1867, has been $123,071,976, and the expenditures for the same period had amounted to $121,087,297.62. It was a fact to be noted that the great bulk of this expenditure had been made directly in the interests of the people. The money belonged to the people, and the Government regarded themselves in the light of trustees. Out of a total expenditure of $113,191,872, since 1871, when the Liberals came to office, more than 95 millions had been returned to the people in a form to lessen the necessity for municipal taxation, or for improvements, which would have had to be done without, or made by direct taxation. It was to be remarked that not only was there not a cent levied by direct taxation for provincial purposes, but that under the Liberal government the policy had been to make liberal expenditures to lessen direct taxation..

In this connection, Mr. Stratton remarked that it might be interesting to note to what extent Peterborough county had directly benefitted from the return of money to the people. During the time since 1871 there had been returned to the people in the manner mentioned, the very considerable sum of $959,999.41, almost a million dollars, represented by the following details:—

Mr. Stratton submitted, that in regard to the management of the financial interests, the record of the Government was an exceptionally strong and unassailable one. It had been judicious, clean and capable, marked by careful attention to the interests of the province. Money had been spent freely for public purposes, and our financial resources had, at the same time, been carefully husbanded, with such results as he had cited. No breath of scandal had been raised against a member of the Government in respect of the administration of our finances. Under such circumstances it was perfectly justifiable to appeal to the people for a renewal of the confidence which in the past had been so amply justified.

Agricultural Interests.

Associated with the Government's financial record, were the special interests that had been efficiently served by the Government. Of these the most important was that of agriculture, for the products of the farm exceeded the productions of the mine, forest, fisheries and manufactures combined. Since 1871, nearly five millions of dollars had been expended by the Liberal Government in the interests of the farmer. No reasonable men would say that this expenditure had been too large. As a matter of fact, it was a matter of regret that our financial resources would not, in relation to other interests, permit of its being greater, but it had been expended with such care and economy that the best results had been achieved—results that might be summarized in the statement of fact that the province of Ontario is the most advanced agricultural community on the continent, which is largely due to the fact that Hon. John Dryden, a practical farmer himself, is the most capable and successful administrator of an agricultural department on this continent. During his term as Minister of Agriculture, the farming methods of Ontario have been revolutionized. The impoverished and overcropped farms, yielding inadequate returns, have been restored by mixed farming, dairying, stock raising, etc. Mr. Dryden and his department, have been large factors in this revolution. Without, perhaps, realizing it, through the work of the Agricultural College, and kindred agencies, farmers have come to adopt more scientific farming, and with splendid results.

Since 1867, the capital invested in farm lands, buildings, etc., had increased by $181,722,772, and the total thus invested at the present time was over a thousand millions of dollars —$1,060,822,065.

In the matter of cheese factories, the number, product and value of produce was as follows in the years specified.

	1890	1903
No. of cheese factories	817	1,126
No. lbs. cheese prod'd	75,864,713	165,306,973
Value of cheese "	$7,189,967	$17,303,733

CREAMERIES

	1890	1903
No. of Creameries	39	205
No. lbs. butter	1,708,590	10,812,126
Value of butter prod'd	$399,154	$2,008,598

The Agricultural Department over which Hon. John Dryden presides, and which is largely responsible for these, and other, good results, had, Mr. Stratton pointed out, the supervision of the following important agencies, which had done such good work for the farmers' benefit: Three dairy schools, Guelph, Kingston and Strathroy, attended by 2,240 persons. Pioneer farm in Algoma, one hundred and fifty miles west of Port Arthur, for the purpose of testing the soil and climate of that portion of New Ontario; fifteen experimental fruit stations located at different points in the province; 479 agricultural and horticultural societies; fourteen different associations such as fruit growers, dairymen, and breeders' associations; the Ontario Agricultural College, with an attendance in 1903 of 728 pupils; the Sir William Macdonald Institute for instruction in domestic science, opened this year at Guelph, and attended by 107 farmers' daughters.

The Agricultural College, although situated in Guelph, exercised a wide influence. By means of Farmers' Institutes, which last year held 837 meetings, with a total attendance of 126,352 farmers, there were brought home to the farmers through the expert agriculturists sent out to address these meetings, the teachings and results of experiments at the College. These were further assisted by Women's Institutes, which held 990 meetings with an attendance of 44,696.

The advantages of agricultural administration had been evidenced by the great general improvement in agriculture, and the large increase in the exports of cattle that had taken place in 1903, and by the success of Canadian exhibits when they came into competition with American exhibits. The triumphs of Canadian stock, principally from Ontario, at Chicago, in 1893, at the Buffalo Pan-American in 1901, had been repeated this year at St. Louis, as shown in the prizes and awards at the latter place:

POULTRY.

In most cases in which exhibitors from the province of Ontario entered, they swept the board.

Mr. Stratton enquired what better could be done for our agricultural interests than had been done or what better results could be expected? Mr. Whitney as a measure of reform, now pretended to advocate half a dozen agricultural colleges, which would each require expensive buildings and a complete staff of officials, with no corresponding results, for through its various sub-agencies, dairy schools, etc., the Agricultural College at Guelph was duplicated, as far as results went, in many parts of the province. The work that had been done for the farmer had been largely done in the the face of Mr. Whitney's opposition. In 1888, his first year in the Legislature, he voted against the measure erecting agriculture into a separate department, with a separate Minister. He and the Opposition, went on the assumption that agriculture could be well enough looked after as a side branch of another department, and was not of sufficient importance to have a department and Minister of its own. Mr. Whitney, who now pretends to want half a dozen agricultural colleges, has consistently antagonized and obstructed advance legislation in the interests of the farmer. In the session of 1893, Mr. Whitney opposed the appointment of an assistant in the Department of Natural History at the Guelph Agricultural College. In 1897 he opposed a grant of $1400 to the Poultry Association of Ontario. In 1899 he opposed the vote of $2500 for instruction in fruit spraying, a vote of $1000 for the pioneer farm, and $2500 to the Western Dairy School. Mr. Whitney voted against the appointment of a Good Roads Instructor, although it is universally admitted now that such an appointment was of great advantage to the province. Mr. Whitney opposed the appointment of a Drainage Referee although the municipalities in the interests of farmers have already borrowed nearly two millions of dollars for drainage purposes. Tens of thousands of acres had been reclaimed, through the generous assistance of the Government, of which about three thousand acres were next door to Peterborough in the Township of Otonabee.

Considering the great importance of our agricultural interests, the splendid administration its department had received should be continued (as it would be if the Ross Government were returned to power) and prevented from falling into incompetent hands. Hon. John Dryden was everywhere recognized as a model Minister of Agriculture, and a strong man for the position—so strong that the Opposition made a dead set against him in South Ontario to prevent his re-election. It was said that $10,000 were on one occasion used to this end by the Conservative party which introduced corruption into South Ontario to defeat Hon. Mr. Dryden who was again a candidate.

The Public Institutions.

The Liberal Government deserved credit for the liberal expenditure it had made for the care of a large class of our population—the mentally deranged, who could not care for themselves, who could not be maintained in their homes, and who would have had to be cared for by the municipalities, if the Government had not assumed the responsibility of their care and maintenance, and cure, as far as cure was possible. Since the year 1871 the Government had expended for the maintenance of asylums and public institutions the sum of $20,583,648.01. This large sum was for maintenance alone. Since Confederation the total expenditure involved had been the very large sum of $31,695,917.37 or nearly a million dollars per year. These were the details:

Lands, buildings and equipment of public institutions	$6,757,167.08
Maintenance of Public Institutions	20,839,985.18
Grants to Hospitals and Charities	4,018,795.11
	$31,605,917.37

In the several asylums and other institutions of the Province, under Government control or supervision, there were last year 63,445 persons. Of these 5,562 were mentally deranged, and as to the efficiency of their care Mr. Stratton had personal knowledge, for they had been under his charge. It did not perhaps become him to boast, but it was only a simple statement of fact—of record—that these institutions were well and economically managed, as was shown by the circumstance that whereas the average cost per patient in the asylums in the other Provinces of Canada for 1898 and 1900 was $199.79, the average cost in Ontario in 1903 was only $125.20. And the inmates were as well, if not better maintained than in any of the other provincial institutions, and at a rate per cetient of nearly 75 per cent. less. This indicated that the Liberal expenditure had been made carefully, that full value was received, and that the unfortunate had the full benefit. The same sound business principles that had been applied to other departments of the public service had been applied to the public institutions of Ontario.

The policy that had been applied in the past had been pursued since the accession to power of the Ross Government. The Government had fully recognized its responsibility and had provided the additional accommodation so urgently required. Within the past two years additional asylums had been opened, one at Cobourg and the other at Penetanguishene, the latter by conversion of the Boys' Reformatory into an asylum. The opening of these institutions had relieved the congestion at the other asylums. For the present there was ample accommodation in our eight asylums for all persons who were proper subjects, and there was no excuse for confining unfortunates in jails with criminals to the disgrace of our humanity. The Liberal Government deserved no little credit not only for the liberal maintenance it had provided for the care of the insane, but for the careful manner in which the business details had been managed. The Opposition if they were fair would admit it, and they had practically admitted it. So much confidence had the management of our public institutions created that the correctness and wisdom of the expenditures had not been questioned, as shown by the fact that so little fault had the Opposition to find that on one occasion the estimates for this branch of the public service had passed the House in about eleven minutes.

Provincial Timber Interests.

The most important provincial interest from a revenue producing standpoint, was, Mr. Stratton, said, the Crown domain with its wealth of timber, minerals and agricultural lands. This was shown by the fact that the revenue from Crown Lands since Confederation had amounted to $39,040,946, and the revenue from this source in 1903 was $2,456,110, and at a fair estimate our Crown land resources yet existent and available, amounted to about four hundred million dollars. The value of our uncut pine was estimated at $75,000,000 and of hardwood at $50,000,000. Our pulpwood, 288 million cords at a present royalty rate of 40c. per cord (which could be increased by the Government) amounted to 115 millions of dollars. The timber interest of the Province had been carefully administered, and though, as in the case in almost all business concerns, there may have been mistakes in detail, the general oversight of the Crown timber resources of the Province had been carefully exercised; these resources had been looked after and protected, both from a revenue standpoint and from the standpoint of preservation. It was sometimes objected that in selling and cutting our timber, we were destroying our capital. It would be just as logical to say that a farmer in reaping a crop, when it was ripe, was destroying his capital. If there had been no timber sold since Confederation, millions and millions of dollars worth would have decayed, and lay rotting on the ground, or have been swept away by forest fires. Of the nearly forty millions received from our Crown Lands, it had all gone to help make up the 120 millions spent for public purposes in the province since Confederation. Nearly ten millions — $9,518,571.30 — had been converted into public buildings, which would stand for a century, serving their useful or beneficent purposes. Not only had the largest amount of revenue advisable been derived from the Crown Lands and timber, but other means had been adopted to give the province the fullest benefit. In 1897 the policy of requiring all logs cut on Crown Lands in Ontario to be manufactured in Canada, was adopted, and the consequence was that many sawmills were removed from Michigan to Ontario, and the timber business was greatly stimulated. It was hinted by an Opposition paper that this policy was to be relaxed. But that was not the case. The protection to Ontario interests involved in this policy being kept intact, would be adhered to, and the interests of the province protected to the fullest extent. And other protective measures had been adopted; the most stringent regulations had been put in force for the prevention of waste by forest fires, and the important subject of re-forestration and conservation of Crown timber by forest reserves had been adopted. There had been set apart nearly seven million acres of forest land unsuitable for general cultivation, but rich in timber. The object was to save the timber from wanton or accidental destruction, and to preserve the game. Here, Mr. Stratton said, it might be well to anticipate some remarks he might make later on, in reference to the advance policy in regard to timber, adopted at the great Liberal convention in Toronto. This was to have it a condition of all future timber sales that only matured timber should be cut under the direction of forest rangers, leaving the remainder of pine timber and pulpwood to be cut when sufficiently matured for the market, and that all lands on which pine has been cut shall be reserved for re-forestration. This was a very important matter, for it is estimated that pine increases in growth at the rate of eight per cent. per year, so that in ten or twelve years, a million dollars' worth of young standing pine would double in value, and measures for its preservation were wise and in the interests of the province.

Timber Preservation.

To the measures recited, and the policy adopted of preserving our timber was to be added the fact, that the Liberal Government had realized good value for what it had sold. Under Sandfield Macdonald's Government, the average price per square mile was $260; under the Blake Government, $117; under the Hardy Government, $1,665, and under the Ross Government, $3,245; and at one sale the astounding price of over $30,000 per square mile was obtained. But this was exceptional, and directly due to the advance policy of the Ross Government, which, by building the Temiscamingue Railway, opened up timber areas which were before comparatively useless, from lack of access. The excellent figures obtained for Ontario timber were all the more creditable to the Government when it was pointed out that in the province of Quebec from 1873 to 1890 an area of 6,235 miles of doubtless equally good pine lands was sold at an average of $62 per square mile, as against the Ross Government's average of $3,245 per square mile.

In consideration of the excellent results, both as to revenue and preservation, and management, of the Liberal Government, Mr. Stratton inquired if it would be in the interests of the province to turn the management of our Crown Lands to Mr. Whitney and the Conservative party. We had as a warning against it the terrible example of the Conservative party of the Dominion when the disputed territory, (now a part of Ontario, through the efforts of a Liberal Government) was made the scene of a scandalous waste of public lands. The Conservative Government of the day passed over one-hundred orders-in-Council bestowing upon political hacks without competition or advertisement, blocks of fifty square miles each for the absurd figure of $5 per square mile, or less than a cent an acre. Had we any assurance that under Mr. Whitney there would not be a similar disregard of the public interest, and a similar distribution of the public domain among political favourites. A single year of such a course would result in damage to the interests of the Province of millions of dollars. Was it not better then to take the safe course in regard to our timber interests, and retain in control of them a Government which had done so well in looking after them?

Our Pulpwood Interests.

Next to our pine timber our pulpwood interests have as important a place, if not more so, from their larger visible value. It is estimated that this Province has pulpwood to the value, in the way of revenue alone, of $115,000,000. But this is valueless unless developed. With this object in view the Government adopted measures granting concessions to cut pulp to companies. This was considered necessary because in contrast with ordinary lumbering the pulpwood industry demands large capital, and no capital would be forthcoming unless assurance were given of abundance of raw material. These concessions do not give a foot of land away, nor a stick of timber, except it is paid for at the rate fixed by the Government is 40c. per cord. As a result we had at the present time over three million dollars invested in industries based on three of the pulp concessions granted. At the "Soo" $1,022,544 had been invested, and the works were turning out 100 tons per day, employing at the mills 130 hands with a monthly pay roll of $6,500. At the Sturgeon Falls pulp and paper works $1,600,000 was invested with a daily output of forty tons of pulp and paper, the employment of 500 hands including those in the woods and a monthly pay roll of $23,500. Here we had then the foundation of a great industry laid down by the wisdom and foresight of the Government. We had immense pulpwood resources and the demand for paper was increasing every day, and the value of our pulpwood would increase until this Province became one of the greatest, if not the chief paper-manufacturing centres of the world. It was estimated that we had 288 million cords of pulpwood, and this at $3 per cord had a commercial value of over 800 millions of dollars, apart from 115 millions of revenue at forty cents per cord. And our supply would not be wasted. The Government has prohibited the exportation of a single stick of pulpwood in an unmanufactured condition, and has by its concessions encouraged the investment of millions of capital, and laid the foundations of a great manufacturing industry and source of provincial revenue—a revenue that cannot fail —until every cord of our 288 millions of cords pays into the public chest the dues of 40c. a cord, dues which may be increased to $1.00 if the market demand warrants it. What was Mr. Whitney's course regarding the development of our pulpwood resources? In the sessions of 1900 and 1901 he voted against every Government proposition to develop our pulp industries. That is the enterprise he would show in developing the new country. How did such a stand on his part appeal to the progressive spirit of the electors of Ontario?

Our Educational Interests.

What the Liberal Government had done for education in this Province was only in part represented by the fact that since 1871 the Province has expended, or, rather handed over to the people for expenditure, the large sum of $20,042,769.61. The result of this system had been that there was in no country in the world a people with more generally good education than in Ontario, where the general standard of intelligence was higher. The Liberal Government had not only been liberal in expenditure in the interests of provincial education, but the best thought and the most painstaking care had been exercised to perfect the system, and bring and keep it abreast of modern educational methods. Our statistical advance had not been insignificant. In 1882 we had 5,023 public schools, and in 1903 we had 6,146, an increase of 943. But that did not indicate the real advance, for we had in the same time an increase in the number of teachers of 2,869, from 2,169 to 4,451. Neither did that indicate the real improvement, for the quality of teachers had improved—that is the number of qualified teachers had increased. There was an increase in second-class certificates of 2,282 and of first-class teachers of 364, and an increase of teachers trained in the Normal Schools—the highest class of teachers—of 3,094. The number of High Schools—the great primary training schools for teachers, and therefore the life blood of the Public Schools, had increased from 104 to 135. There had also been increases of a notable kind in the number of public libraries, in the attendance at our Universities and School of Practical Science, and in every department. Not only had there been numerical advances, but there had been advances in improved methods to make our High and Public School training more practical. In 1904 the new curriculum of studies had been adopted, providing for instruction in domestic science and nature study. The regulations of the Educational Department provided that any Public or Separate School in rural districts may by resolution decide to purchase certain text books for pupils free of charge to parents or guardians, and the Government will grant one-half of the expenditure thus incurred. The question of school books brought to mind the unfounded charge that there was a monopoly of the publication of school books. Mr. Stratton showed that that was not correct—there was no monopoly—any man in the Province might if he wished publish a school text book. It was also charged that the price of school books was unreasonably high. This was another misleading statement. The cost of Ontario school text books was much lower than in the United States. In nine specified states and schools nearest Ontario free school books were supplied. In these States the average price per pupil for school books was 93 cents. In Ontario the rate where free text books were supplied was much lower; for instance in Stratford 23 cents, in Brantford 36 cents, in Hamilton 26 1-2 cents. In Toronto where books were purchased for pupils by the Board, under the free text book system, the average cost per pupil based on the number of pupils in attendance was 9 4-5 cents—or on the basis of pupils enrolled, 8 cents. So that the complaint of the high cost of school books was not very well founded. The school itself is not the only educational medium provided. The Government aids public libraries in towns, cities and villages. The regulations of the Educational Department provide that if any rural school board furnishing a library of approved books for pupils, it shall be entitled to and receive a portion of the grant made for that purpose.

Perhaps the most important educational advance was the encouragement given to technical education—education in mechanical trades. Other countries have found that their advance in manufacturing industries had been developed in proportion to the extent to which technical education and manual training were encouraged. Ontario had followed their example in assisting young persons to take a larger and more intelligent share in the work of developing our vast natural resources. We must have our own Canadian engineers to take part in the work of development of our country. The School of Practical Science in Toronto, and the School of Mines at Kingston, had afforded fine opportunities for training, where skill and scientific knowledge were essential. In the more popular way, Government aid was given to the extent of $60,000 annually, to assist school boards in giving a more practical form of education, and in the Normal schools at Ottawa, Hamilton, Toronto and London, teachers were trained in order that they might be equipped to teach these practical subjects. The School of Practical Science, Toronto, recently enlarged and equipped at an expense of $250,000, was, in 1871, a very modest affair, with three instructors and eighteen students. To-day there were 21 teachers, and 403 students, learning mining, civil, electric and hydraulic engineering and architecture. So that when we want engineers to build our railways and canals, and develop our water powers and our mines, there were Ontario engineers to do the work, and we were under no necessity to import engineers from abroad.

It was thus seen how our educational system led up step by step from the kindergarten to engineering, and how it was thus adapted to the needs of this great province, where there was such a tremendous wealth of national resources to be developed.

A Policy and Practice of Progress.

The spirit of the Liberal Government policy had been progressiveness. It had faith in our country, and its resources, and in order to develop them, and at the same time adequately perform the ordinary public services, increased revenue had to be provided. In 1891 the Succession Duties Act was passed, by which the estates of very rich persons were subjected to a duty, and it chiefly affects property which has, perhaps, during the life time of its owner escaped ordinary taxation. From this source since 1892, about two millions has been added to the provincial treasury. The Opposition opposed this, as they had opposed many measures of progress, and if they had had their way, the rate of duty would have been reduced one-half, and the province would have lost a round million of dollars up to the present time, and proportionately more in the future, for as the country increased in wealth, so would the revenue from this source become greater. The Government had been accused of being too friendly to corporations, yet it had introduced a supplementary revenue Act which provided for the taxation of large corporations, banks, trust, telephone, telegraph and express companies, and others of a similar character. This increased our revenue by about a quarter of a million per year, and comes from the pockets of wealthy capitalists, who are most largely interested in these companies. Yet, Mr. Whitney, who poses as the people's champion, in a public address, declared that he would repeal this tax in the interests of suffering capitalists, who, representing hundreds of millions, are simply contributing a tax of a quarter million a year. If Mr. Whitney begins by cutting down revenues, how is he to build the five of six agricultural colleges he proposes in his flights of fancy? A feature of the progressive policy of the Government has been its encouragement of the construction of railways. What would this province have been without railways, and would foreign capitalists have put money into railways if the Government had not encouraged railways? The Liberal Government, in the interests of the country, in the interests of settlement, in the interests of marketing the produce of our farms, gave aid in the building of 2,219 of the 6,000 miles of railway in this province. In all the Government gave aid to railways to the amount of ten million dollars, and the municipalities did better, for their aid amounted to over twelve millions of dollars. This aid to railways, and the nearly four millions spent on colonization roads, had developed the province in a very effective way. The northern part of the province had advanced to the degree that, whereas in 1871 there was a population of only 15,728, there is now a population of between 145,000 and 150,000 as a result of a progressive policy of encouragement to railway construction, and other aids to which reference would be made later on. The Ross Government inherited its policy of progress and had aimed to better the lessons of its predecessors.

When Hon. Mr. Ross came into power he formulated, with the help of his colleagues, a policy of advance on bold lines. This was, Mr. Stratton said only the application of a policy of development he had advocated in the House on a previous occasion. This policy promised development of our undeveloped resources, and also to give further development to the older portions of the Province. This promise has been well kept. The object of the Liberal Government in aiding railways has chiefly been to render accessible the unsettled lands of the Province which comprised an area of about 100 millions of acres. To people and make productive this vast area, to develop trade and commerce to the mutual advantage of each is a problem well worthy the attention of a wide-awake Government. In 1891 there were only twelve miles of railway in New Ontario. When the railways under construction were completed there would be 1,000 miles of railway not counting the Grand Trunk Pacific, which will extend through the northern part of the Province a distance of 750 miles. The colonization and development railways aided by the Government in various ways are the Canadian Northern extending from Port Arthur through the Rainy River Valley, taking in a rich agricultural stretch of a million acres to Winnipeg, connecting with the system which extends as far west as Edmonton. The Algoma Central is designed to connect Sault Ste. Marie with the C.P.R. covering a stretch of about 230 miles. Of this line 87 miles have been completed, 107 ready for the rails, leaving only twenty-five to complete to the C.P.R. This was aided by a land grant of 7,680 acres per mile, and is an important feature in the success of the wonderful collection of industries at the "Soo." The James Bay Railway aided by a Government guarantee of bonds, runs from Toronto to Sudbury about 295 miles. It provides additional railway facilities from Toronto to Sudbury, passing through a country hitherto not thus served. The Grand Trunk Pacific to connect Port Arthur with the Transcontinental Railway, a distance of 200 miles, received a land grant of 6,000 acres and a subsidy of $3,200 per mile. This line by means of the waters of Lakes Superior and Huron, will connect all the western parts of Ontario with the North-west, and is furnishing additional transportation facilities benefitting every town on the western coast of the province to the far north. The Nepigon Railway will connect Lake Superior at Thunder Bay with Lake Nepigon, a distance of forty miles. The lake is 170 miles, of navigable length. The Grand Trunk Pacific will pass about forty miles northward of the lake, and when connected with the lake will afford one of the three direct railway connections of Ontario with the Grand Trunk

No News From Port Arthur—What Does the Fact Portend?

SET A SUPERHUMAN TASK

Admiral Rojestvensky and His Comrades Have Fearful Odds to Contend Against in That They Are Sailing in Terribly Defective Ships—Criticism By the Russ of Russian Navy.

Che Foo, Dec. 28.—No further news reached here yesterday from the defenders or besiegers of Port Arthur.

A Britisher Examined.

Las Palmas, Canary Islands, Dec. 28.—The British steamer Bellarden, from Montevideo, December 4, which sailed from here yesterday for Antwerp, reports that a large Russian vessel steamed alongside of her on December 22 in latitude 11 north and longitude 28 west, examined her with the aid of two searchlights, and then withdrew eastward.

Rojestvensky's Superhuman Task.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 28.—In an outspoken article in reply to a recent letter of Admiral Birilef, which appealed to the Russians not to openly criticise the condition of the navy, The Russ yesterday declared: "The time is passed for silence, in view of the fact that the 'old' system of concealing facts is responsible for the loss of 150,000,000 roubles' worth of warships, and has covered us with shame and grief. It would be absurd to hide defects that can still be repaired in the ships which remain at Cronstadt, and Liabu. We have already criminally wasted enough time." The Russ enumerates the defects in the ships still in Russian waters, averring that the "peculiarities of structure of several of the vessels destined for the far east make the voyage dangerous, and the torpedo boats are in such a shocking condition that it is a matter of surprise that the authorities accepted their delivery. Torpedo boats intended to reinforce Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky must clearly not be despatched with the numerous defects that have been proved to exist in them." In conclusion The Russ says: "Even if Admiral Rojestvensky is a clever leader and his 12,000 comrades are heroic sailors, every one knows that we have imposed on them an almost superhuman task in consequence of our not being furnished with a true account of the gravity of the events which have occurred since the fatal night of February 8."

Red Cross Fund Suffers.

New York, Dec. 28.—A St. Petersburg despatch to The Herald, dated Dec. 26, says: Owing to the wholesale misappropriation of Red Cross funds and material, which has entirely estranged public sympathy, no one will subscribe to the fund. It is announced officially that a complete and thorough reorganization will be made. At the same time a loud outcry has been raised against the commissary department for having failed in its duties.

Possible Shortage of Food.

Since Prince Khilkoff has returned the trans-Siberian railroad has been working most erratically, causing much trouble, as the accumulated stores have been consumed, and now the army is depending upon what the railway brings. The cold is causing intense suffering.

Baron von Spaun Will Serve.

Paris, Dec. 28.—Admiral Baron von Spaun of the Austro-Hungarian navy, who, at the opening session in Paris, December 22, of the international commission to inquire into the North Sea incident, was unanimously elected the fifth member of that body, has agreed to serve on the commission.

Burglars At St. Thomas.

St. Thomas, Dec. 28.—Two robberies were reported to the police as having occurred Monday night. One of them was at the grocery store of B. C. Turville. Turville reports that five turkeys and seven chickens are missing. The other robbery was at the store of James Kane. Some tobacco and other goods were taken from the shelves, and about $4 in cash from the till.

Locked Up Spirit Wrestlers.

Winnipeg, Dec. 28.—The last bunch of spirit-wrestling Doukhobors, four in number, who have been hovering around the immigration sheds, were locked up Monday evening to prevent a chance of mishap to them in the severe weather. They were charged with vagrancy and will be given long sentences to remove them from being a nuisance.

Admiralty Blamed.

London, Dec. 28.—(C. A. P.)—The Melbourne press comments on the failure of the Admiralty to fulfil its agreement with the Commonwealth. Of the two new second-class cruisers promised more than a year ago, only the Challenger has arrived, though the subsidy was promptly paid.

Death of Lady Boswell.

Montreal, Dec. 28.—Sir H. Montagu Allan is in receipt of a cablegram announcing the death of Lady Boswell, third daughter of Sir Hugh Allan. Lady Boswell's end came suddenly on Saturday at Blaskader, her country place, near Edinburgh. Particulars have not yet been received.

Escapes From Jail Guards.

Toronto, Dec. 28.—John Edmonds, aged 20, a mulatto, slipped away from among two score fellow-prisoners at Toronto jail yesterday morning and half an hour later the guards found it out. Edmonds has not been re-taken, but guards found the convict's clothes in a freight car.

ON THE STATION PLATFORM.

Fusilade Between Mounted Police and a Desperado At Moose Jaw.

Moose Jaw, Dec. 28.—A lively duel between an American desperado named McLean and the Mounted Police occurred on the station platform here last night, in the course of which twelve shots were exchanged. McLean had engaged in a row in a restaurant, and two police corporals, Foxwell and Barnes, went to arrest him. They were unarmed, and he defied them at the point of a revolver. Foxwell slipped away while McLean covered Barnes, and ran for revolvers at the barracks. Meanwhile a spectator, taking in the situation, slipped a revalver to Barnes, unnoticed by the desperado, and just then Foxwell returned, accompanied by Constable Bouchier, both heavily armed. McLean was ordered to surrender, but his answer was to fire point blank at Bouchier. Barnes returned the fire, and so did the other officers. The police did not want to kill him, so shot low, one bullet smashing McLean's knee cap. He emptied his revolver before surrendering. Spectators in the station threw themselves on the floor to escape bullets. McLean was taken to Regina jail last night.

WHAT IS ANTI-PILL?

A Somewhat Peculiar Name Explained —How Dr. Leonhardt Came to Call His Famous Prescription "Anti-Pill."

Dr. Leonhardt found in his practice that chronic constipation and its kindred complaints were the result of a dried-up condition of the mucous membrane lining of the stomach and bowels. He investigated further and found that this condition was invariably brought about by the use of cathartics, which all contain a certain amount of resinous matter.

After the first action of such medicines a resinous residue remains behind and this has a drying effect on the lining of the stomach and bowels.

He made up his mind to produce a medicine for all stomach and bowel derangements which would be entirely free from all resinous matter.

After much experiment he succeeded, and to emphasize the difference between his treatment and the old-fashioned treatments, he gave it the name "Anti-Pill."

Anti-Pill will cure dyspepsia, biliousness, or constipation perfectly and for ever—cure to stay cured—with no pill habit left to be overcome later.

First Death in Earl Grey's Retinue.

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—The first death in Earl Grey's retinue occurred yesterday, when Ernest Fels, chief groom of the bed-chamber, died of pneumonia. He came out on the Bavarian about three weeks ago and was 28 years of age. It is said that like many other Englishmen when first coming to Canada, he despised an overcoat, and went skating on a cold day insufficiently protected. He caught a severe cold from which pneumonia developed. He will be buried in Beechwood Cemetery in the Rideau Hall plot.

Atlas Liner Ashore.

Kingston, Jamaica, Dec. 28.—The German third-class cruiser Bremen, which returned here from Port au Prince, Hayti, reports that the Atlas Line steamer Valencia, from New York, Dec. 15, for Inagua, Cape Haytien, is ashore in a bad position at that place, and that she is likely to be a total wreck. The vessel is lying on her side in the mud and her decks are being washed by the sea. It is likely that the wrecking steamer Premier will go to the Valencia's assistance.

Fire At Rideau Hall.

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—The new Governor-General and his family had an exciting time last evening, when fire broke out in the chapel at Rideau Hall. The body of the chief groom of the bed-chamber was placed in the chapel. In some way a blaze caught between the floors. The city brigade was called out, but the fire was extinguished with very slight loss.

Woman Drinks Poison.

Winnipeg, Dec. 28.—Mrs. Isbister, a married woman, with a family of two children, committed suicide by poisoning herself at midnight yesterday. No cause is assigned.

New Whaler For British Columbia.

INSTANTLY KILLED.

Harry Chambers, of Lindsay, C.P.R. Fireman, Picked Up Dead After Engine Plunged Down Embankment.

Toronto, Dec. 28.—By an accident which, while not enormous in itself, has seldom been known to have a fatal termination in the history of railroading, Harry Chambers, fireman, of Lindsay, last night lost his life.

The mishap occurred about four miles out of Bobcaygeon on the Lindsay branch of the C.P.R., about 6.30 p.m. yesterday. The train was a passenger one of three cars, which is employed on a short run between Burketon and Bobcaygeon, the line put into operation by the road the beginning of last August. The train makes connections with the Montreal express, which arrives at 7.30 p. m., and with the local, which leaves the Union Station at 5 p.m.

Leaving Burketon at about 6.45 p. m. it was approaching Bobcaygeon when the engine flue blew out with such tremendous violence as to demolish a section of the cab. Chambers was hurled back on the tender and rolled into the ditch. When picked up he was found to be dead.

An unknown young man, aged about 24, who had been stealing a ride in front of the engine, was badly scalded from the knees down. Engineer Henry of Bobcaygeon escaped unharmed.

Chambers' home was in Lindsay. He was 26 years of age and unmarried.

The train was delayed about four hours, an engine arriving from Burketon after midnight.

Five Men Badly Injured.

Keewatin, Dec. 28.—A serious accident occurred yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock at Foley Bros. & Lawson's construction camp, three miles west of Keewatin, when the men at work struck an old unexploded charge, causing a terrific explosion, which fatally injured one man and seriously injured five others about the eyes, hands, arms and legs. The injured men were taken to Rat Portage on the work train, which was hauling rock from where they were at work. They were all foreigners.

G.T.R. Fireman Hurt.

Hamilton, Dec. 28.—David McShee, G.T.R. fireman, whose home is at Shelburne, but who has been boarding at 14 Clarence square, Toronto, had his leg smashed at the ankle yesterday morning at Harrisburg in a head-on collision between the accommodation train due here at 11 o'clock and a freight. The engines were both badly wrecked, and the passengers shaken up.

Crashed Into Wire Fence.

Montreal, Dec. 28.—D. B. Picken was probably fatally injured by running into a barb wire while tobogganing on the park slide Monday. His throat and face were terribly lacerated by the barbs, and the shock of the collision knocked out several teeth. He is not expected to survive the accident.

Killed By a Fall.

Barrie, Dec. 28.—Fred. Partridge, a laborer employed by the G.T.R., stumbled and fell into the big cement oil tank at the new shops, Allendale, on Sunday night. He fractured his skull and died an hour later. He was an Englishman and had been with the G.T.R. only a month. A wife and two small children survive him.

Thirty Seven in Danger.

New York, Dec. 28.—Efforts to learn whether Capt. Nicholson and the crew of the British tramp steamer Drumelsier are still aboard the vessel, which is aground on the bar at Fire Island, have been unsuccessful, and last night the life-savers were still watching from the beach in the hope of communicating with the ship. The captain would not let the life-savers take off his crew Monday when the seas were running so high, and yesterday it was too late to help them. The Drumelsier's crew consists of 32 men, with Capt. Nicholson, First Mate Hutchinson, Second Mate Smith, Third Mate Richardson and Chief Engineer Wood.

One Man Killed.

Niagara Falls, Dec. 28.—The Christmas celebration here wound up with a fight in the foreign quarter, in which one man was killed and three badly wounded. Four men are under arrest. The fatality was the result of a clash between Croats and Huns.

Hunter Gets Hall.

London, Dec. 28.—(C. A. P.)—Graeme Hunter, known as the "boss" union smasher, and Gavin Cooper were yesterday charged at the High Court, Glasgow, with defrauding emigrants to Canada by representing that they would get suitable work on arrival. It was stated on behalf of Hunter that it was necessary to obtain "precognition" in Canada, if not to bring witnesses, and the case was adjourned. Bail was allowed.

Cured Kidney Disease

Mrs. Fred Hills, Walton street, Port Hope, Ont., states: 'I was troubled for some time with kidney disease, and though I tried a great many different remedies I never succeeded in obtaining relief until I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. By the regular use of this preparation for a time I was completely cured of kidney disease."

Plans For Toronto Warehouse.

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—The Commissioner of Customs, in company with the chief customs inspector and the chief architect of public works, left yesterday for New York to look into the interior plans of the customs examining warehouse there. The Government will utilize whatever ideas can be gathered, when it shortly undertakes the erection of new examining warehouses in Toronto and Winnipeg.

Working Herself Through College.

Toronto, Dec. 28.—A despatch yesterday from Springfield, Ohio, stated that the long-missing Toronto girl, Anna Corkwell, has been found by her mother. She was working to pay for her tuition at college. "Her mother wanted her to come home, but she was averse to this."

Liebig's Soup—Satisfactions—is strongly recommended by the medical profession as a safeguard against infectious diseases.

CATARRH THE MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL CHRONIC DISEASES.

"Pe-ru-na Is a Blessing to Those Troubled With Catarrh," Says United States Senator Corbin.

Gentlemen—"The use of Peruna has been a blessing to those troubled with catarrh. So many of my acquaintances have been cured and benefited by its use that its curative qualities should be generally known. I do not hesitate to recommend it as the best remedy yet discovered for that disease."—D. Y. Corbin, 916 Chicago Opera House, Chicago, Ill.

Colds Not Promptly Cured Are Sure to Cause Catarrh.

Catarrh Improperly Treated Is Sure to Make Life Short and Miserable.

Many Wonderful Cures Are Made by Pe-ru-na.

CATARRH spares no organ or function of the body. It is capable of destroying sight, taste, smell, hearing, digestion, secretion, assimilation and excretion. It pervades every part of the human body.

Peruna also cures bronchitis, coughs, and consumption in the first stages with unfailing certainty.

Hon. D. Y. Corbin, is ex-United States Senator and cousin of Adjutant General Corbin of the United States Army. Judge Corbin is one of the best known lawyers in Chicago and stands high professionally and socially. The above endorsement coming from such a man cannot help but add weight and importance to the thousands of testimonials from the humbler walks of life.

Catarrh is the cause of at least one-half of the ills to which the human family is subject. Is there no way to escape from it? There is.

Peruna never fails to cure a cold. Peruna never fails to cure catarrh in the first stage. Peruna cures catarrh in the second stage, nine cases out of ten. Peruna cures catarrh in its last and worst stages in the majority of cases, and never fails to benefit every case, however bad.

A book on the cure of throat and lung diseases, and catarrh in all stages and varieties, sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

"My Life Hung by a Mere Thread, Pe-ru-na Cured Me."

Mrs. Sarah Smart, 276 Hayward St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I can't tell in words how low I was. My life hung by a mere thread. I was waiting for months to die.

"My trouble was consumption or bronchitis. I suffered no pain when I was low, but coughing and breathing kept sapping what little strength I had. I could not eat, sleep or even lean back on a chair. I was a mere skeleton. I said to my husband, 'I can't last much longer.' My neighbors say they do not know how I ever recovered. It was almost a miracle.

"I took your medicine but three months, when I could do my housework and washing, and have been doing it ever since. Now I am able to do anything. You would never think I had been troubled with such a serious illness. I shall always keep your medicine in my house."—Mrs. Sarah Smart.

Despaired of Recovery.

Mrs. R. L. Aulich, Vice President American Genealogical Association, 604 H street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I know whereof I speak when I say that Peruna is a wonderful remedy for colds and catarrhal trouble. Last fall I was very much debilitated from the effect of a cold contracted early in the summer and which I neglected. I knew that my system was in need of medicine and rest, but to find the right thing was the problem. Happily I gave Peruna a trial first and have no reason to complain of the results. Within a month I had entirely recovered my strength and good health and really felt better and stronger than before."—Mrs. R. L. Aulich.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The Flagging Energies Revived.

Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be no relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression and reviving the flagging energies.

Rev. Dr. Chown, of Toronto, Will Speak To-night.

This evening a public meeting will be held in St. Paul's church, when addresses will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Chown, of Toronto, secretary of Temperance and Moral Reform of the Methodist Church. All the mid-week services have been cancelled, so that there may be a large attendance. The discussion will have special reference to the local option campaign now being waged in Smith township.

There will be a free will offering at the mass meeting.

The Examiner regrets that a large amount of interesting news has to be left over until to-morrow on account of extra crush of matter.

ENTERTAINMENT WAS VERY ENJOYABLE

Large Attendance at Charlotte Street Church Last Evening.

A very successful entertainment was held in the School Room of the Charlotte Street Church last evening under the auspices of the Sunday School. The attendance was quite large and the programme was one of interest. Mr. W. Stubbs with his stereopticon views and moving pictures supplied much entertainment during the evening. He illustrated the "Life of Joseph," gave scenes from his recent trip to England and other interesting views besides humorous moving pictures.

The orchestra played several numbers in a very acceptable manner and the "Old Woman in a Shoe," by the Primary Class was very enjoyable and had to be repeated. A dialogue "Conundrum" by four members of the Primary Class, Fern Greer, Mabel Christie, Annie Beard and Cecil Richardson, was a pleasing number. The pastor, Rev. W. J. Jolliffe, was in the chair.

The programme was much enjoyed throughout.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MANY VACANCIES FOR TEACHERS

Hard to Procure Properly Qualified High School Teachers.

Department of Education Forced to Issue Permits to Teachers—The Remedy is to Increase Salaries.

The Toronto News of last night had the following article on a question of some importance locally:—

"Owing to the scarcity of properly qualified teachers, the Department of Education may be forced to issue permits to teach in High Schools and Collegiate Institutes to teachers not having the required legal standing, until the next examination at the Normal College in Hamilton.

This opinion was given by Dr. Seath, Provincial High School Inspector, this morning. He reports a great lack of properly qualified teachers for High Schools. One principal told him that an advertisement for a teacher at a salary of $1,000, had been in the papers for a fortnight, without a single application having been received in reply. At another Collegiate there were two positions, carrying a salary of $1,000 and $900, respectively, waiting to be filled.

"In one case," Dr. Seath said, "I advised the School Board of a certain town to advertise again and offer higher salaries."

The cause of the scarcity is, according to Dr. Seath, the prosperous condition of the country and the greater inducements offered in other occupations. The only way to meet the difficulty, and one which many boards have been obliged to adopt, is to offer increased remuneration."

A local High School teacher was interviewed this morning on the above question, and said that the condition was a serious one. It was becoming almost impossible to procure teachers, because of the fact that it required five years of preparation after matriculation to qualify for a High School teacher, and the salaries from $500 to $1200, were not considered large enough to induce them to spend that length of time in preparation.

There were schools which had been advertising for months for teachers and could not procure them.

THE PROVINCIAL CONTEST.

The fight between the Liberal and Conservative parties for the occupancy of the Government benches at Toronto, is in full force now, that the Christmas holiday season, with all its personal and family interests, is over. In four weeks there will be nothing left of the fight but the polling. In those four weeks there is much work to be done, but a united effort on the part of the Liberals of the riding, is all that is necessary to keep West Peterborough where it has been for nearly twenty years—in the ranks of the Liberal party.

Peterborough is a live and progressive town, fast about to grow into a city, whether it will or not. At this time in its history it is more important than ever that its interests should be cared for by men who will be keen to take advantage of everything that will aid in the town's progress, who, resourceful men themselves, will give of their best abilities to the service of their fellow townsmen. In Mr. R. R. Hall, the newly-elected member of the Dominion House, we have such a representative. In the matter of the Provincial House, Peterborough has been for many years peculiarly fortunate, for even Mr. Stratton's detractors admit that he is entitled to a large share of the credit for the splendid administrative record upon which the Liberal Government of Ontario is now able to go before the people. Mr. Stratton, finding it no longer possible to serve the town in this way, the Liberals of West Peterborough have as their candidate, Mr. R. F. McWilliams, a progressive, energetic, honest and clever young lawyer, who has already shown himself able to carry anything he undertakes to a successful issue; who has done the town good service as a member of the municipal council, and who has established for himself a reputation as a political speaker, his ability in this line having stood the Liberal party in the East Riding in good stead through several elections. Mr. McWilliams is in every way fitted to be a useful and creditable representative. That he has that necessary element in the successful candidate of any party—personal popularity—is evidenced by the fact that on the two occasions when he ran for the municipal council he was elected at the head of the poll. It is still further shown by the manner in which both the old and the young men of the party have rallied to his support.

Though much hard and effective work has already been done, there is still much to be accomplished. With a little effort on the part of all active Liberals, success is well assured, and with that success the Ross Government gains an able supporter and Peterborough a creditable representative.

"Father Kelley won his way to the hearts of all by his broadness of view, his warm-hearted manner, his happy face, his generous praise of others and his modesty. In anecdote, analysis or argument, as well as in the sublime flights of oratory carried to a magnificent climax in his peroration, he so enthralled his hearers that the time seemed all too short and they would gladly have heard him longer."

REPLY OF THE BANDMASTER

Mr. J. M. Green replies to Mr. Butcher's Letter of Saturday

Makes Some Comparisons as to the Financial Management of the Local Corps.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Seeing that I am the duly commissioned Bandmaster of the local Salvation Army Band, and the one who Mr. Butcher referred to personally in your issue of December 24th, first, kindly allow me to say that it is not my intention to deal with the matter of differences existing between Mr. Butcher and the Salvation Army, excepting to protect myself from slander and insinuation.

Sir, how can any man, with any fair amount of judgment call it anything else, (when he says I am a young man, with limited experience. He also states "the others who allowed the matter to be handled as it was handled," and "that he definitely protests against the mismanagement of the collecting of the Band Fund."

Now, I wish to say, the $500.00 Band Fund was planned, the work organized, the collecting started, and the Fund brought to a successful finish by myself. Of course, headquarters consented to my plans and system of raising the Fund. In this way it was controlled and managed by myself (with the local Commanding Officer's consent) who Mr. Butcher refers to when he says, "handled as it was handled."

Will you kindly allow me to make a few comparisons. As he wants the Band Books looked into for the past twenty-one months, just let me see what his wide and extraordinary experience taught him, and how he made use of the same, after serving as local Treasurer for thirteen or fourteen years.

In the last twenty-one months, there have been two harvest festivals and two self-denial efforts, and not from any of the four was he able to manage and raise the amount he was asked by headquarters to raise, and not from any of these, did I see or read a statement of income and expenditure from him, the Treasurer.

For the last twenty-one months, there have been over 125 names on the soldiers' roll continuously, and the weekly amount put in their cartridges did not average over $30.00, which really means less than 5 cents each per week. Then again, the Sunday evenings' attendance averaged about 250, with about $3.00 offering at the door, where Mr. Butcher always was, with a few exceptions. This is about 1 cents per head on an average.

Now, Sir, taking the above into consideration, would you say that Mr. Butcher is a capable and experienced man, enough so to be our financial representative, when after serving all these years as treasurer, he could not handle or manage the attendance any better, than to get the soldiers' offerings to average 5 cents, and the Sunday evenings' congregation 2 cents each? I should say his ability to judge of another's experience and management is sunk into oblivion; and I truthfully believe should be have been suspended ten years ago, instead of last spring, the corps as a whole, would be in a better condition to-day.

Mr. Twenty-one months ago, our Band numbered seventeen or eighteen players, and to-day it numbers thirty-seven, with five musicians who have moved to other parts, and I have taught personally, five beginners, who to-day are playing and from whom I received no remuneration in any way. During that time the $500.00 Band Fund was launched and was a great success, we receiving subscriptions and acknowledgments from all parts of the world, even from General Booth himself, and for which we ordered and received the new instruments, we toiled so ceaselessly to get, and I should be pleased to allow any man with good judgment to come and examine the same, and see whether we got value for your money. This Fund was the first ever tried on that principle and if I was able to handle and manage the same to a successful issue, with my "limited experience," I dare say, should I have as many years' experience at financing as Mr. Butcher has had, we could easily have raised $1,000.00 instead of $500.00.

Two years ago our council granted us $50.00 and last year they very kindly gave us $75.00, for which we thank them very much.

As my commission, which is issued by headquarters, expires every year, I am positive they would relieve me of the responsibility of Bandmaster, were my work in managing and handling the Band not a success. I have never sought the same nor have I ever received any remuneration for my services, during my nineteen years of Bandmastership.

Dear Sir, may I ask, are we having success or not? You can draw your own conclusions and please pardon me for using so much of your valuable space.

Yours very truly,
J. M. GREENE,
Bandmaster.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Young's Point, Dec. 27th.—At the close of the school for Christmas holidays last Friday afternoon an intertainment was given by the children, which was largely attended by the parents and friends who also gathered there to do honour and bid farewell to our teacher Mr. B. A reading by Mr. Huston.

After the programme was run off a presentation and address was made to Mr. Huston by the children as a slight token of appreciation. Miss Mamie Young presented Mr. Huston with a beautiful leather shaving case and the following address was read by Gerald Stuart:—

Mr. B. T. Huston,

Dear Teacher,—We, the pupils of S. S. No. 8, Smith, having heard, with regret that you are about to leave us, take this opportunity of expressing to you our appreciation of your manly kindness and generous efforts in our behalf.

We had learned ere you came amongst us of your brilliant work as a student your great success as a teacher, and we had, therefore, every reason to feel assured of our progress under your care. We have not been disappointed— two years honest, earnest work has proved the truth of what we heard and realized our every hope, and now that we are rapidly advancing in our studies we are sorry that circumstances should cause you to leave us but what is a loss to us will be to others a gain. In other and larger fields you will find more ample scope for your ability and learning.

We will ask you at the same time to accept this small gift as an expression of love and esteem, as a token of our appreciation of your kindness and attention during your all-too-short stay amongst us.

We assure you, you will never be forgotten, by your Young's Point pupils.

With this we couple our best wishes for a very pleasant Christmas and continued happiness during the New Year now drawing upon us.

Signed on behalf of the school.

Mr. Huston was very much affected by this unexpected token of affection and could scarcely find words to express his pleasure. He thanked the pupils, also the parents and the friends who gathered there to say farewell and wished them all many pleasant years of life, health and prosperity.

In St. Mary's Church here on Sunday Rev. Father Phelan was well remembered by his parishioners with a well-filled purse, showing the high esteem in which the reverend gentleman is held by all.

His reverence also preached an eloquent sermon that morning and the choir sang appropriate music in keeping with the festive season.

Mr. M. Caroll, of Toronto, is spending the Christmas holidays with his brother Mr. James Caroll also Mr. and Mrs. Will Young, of Peterborough, are the guests of his sister Mrs. James Caroll.

Mr. Frank Anglesey, of Peterborough, is spending Christmas with his parents here.

We welcome back to our village, Mr. A. Smith who taught in our school a few years ago and who is now engaged to take charge of the school here for the coming year.

Mr. Charles Carl, agent for Northrop and Lyman & Co., is the guest of Mr. J. E. Kearney, of the Lakeview House.

Captain Scollard who has been engaged again this winter by the McDonald firm measuring timber, spent Christmas at his home here.

THE FIRST SENIOR HOCKEY GAME TO-NIGHT

Queen's University and the Local Team Will Clash.

The hockey season in Peterborough as far as the O.H.A. team is concerned opens this evening when the locals will clash with Queens University team, champions of the Intercollegiate League. The game which is called for 8.30 o'clock promises to be a fast one as the ice is in fine shape. Queens has a very strong team and will keep the locals going at a merry clip to win. The line-up of the locals will be:—

Goal—Wesson.
Point—Ford.
Cover point—Crowley.
Rover—Cavanah.
Centre—Parnell.
Right wing—Morgan.
Left wing—Graham.
Dr. Lionel King will referee.

HOCKEY.

The game in the City League to-morrow night promises to be quite interesting. Two teams, the Farriers and Verniers will make their initial appearance in the league and as both septettes are fast, a good game is assured. These teams will meet at 8 o'clock and the T.A.S. and Earl Greys will clash at 9 o'clock. The latter team will be stronger than last week and expect to give the Total Abstiners a warm game.

• • • •

Queen's won the Intercollegiate senior championship last year and the team is fully as strong this winter.

• • • •

In the game at Galt on Christmas day Armstrong took the puck through the whole Galt team and scored for the Marlboros. He played a fine game for his team.

• • • •

The seniors had a splendid workout last night in preparation for to-night's game.

• • •

The juniors will put a strong team on the ice against Port Hope on Friday night.

• • • •

It is possible that a game may be arranged between this year's team and the team of 1898 and '97. Several of the old time players are still in town and others are here for vacation.

• • •

The following six players who are in town at present figured on the team seven years ago, Wasson, Hollingshead, Roger, Davidson, Phelan, Dr. King and Graham and with another fast man would make a septette which would take a lot of beating. It is to be hoped that such a game will be arranged.

• • •

The St. Georges look dangerous in the senior O.H.A. series this winter.

• • • •

There will be fine ice for to-night's game.

The Young Canadians defeated the Maple Leafs in a good game of hockey on Christmas day. The score was 4-1 and the teams were as follows:—Maple Leafs—Goal, W. Killingbeck; point, W. MOST SEVERE STORM

Raged Between the Rocky Mountains and the Great Lakes.

TRAFFIC GREATLY IMPEDED

Atlantic Coast Cities Having Serious Trouble From Rain and Sleet, and a Blizzard Struck Western Cities—But the Rain Was Welcomed in Canada, Especially in Niagara Peninsula.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—One of the most severe storms of recent years has raged between the Rocky Mountains and the great lakes yesterday, causing much trouble to street car, railroad and telegraph companies. The latter were the greatest sufferers, as the blizzard was preceded by a heavy fog and drizzling rain. The intense cold and terrific gale coated the wires with ice, and later threw the poles to the ground. Railroad trains were badly delayed, some being 24 hours late. Street car traffic practically was at a standstill.

Traffic Tied Up.

New York, Dec. 28.—Rain and sleet, with rising temperature, following the recent heavy snowstorms, have greatly impeded traffic in and about New York. Telegraphic communication has been considerably handicapped, and nearly all through trains from the west and north are delayed owing to slippery rails. In the city the rain and sleet, which froze as soon as it struck the ground, made walking hazardous and inconvenient, and wherever there was a grade on the surface roads there was great trouble. On the elevated lines brilliant electrical displays marked the passing of trains over the ice-coated third rail.

Up through New York State many wires were down and those which were not could only be operated slowly. Service to Chicago was greatly delayed. In New England the conditions were better, but to many points business was moved slowly.

Many Vessels Weatherbound.

Philadelphia, Dec. 28.—The Maritime Exchange reports its wire from this city to the Delaware breakwater and intermediate stations in trouble. It is believed, however, that many vessels are in the harbor at the breakwater awaiting better weather. No vessels had arrived at this port up to 10 o'clock yesterday.

Western Cities in Blizzard.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 28.—This portion of the southwest was in the grasp of a genuine blizzard, which extended through Missouri into Oklahoma and Indian Territory. Snow fell to a depth of nearly a foot and, driven by a high wind, drifted badly. Railway trains in every direction were delayed. At some points, particularly north of Kansas City, in Iowa and Nebraska, telephone and telegraph wires were rendered useless by sleet for many hours. The thermometer was close to the zero mark, a fall of 65 degrees within 24 hours.

Fall 90 Degrees in Two Hours.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 28.—The blizzard that has been raging in the west struck St. Louis and vicinity yesterday and there was a fall of 20 degrees in temperature in less than two hours.

Snowstorm At the Capital.

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—Ottawa is in the grip of a severe snowstorm, which has been raging since an early hour yesterday morning.

The Rain Was Welcomed.

St. Catharines, Dec. 28.—The benefit from the heavy rainfall Monday night is widespread in the Niagara Peninsula and the suffering farmers could not have received a more welcome Christmas box. Every creek and pond in this district had been dried up because there had been no rain for months.

Monday night's heavy downfall was the first rain which has fallen here since October. People in Thorold, where there is no water-works system, were very thankful for the rain, for it filled up cisterns which had been dry for months. Many farmers were compelled to draw water for miles for their cattle, and many had sold their stock in consequence.

It was greatly feared that the winter would set in without rain, which would have been a calamity hard to estimate the consequences of. Never before in the history of the country has the Niagara Peninsula been so dry As an example, it might be mentioned that the Twenty-mile Creek, which never before gave out, has been dried up for some time.

The rain is a particular boon to the fruit farmers, but in many cases it is feared that it comes too late to save the fruit trees. Though there is not yet enough water, even if no more comes, the situation is immensely improved.

Want It to Keep On.

Glen's Falls, N.Y., Dec. 28.—The long continued drouth which has seriously threatened the water supply in this section of the state was broken by the heavy rain which began yesterday. If the rainfall continues thirty-six hours, all danger of a water famine in this and nearby towns will be averted as sufficient water will be stored in reservoirs to last until spring.

Electric Wires Clogged.

Toronto, Dec. 28.—The railway despatchers have been bothered considerably during the past 24 hours by the ice-bound state of the wires, which created considerable confusion in the transmission of messages. The passenger train service was not hampered apparently, but movement of freight cars was held somewhat in check. Some local trouble was caused the C.P.R. lines at Galt, an electric wire breaking and falling across them during the morning. It was not until well on in the forenoon that working order was restored.

Arm Breaking in Berlin.

Berlin, Dec. 28.—The damage to fruit trees in this vicinity, although considerable, was not as great as had been looked for as a result of the storm. Farmers were up in the early hours, but to their great satisfaction found that in most cases the ice had dropped off the trees, leaving them practically unhurt. But the farmers are seriously handicapped by the vile condition of the roads. Telephone and telegraph wires were down in different parts of the country, interrupting communication during the greater part of the day, and a few lines are still closed. The slippery condition of roads and walks in town make traveling dangerous, both for vehicles and pedestrians. Several instances of persons breaking arms by falls have been reported.

Ice Causes Many Accidents.

Toronto, Dec. 28.—The freezing rain was responsible for several accidents yesterday. Robert McNaughton, a caretaker at the Armories, had his ankle sprained and went to the Emergency.

Allan Sutherland, 706 Dundas street, fell on Victoria street and broke his right leg. He was taken to the General Hospital.

Mrs. Bake, 55 Nelson street, fell on Cumberland street, broke her right thigh and was taken to Grace.

John Johnston, G.T.R. brakeman, slipped from the icy roof of a freight car and was badly shaken up. He was taken to the Emergency.

On Sunday morning, Rev. Charles Duff, pastor of Brock avenue Congregational Church, fell and broke his left arm.

WILL SUE FOR DAMAGES.

James Mills, Jr., Ejected From N.Y.C. Train and Arrested.

Utica, Dec. 28.—James M. Mills, jr., of Hamilton, Ont., son of James Mills, lawyer, of 2424 Seventh avenue, New York City, was ejected from a New York Central train in this city Monday night and locked up in police headquarters. As a result the railroad will be made defendant in a suit for damages.

Young Mills was en route from Hamilton, Ont., to New York, to spend the holidays with his relatives. He had a through ticket to the metropolis and occupied an apartment in a Pullman car. West of this city he had an epileptic fit, from which he quickly recovered. When the train reached Utica he was taken into custody on complaint, it is alleged, of the railroad authorities, who charged disorderly conduct.

Young Mills spent Monday night in the lockup, first, however, getting into communication with his father in New York over the long distance telephone. He explained his predicament and the elder Mills started at once for this city. Yesterday he secured his son's release from custody and the two went on to New York. The young man's father declares that he will institute an action for damages against the Central-Hudson Company.

Reid Stated For Britain.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Secretary Hay and Assistant Secretary Loomis had a long conference with the president yesterday regarding the changes that are to be made in the diplomatic service on March 4. The talk with Mr. Hay related entirely to the changes among the ambassadors. After the conference it was formally announced that Whitelaw Reid will succeed Joseph H. Choate, as ambassador to Great Britain. W. W. Rockhill, chief of the bureau of American republics will succeed Edwin H. Conger as Minister to China.

CANADA'S SYMPATHY.

Roman Catholic Bishops and Archbishops Send Letter to Paris.

Montreal, Dec. 28.—All the Roman Catholic bishops and archbishops of Canada, from Halifax to Vancouver, have forwarded a letter to Cardinal Richard of Paris, expressing the deep sympathy of the Canadian church with the bishops, clergy and faithful of France in these days of trial and persecution. Their lordships claim that war has been declared against Christ.

The letter was probably agreed upon at the recent gathering of prelates at Three Rivers.

The episcopal letter refers to the painful effect created in the bishops' minds at each new attempt of the French Government on the rights of the church.

Are Your Nerves on Edge?

ARE YOU SENSITIVE TO LIGHT, SOUND AND MOTION? YOU NEED

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Twitching of the nerves, sudden starting, tenderness of the scalp or spine, headache at top or back of head, noises in the ears, sparks before the eyes, sleeplessness, dyspepsia, pains and cramps, neuralgia, timidity, irritability, melancholy, physical weakness and general debility are among the symptoms of nervous exhaustion.

You may look well enough and still be a victim of nervous prostration, but can do little with either mind or body without becoming greatly fatigued.

Good food, pure air, suitable rest, and the regular and persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will thoroughly overcome the most extreme case of nervous exhaustion and prostration.

We need only to refer you to such extreme cases as those of Mrs. James Miles, Sr., of South Woodslee, Ont.; Mrs. R. W. Edwards, 83 Murray street, Brantford, Ont., or Mr. S. Cloutier at 110 Laguebetiere street, Montreal, cases in which regular physicians were entirely unable to render assistance.

Use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly, and it will not be long before the wasting process will be overcome and the work of reconstruction begun. Note your increase in weight as strength and vigour are being restored.

Mrs. J. Hatcher, 824 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., and whose husband is a moulder at the Hamilton Foundry, states:—

"I had an attack of inflammatory rheumatism which left me low a very run down state of health, and in fact my whole nervous system seemed exhausted and worn out. I could not sleep, and at times the pains in my head were almost unbearable. As a result of these symptoms I was unable to attend to my housework, and I felt miserable most of the time. On the advice of a friend I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that it has proved of very great benefit to me. I am able to do my own work now, and feel healthier and stronger than I have for years. I can truthfully state that this is due to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which I consider a great health builder."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box. 18

"Oh, never mind that, Mr. Kenner." Bob put his broad, red hand over his mouth and laughed. "I know what I'm about. Don't you bother about me."

"That never will do, Bob—mind what I say," replied the cotton buyer. "You've started out beautifully; you are the wonder an', I may say, the pride of the town, but if the like o' that get's out yore ratin' will drop like the deuce."

"I tell you I know what I'm about," said Bob, "an' I don't want no meddlin'." He was quite serious and his face had clouded over. Fearing he had been too hasty, Kenner took a new tack.

"I was a powerful devil when I was a young chap," he said to George more than to the man at whom he was speaking. "In my day an' time thar was actually the wust set o' young men in this town that ever lived. I wasn't much inclined to go into mischief, but them boys jest made me. It's plumb foolishness to try to lay down rules fer other folks to live by. I l'arnt how silly all that was though, Bob, an' I like to try to influence young fellows to steer clear o' the holes I fell in."

"That's the way with all o' you dern-ed old codgers," Bob said, now in a thoroughly good humor. "You have all the fun, an' when it's over you amuse yourselves by trying to keep the younger generation from doing the same thing."

"But it must be in moderation, my boy," said Kenner seriously, "and that little boardin' school gal is still in short dresses. You've got a future before you, Bob, and are making a bully start. Don't do anything to give the old man a chance to throw it up to us that we was wrong in standin' up fer you."

Bob avoided Kenner's serious stare. "I've got up a new scheme," he went on evasively. "I'm going to fill up a big wagon full of groceries and go away up in the mountains with a lot of catchy handbills. I intend to take along some of the goods to show that they are the right sort, and I'll set around and eat with the people and crack jokes and make friends like a candidate for office. I'll bet you I make it pay. I'm going to start some of 'em this way that are now buying on the other side of the mountains."

"A bang-up idea," said Kenner admiringly. "I've been up thar a good deal myself, an' better folks never lived."

CHAPTER XVI.

MRS. CRANSTON availed herself of the first opportunity to speak confidentially to Kitty Cosby about Lydia and George Buckley after Miss Cosby's arrival from Virginia.

"You remember, I wrote you I had something particular to tell you, Kitty," she remarked on the first afternoon as she and the guest were strolling on the lawn together.

"And you bet you roused my curiosity, Mrs. Cranston," replied the girl, who was quite pretty, decidedly stylish and tall and graceful, having brown hair and hazel eyes that seemed constantly laughing. "I know it's about Lydia."

Mrs. Cranston led her into a summer house near the carriage drive. It had two compartments and entrances from different walks. Before answering, Mrs. Cranston peered cautiously through the wooden latticework that separated the two rooms.

"What are you doing?" Miss Cosby asked.

"I was looking to see if anybody was on the other side," was the answer, in a satisfied tone, as Mrs. Cranston seated herself. "We had a lot of trouble here in the summer at a lawn party, owing to some people hearing themselves talked about. There was a spoony pair on that side and a couple of old maids on this one. The lovers were blissfully silent, for reasons of their own, and they heard some things about themselves that they didn't like. Yes, I want to talk to you about Lydia."

"I knew it," cried the visitor, laying her two hands on Mrs. Cranston's arm and sitting down beside her. "She's going to marry the governor, and you want me to help prepare for the event."

Mrs. Cranston shook her head and went on with a lengthy explanation of the existing state of affairs, in which the name of George Buckley appeared as often as that of Governor Telfare.

"Now, you see the fix we are in," Mrs. Cranston ended.

The young lady was silent, her fair brow wrinkled. "Why, Mrs. Cranston, it's simply awful!" she said after a pause. "It will never do for it to go on like this. It will be ruinous. Has the child lost her reason? Why, if he is as bad as you say, how on earth does he happen to be in—in good society—even here?"

"Perhaps I am not quite fair to him," Mrs. Cranston admitted, "or to Lydia either, in not mentioning what has really been in his favor. In the first place, he is by far the best educated and most refined young man in the place; his employer sent him off to college and gave him extraordinary advantages; then he happens to be a great reader, and Lydia is, too, you know—yes, he has most remarkably polished manners and is decidedly good looking."

"Oh, and yon put that last! How ridiculous!" Miss Cosby laughed merrily and then suddenly subsided, for her hostess was looking at her with a pained expression.

"It's no laughing matter, Kitty. We are in an awful fix. You know how headstrong Lydia is, and if she were just to get the idea that we were opposing her she'd be worse than ever. So I knew your influence would be good. You will bring her back to the old associations, and in an indirect way you can show her the social advantages of marrying Governor Telfare."

"Oh, I can do all that," said Kitty, "and if she is not already in love with this—this nondescript I'll bring her to her senses. But tell me about him—that's the main thing. What's he like? How does he conduct himself? Why, I can't imagine a—a son of a common thief, a lowborn mountaineer, a penniless bookkeeper, being even for a minute on a social footing with the only child of Major Cranston—even if you are living in the backwoods, out of all creation. If the two were shipwrecked on a lonely island together I should think"—Kitty was displaying her fine, even teeth in a jovial smile—"that the very waves would throw up a sort of barrier."

"The religious element here governs everything," returned Mrs. Cranston, with a patient smile. "These good, Christian people would think we were awfully stuck up if we refused to admit a worthy young man to our house just because his father had gone wrong; besides, he had established himself before his father's trouble. We simply drifted into the situation, and things went on till now we don't know where we stand. But to be perfectly fair to him, Kitty, he's simply a masculine marvel. When I began to fear him I began to watch for vulnerable places in his makeup, but I've found precious few, I tell you—precious few. You know I've seen good society, if any Virginia woman has, and I'm going to tell you that I have never met a more polished man in all my life—no, sir, not in Richmond, nor Boston, nor Charleston. He has actually made me blush with shame. I remember once I disputed his word about one of Balsac's heroes, only to have him prove that I was wrong a few minutes later in the nicest manner.

"He happened to be dining here, too, one night when Bishop Page stopped over with us on his way to Florida. There were several young men present, among them Tarpley Dandridge, who belongs to one of the very oldest families in Georgia and is considered the catch of the county. Well, he sat there like a stick in the cushion of his chair and let Mr. Buckley conduct the entire conversation with the bishop. In fact, Bishop Page simply directed most of his remarks to Mr. Buckley, and it really was an intellectual treat. He tripped the bishop up twice, and the old man flushed, but laughingly admitted he was wrong. He was most favorably impressed with Mr. Buckley, and, of course, I did not enter into awkward explanations. Yes, his manners could not be improved. He must have associated with refined people when he was off at college. I shall always say that the surest sign of a gentleman is for him to put his elbows on the dinner table without seeming to do it. I don't say Mr. Buckley puts his on, but he doesn't sit up like a post and not know what to do with his hands, as some men do. He acts, even on occasions like that dinner, as if such things were an everyday affair. The maid, in passing around the table, awkwardly touched his elbow just as he was about to drink from his glass of claret and shook some of the wine out on my best cloth. Now, I once saw the same thing happen to a man in Richmond, and he promptly laid the blame where it belonged, to acquit himself of appearing awkward, but Mr. Buckley treated it with superb indifference. He was telling some story, and he did not even pause, but, taking a salt cellar, he poured some of the salt on the spot, and as he continued to talk he kept rubbing it in as if he hardly knew what he was doing. The salt saved the cloth from a bad stain, and it was all done as a prince might have done it.

"You know the negroes can never forgive the poor whites for rising into prominence, and Milly, when she was clearing away the things from the table that evening, called to me. 'Come here, Miss Amy,' she said, with a sneer; 'everybody done lef' deir napkins on de table 'cept dat po' white trash, en he lef' his in his chair.' Of course it was a little thing and has no weight one way or another; but, do you know, the next month when I was back in Richmond, and your aunt Tilly had that young English lord to dinner, I watched everything he did and noticed that he dropped his napkin in his chair when he left the table. I have since learned that it is quite customary over there. We don't do it, you know, but really they would look nicer in the chairs than a lot of linen wads stuck about among the finger bowls and salad dishes. They would be less suggestive of the lavatory of a crowded sleeping car early in the morning.

Kitty Cosby drew a full breath when Mrs. Cranston paused.

"And on top of all that you say he's good looking," she said, with a pretty smile. "Well, I'll tell you, you'd better send me back to Richmond. My folks have certain vague matrimonial plans for me, and I don't know whether I'm safe here or not. I always did love to kick over the traces."

"Oh, do be sensible, Kitty!"

"Well, you certainly have got trouble ahead," said the girl, more seriously. "Lydia would hate to cause discord in the family, I know, but nine girls out of ten would fall dead in love with that sort of man under those circumstances, and they would want to stick to him too."

"Oh, Kitty, how could we—how could we possibly write back that our only child was to marry a man like that? What would the Parsons, the Woodburys, the Delmars, think? And Aunt Hallie, who at once gets the particulars, and if the name were not down in Bishop Meade's "Old Families and Churches" she'd have a fit. It won't do, Kitty; it won't do. Something has got to be done."

"Yes, but what?" said the girl. "You can count on me. I'll earn my board while I'm here if I possibly can. How does Governor Telfare like his rival?"

"He's simply crazy, Kitty. He is just at the age to want to do things in a hurry too. Folks say he never cared for his dead wife, and I suppose this is really his first love affair. He confided in me and said he simply could not bear a refusal. Then, just as I have explained to you, I told him what we feared in regard to Lydia's sympathy—I called it that—for George Buckley and advised him to handle her cautiously. He turned as white as a sheet, and his proud, thin lip curled like an angry dog's.

"'Do you mean to tell me, Mrs. Cranston,' he said, 'that I have a rival in that man, the son of a Georgia convict—I, the only living Telfare in the line—I, who have been honored by my state as the Telfares before me have been honored? Am I to meet on equal ground, under the roof of the most aristocratic family of the Old Dominion, a man of that rank?'

"I was awfully frightened over his manner, but I simply held to the ground that Lydia had a good heart and was loyal to her unfortunate friends, and that if he wanted to lose her by being imprudent and rousing her anger I should feel that I had given him due warning. He cooled down a little, and my talk didn't do the cause a bit of harm, for he simply dogged Lydia's footsteps all the rest of his visit, and when he went back to Atlanta he sent her fully $50 worth of roses. The major says I ought never to have mentioned George Buckley's name to him—that Governor Telfare is a most dangerous man, with a violent temper. He says he'd actually be afraid to have the two men meet here, but I wouldn't. Buckley is a brave man, I've no doubt, but I'd venture anything that he'd control himself under any circumstances."

Idly running her hands over the keys.

When the two ladies had gone back to the house and parted in the big hall Miss Cosby turned into the parlor, where our heroine sat at the piano, idly running her hands over the keys.

"I declare, you are a lucky girl, Lydia," said Kitty.

"To have you with me, dear, in this quiet place?" smiled Lydia, looking up.

"No." The visitor bent over the speaker. "Guess again."

"I'm not good at guessing. It's tiresome, like playing whist when one is out of practice."

"Lydia, every girl in our set simply went wild when we heard about the marked attentions you were receiving from Governor Telfare. You know there are piles and piles of marriageable girls in the south and very, very few young, unyoked governors."

"That's quite true," said Lydia, with a noncommittal smile.

"It would be nice, dear," went on Kitty, "to be the mistress of that mansion in Atlanta and preside at every function of state in the town. That's about the nearest approach we make to royalty, you know. Goodness knows, if I had the money I'd buy me an earl."

Lydia bowed her head over the keys and laughed merrily. "It wouldn't be bad, would it—the Atlanta house, I mean?"

"I should say not." Miss Cosby was trying to probe the laugh.

"Look here, Kitty," Lydia said, suddenly rising and laying her hands on Miss Cosby's shoulders and pressing them down firmly. "Take my advice and turn in and have a good time while you are here and don't waste a minute fooling with mamma's plots. She's as transparent as a pane of glass, and so are you, darling. Transparency is contagious. You used to be harder to see through."

"The idea!" Miss Cosby said. "Why, Lydia, you silly goose"— But she seemed unable to defend herself against the implied charge and could only repeat, "The idea of such a thing!"

Fly Eggs As Food.

On Lake Texcoco, in Mexico, a curious fly is found, which is eaten by the natives and known as ahuatl. The eggs of the insect, which are deposited on sedges, are also collected and eaten for food. On Lake Chalco a certain sedge is cultivated, on which the eggs of a species of fly are deposited. Bundles are made of these and placed in Lake Texcoco for the purpose, and when covered the sedge is beaten over pieces of cloth and the eggs are secured. These are collected and ground into a meal, also called ahuatl, and are in great demand on fast days when fish is required, the insects or eggs not being considered flesh, as they come from the water. The food is made into small cakes and tastes not unlike caviare. Not only the eggs, but the larvae, themselves a disagreeable looking worm, are used as food under the name of puxi.

Ona Indian Courtship.

Among the Ona Indians of Tierra del Fuego courtship is not precisely a tender affair. When the girl is from a friendly group the gallant presents her with his hunting bow. If the girl returns it by her own hand it is a sign of acceptance, but if by the hand of a messenger it is a refusal. But refusals are not common. The persevering brave watches for an opportunity which brings him along with the object of his affections. He then commands her to follow him with all speed through the bush to his own camp. The girls are prone to yield prompt obedience, for a disappointed suitor may emphasize his displeasure by an arrow directed lightly at the thigh or at her calves, the especial vanity of an Ona belle.

ANGEL CHILDREN.

Is there any happier woman in this world than that mother whose each successive little one seems to her but one more darling angel to continually lift her thoughts toward the sunshine of perfect happiness? But sorry is the lot of that poor mother to whom motherhood has ceased to be a cause of rejoicing, but has become instead a burden to be dreaded and looked forward to with melancholy and apprehension.

"About three months before our last baby was born (which is our fourth), writes Mrs. Nellie Carl, of Myrtlepoint, Coos Co., Oregon, "my health was very poor. I had been troubled for about eight years with female disease. I doctored with several physicians but obtained no relief, so I wrote to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, and was advised to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I did so, and am happy to say my health began to improve and I did my work up to the last, and felt splendid.

"I got along finely during confinement, and have the healthiest baby I ever saw. When he was three months old he weighed eighteen pounds; he is now seven months old and weighs twenty-four pounds. I am say I have had no return of my old troubles. I thank you very much for the good you have done me."

Any woman may write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., a statement of her case, which will be considered in absolute confidence by this physician who stands among the foremost specialists of the century in the treatment of women's diseases. He will send her (in a plain, sealed envelope) sound, sensible, valuable advice free of all charge.

WHY DOES A BABY CRY?

Because it is either hungry or in pain. Properly nourished it will usually grow up right and be comfortable—that's the principal thing for a baby. If its food lacks strength and nourishment add Scott's Emulsion at feeding time. A few drops will show surprising results. If a baby is plump it is reasonably safe. Scott's Emulsion makes babies plump.

COMPREHENSIVE REVIEW OF ONTARIO GOVERNMENT'S RECORD

Pacific, and consequently with the whole west of the Dominion. This line will open in the interior a vast tract of valuable mineral, timber and agricultural lands to settlement and development, and prove an important feature in carrying out the Ross Government's advance policy of building up Ontario.

But, Mr. Stratton said, the summit of achievement in this direction was represented by the Government railway—the Temiscamingue or Northern—the first government built and government owned railway in the Province, and the first railway of its kind constructed purely as a development and colonization railway in Canada. Considering the importance of this line and the great results achieved already and to be hereafter achieved by it in larger measure the Ross Government deserved a very high degree of credit for having the foresight, enterprise and large provincial spirit in originating its construction. As a result of another example of the Ross Government's progressiveness, by the exploratory surveys of New Ontario made in 1900, it was discovered, what was not known before, that there existed in this northern country an area of sixteen million acres of fine agricultural lands, capable of supporting a population of half a million. This discovery was due to the Ross Government, as the fact of the possession of this territory and a wide area rich in timber, minerals and water powers besides was due to the plucky fight of the Liberal Governments of the past for the possession of New Ontario, which the Conservative Government of the Dominion backed by the Conservative Opposition of Ontario, tried to wrest from provincial government and control. This immense territory was to be developed, and to this end the line was proposed, and plans adopted and carried out. A prominent feature of its mode of construction was the manner of paying for it without adding anything permanently to the financial burdens of the Province. It was to be built, and is being built by the development of the natural resources of the region through which it passes and which it serves. The new government road runs from North Bay, which was selected as the southern terminus so that the traffic of that region (and the west through the Grand Trunk Pacific) should not be diverted to the eastern provinces, and that Ontario should have the full benefit. The Government railway has been completed, with passenger trains now running from North Bay to New Liskeard, a distance of 112 miles, and construction trains a distance of 25 miles north of New Liskeard. A contract has been made for the extension of the road to connect with the Grand Trunk Pacific, a further distance of 57 miles—in all 200 miles of Government-built and Province-owned railway. This railway will afford access to the fertile belt of sixteen and a half million acres, promoting settlement and developing trade between the new country and old Ontario. In this connection the Government has prepared for the in rush of settlement the new line will make possible. Since the Ross Government came into power over seventy-eight new townships have been surveyed, and the work is still going on. As rapid as had been the settlement in the past it would now proceed with an accelerated speed, because the new railway would supply the facilities of travel and transport, which made settlement of the district served, desirable. And, Mr. Stratton said, that settlement was increasing rapidly. While in the year 1900 the number of immigrants coming to Ontario was only about 9,000, the figures for 1903 were 19,000, a good class of settlers, nearly all from the Mother Country. During ing the two years in which attention has been directed to the work of supplying the demand for farm labourers 9,000 immigrant labourers have been dispatched by the Ontario Bureau of Colonization, directly to farmers. And not only settlement would be promoted, but the development of mineral, timber and pulpwood and other resources, so that what has been since the dawn of creation a waste and wilderness, would, owing to the enterprise of the Government, be a busy scene of industrial activity creating wealth, making prosperous homes and creating commercial and manufacturing demands upon all the resources of older Ontario, and carrying out the fixed policy of the Liberal Government to build up Ontario, and keep her as she had been kept for the past generation, far in the lead in the possession of provinces of this great Dominion. (Applause.)

Other Forms of Development Aided.

Mr. Stratton said that he had referred to the help given the pulp and paper industry by the Government with such promising results, and this had an important significance in connection with the great cluster of industries at the "Soo" resulting from the Government's aid and encouragement. In 1895 the first concession was made to Mr. Clergue for the establishment of pulp works at the "Soo." This involved an initial investment of $1,000,000 and out o fthat grew the following industries:—Chloride Pulp Works, Nickel Reduction Works, Car Chops, Veneer Mills, Steel Plant, and the Algoma Central Railway as a means to an end in relation to all of these concerns. These represented an expenditure of $35,000,000. The financial stringency in the United States so crippled these industries that in the autumn of last year they had to suspend operations, and about 5,000 men were thrown out of employment. An appeal was made to the Government to advance the wages due the employees, as winter was approaching and many families were dependent for life upon the wages due them. The Government with an interest in the workingmen shown in its abundant labour legislation, came to the rescue, arranging with the banks to advance $260,000, the Government having as security for re-payment, the unearned land grant to the Algoma Central. Already the re-organized companies have repaid nearly half of this advance, and the balance is assured by the first of next February. The payment of the wages was only the first step in the work of reviving the dormant industries. Speyer & Co., of New York, held a mortgage of $4,500,000 on works that cost about thirty millions. The mortgage was overdue, and foreclosure and forced sale were threatened, which meant that these valuable properties would have been sacrificed at the value of scrap iron, and besides, Canadian creditors to the extent of $1,200,000 would have been shut out, and the Algoma Central Railway would not have been completed. There was danger, if the works were sold under mortgage they would pass into the hands of the United States steel trusts, who would close them to prevent their competition, especially in the matter of steel rails. At this crisis an effort was made to put the company upon a working basis, which could be accomplished if the Government would guarantee the bonds of the new company to the extent of $2,000,000, which it did, against the almost vicious obstruction of the Conservative Opposition. This was done at the last session. The Government was amply secured — by the land grant, already earned, 600,000 acres, worth at Mr. Whitney's estimate, $8 per acre, $4,800,000; 100 miles of completed railway; a subsidy of $240,000, earned from the Dominion Government, and not paid over, and a first mortgage on all the property of the company, costing over $30,000,000. Was not the Government justified? Was not their liberality well-timed? These facts show the foresight and enterprise of the Government, and the obstruction, pessimism and unenterprising spirit of the Opposition. The result has been that these immense works are again in operation. The town of Sault Ste. Marie has been saved from depopulation, and where a year ago there was stagnation and idle hands by the thousands, there is now the busy hum of industry. The steel plant is producing 500 tons of steel rails daily, which, at $28 per ton, adds $14,000 a day, or $4,200,000 a year, to the wealth of Ontario; the pulp mills turn out 100 tons a day, which at $15 per ton, add $1,500 a day, or four and a half million dollars a year, to the wealth of Ontario. The Helen iron mine is producing one thousand tons of ore per day, which at $3.25 per ton, adds $1,050,000 per year to the wealth of the province. The earning power of three other industries is put at $200 per day—or an addition to the wealth of the province of $60,000 per year. This makes a grand total of nearly ten millions a year, actually $9,750,000, added to the wealth of the Dominion by the timely aid of the Government. That is, this large addition to our wealth was created — literally created — by the operation of these industries, out of resources which, until they were utilized, were valueless. In addition the pay list of wages for 3,958 hands, amounts to $130,000 per month, or $1,500,000 per year — all to be spent at the "Soo," which must draw its supplies from old Ontario. Was not all this benefit worth the risk the Government ran, in its faith in the wealth of our resources? And was there any risk? So far the action of the Government has been amply justified, not only for the industrial results, but by the fact that the guarantee is being met. On Nov. 1st, the "Soo" industries, out of their own earnings, paid the first half year's interest on the provincial guarantee, according to agreement, and on Dec. 1st, the first half year's payment of interest on the company's bonds, was made out of their own operations. In the face of all these results, Mr. Whitney, the pessimist, the skeptic in Ontario resources, who called New Ontario "the land of the stunted poplar," had the assurance at Mr. Borden's meeting, in Massey Hall Toronto, on Oct. 4th, to say that the $2,000,000 guarantee in aid of the "Soo" industries "might as well have been thrown into Lake Superior." To be consistent, Mr. Whitney could not have said anything else. He would of course be naturally anxious to justify the bitter opposition which he and the Conservative Opposition last session put up against the "Soo" guarantee bill.

Further Fruits of a Forward Policy.

The more this action, said Mr. Stratton, was considered, the more conspicuous becomes the credit to the Government for taking the course that was taken. In the first place, the encouragement of the Government, opposed, of course, by Mr. Whitney, and the Opposition, led to the establishment of the steel rails mills at the "Soo," and, in the second place, the action of the Government in extending aid to revive the industries there, placed them on their feet. Did any of his hearers appreciate fully what this meant? It meant that the policy of the Government had been responsible for this grand fact that Ontario had the honour of having the first factory for the production of steel rails in Canada. These mills, thanks to the aid given, were turning out 500 tons of steel rails per day. This meant that we were enjoying the fruits of the development of our own resources, and that all the rails used in Canadian railways in the future would be produced in Canada. The future of this industry would be hard to estimate. The railways of Canada needed about 100,000 tons of new rails yearly to keep their road beds in shape, and that meant that nearly three millions of dollars a year that had heretofore gone out of Canada to purchase steel rails, would hereafter be kept in Canada, and spent in Ontario. The Government, backed by the Legislature, had deliberately set to work to aid the development of the iron and steel industry, and with no small degree of success. Not only had the Ross Government encouraged the production of steel rails, not only caused their production, but provided a market. In all the Acts of last session, granting aid to railways, there have been inserted conditions requiring that not only shall the steel rails used be made in Canada, but also the structural iron and steel, and all the rolling stock shall be procured in this country. Then look at the immense consumption of steel rails. The building of the Grand Trunk Pacific would cause a demand, to lay the track once, of about 500,000 tons, enough to keep the "Soo" works busy for three years on end, not to speak of the demand for renewals, which, with the increased mileage represented, will themselves keep the mills busy the greater part of the year to supply, at the present rate of output. If this country must pay out three millions a year for steel rails, is it not well that the money should be kept in our own province, and paid to the men who make our steel rails, from the mine to the finishing process, instead of sending it out of the country. Recently the C. P. R. closed a contract with the steel rail mills at the "Soo," for 50,000 tons of steel rails, which meant that their value, about $1,500,000, would have a month or two ago, been sent out of the country to enrich foreign workmen. The Government has been solicitous for the good of the province of Ontario, and anxious that Ontario should be for the people of Ontario. When Mr. Ross took power he promised to develop and assist New and Old, Ontario. Mr. Stratton said he had showed, in part, how this had been done in respect of New Ontario — how agencies had been put in motion, and foundations laid, looking to continuous and rapid development. Of course there had not been so much room for development in the older parts of the province, but these had not been neglected. Apart from specific measures of development, apart from what had been done to aid agriculture, and promote the interests of education, to extend and improve the laws looking to the betterment of the condition and protecting the rights of the working classes, there had been specific advance. The Government had set aside in 1901, a million dollars to aid in the improvement of highways, to help those counties that would help themselves to improve their highways. Already six counties had adopted the County system of highways and earned the Government grant. Others were considering the matter, and it was not the Government's fault that the whole million set apart had not been claimed. So far in the six counties $543,000 had thus been spent, of which the Government had contributed $181,000. The Ross Government had granted charters to three different companies under which they have a right to develop 375,000 horse power at Niagara Falls. The projected works will cost 25 million dollars, and the yield of revenue to the Province will be $275,000 per year. The amount spent by the Government in expropriating the land for a park at Niagara Falls was $600,000, and as the concessions to the companies were within the park, the revenue of $275,000 to be received, was nearly equal to the interest at five per cent. on six million dolars, so that the Park investment of $600,000 had, for revenue purposes, been made ten times more valuable. Yet the wise and far-seeing Mr. Whitney, the leader of the Opposition, tried to prevent the Province from receiving this revenue. At a bye-election in 1900, held in Welland, the pure Mr. Whitney, who was now posing as the apostle of political purity, to gain, no doubt, a few votes for his candidates, to secure the votes of the electors of the people of Niagara Falls for his candidate, proposed to abolish the rental and make Niagara Falls power "free as air," thus at the same time, if that was his object, unduly influencing the electors by a bribe of free power, and betraying the interests of the Province; for, if his intention had prevailed, the Province would have been deprived of a yearly revenue of over $275,000, another notable instance of the earnestness of his bid for popularity in proposing to establish five or six agricultural colleges—by wiping out revenue. Mr. Whitney had shown his incapacity for administering the affairs of the Province by opposing many progressive movements made by the Liberal Government, which have been carried in spite of him, had had been successful.

Mr. Whitney opposed the erection of a Normal School at London — another evidence of his interest in education. He also opposed the appointment of an officer in connection with the work of the Children's Aid Society, by whose noble work 1200 Ontario children had been rescued from vice, and placed in comfortable and respectable foster homes. He had opposed the appointment of a Clerk of Forestry, to assist in the care of our forest wealth of one hundred and twenty-five million dollars' worth of pine, which yields us a revenue yearly of about a million and a half of dollars. Mr. Whitney had opposed the pulp concessions, and the siding of the Algoma Central Railway, sections of the Government which had led up to the great "Soo" industries, and the establishment of steel rail mills to supply Ontario-made rails to the railways of the greater half of this continent, the most important enterprise ever launched in Canada, and destined to advance the country at large more than any other agency. When we looked at the attitude of Mr. Whitney and his party towards the development and building up of the country, would it it be for a moment argued that his succession to Hon. Mr. Ross, and his great spirit of development, would be for the benefit of this country? Was it to be for a moment expected, that Mr. Whitney and his party would administer the affairs of the province as capably as has been done in the past thirty years, or has been done by the Ross Government in the past five years? The Liberal Government had collected one hundred and twenty-four million dollars, and expended one hundred and twenty-one million dollars, and could now show the difference — three millions in the banks in cash to the credit of the province. Not a single dollar had been unaccounted for. Was it to be thought that Mr. Whitney and his colleagues, in face of their past record of obstruction, would do more to develop New Ontario, to take a more advanced course, to apply a more progressive policy? His, and his party's, past record, their opposition and obstruction to advanced legislation, and an aggressive policy, extended now by the new policy enunciated at Toronto recently, showed that they had a poverty of ideas and lack of patriotism. The so-called platform adopted at the Conservative conference, contained, apart from what was not trivial, planks stolen from the Liberal policy, in part long applied, or previously adopted by the great Liberal convention.

There were only two grounds upon which the Conservatives claimed that the Liberal Government should be replaced—one was that the Liberal Government had been in power a long time, and the other was that corrupt practices had been followed by Liberal workers. There was no claim that the Liberal Government should be set aside because it had not administered the affairs of the country ably and honestly. No Conservative had a charge of that kind to make because he knew that it could not be substantiated. This then disproved the claim that the Liberals had been too long in power. They would be too long in power when they showed that they could not, by practice and by virtue of their policy be looked to to give effective and energetic administration. The Conservatives by opposing progressive measures and by their lack of a constructive policy, showed themselves badly equipped for laying claim to the responsibility of managing the affairs of Ontario.

Mr. Stratton said the Government appealed to the people on the strength of their legislative and administrative record, a ground of attack the Opposition had never sought to make. They had at the several general elections appealed on side issues. Special appeals had been made to the passions and prejudices of the people—in one campaign "equal rights" figured conspicuously, at another time an opposite appeal was represented by "facts for Irish electors," and now the temperance appeal was being employed. Mr. Stratton said he was justified in saying that the License Laws of the Province had never been more effectively enforced in the history of the Province than when he had charge of their enforcement. He remarked that he had been a candidate at the last general election, and it suited the purpose of a few temperance Conservatives to raise a howl against him on the temperance question, with a view of embarassing him. That was the case then. Things have changed now. The Conservative candidate at this election was not a prohibitionist. Yet we see these same men who in 1902 were assailing him (Mr. Stratton) as an enemy of temperance, now strongly and consistently, or rather inconsistently, supporting a candidate who was regarded as hostile to the temperance cause. The electors should study these matters and not be carried away by side winds and special appeals to issues not affecting the fitness of the Government to wisely rule the province. As to Mr. Anderson they all knew where he stood, that he was a temperance man himself and would use his influence in the promotion of its interests.

A Basis of Record and Policy.

Therefore, on the score of their past record, Mr. Whitney and his party were not entitled to the confidence of the electors. He had shown that their past relation to the administration of the country, their unreasoning opposition to an advanced policy, had demonstrated their unfitness to be entrusted with the great responsibility of directing the development of the resources of the province. He had shown that the Ross Government had continued with marked success the splendid administration given to this province for the past thirty years, and were in every way — in matters of business capacity, energy, enterprise and loyalty to, and faith in, the resources of Ontario—entitled to a continuation of the trust they had discharged so well.

Not only had the Liberal Government an unassailable record of good administration to their credit, but the extended and confirmed policy adopted at the recent Liberal convention give promise of even more fruitful and beneficial administration of provincial affairs, and helped to create a claim for a renewal of public confidence, which could not be approached or equalled, by their opponents.

Hon. Mr. Stratton in conclusion, submitted that these facts showed that in the matter of record of honest and effective administration and development of provincial resources, capable care of finances and legislation beneficial to every interest of the people, and in the matter of a large and progressive policy, the Government amply deserved a renewal of the confidence of the people. The Government did not claim to be perfect, nor claim to be infallible. It was only human and liable to err, and make miscalculations, to fail in matters, and fall short of its ideals. It might have its shortcomings, and might have made mistakes, but with reasonable allowance, it was to be claimed that the Government had laboured honestly, and to the best of its judgment, for the public welfare, and that the results had been manifestly beneficial to the progress and advancement of the best interests of the people, and the progress and prosperity of the province, to a degree to warrant a renewal of the confidence heretofore reposed in the Liberal Government of the province.

After a few words of commendation of Mr. Anderson, and of advice and encouragement to perfect organization, and to heartily co-operate in his return for East Peterborough, Mr. Stratton resumed his seat amidst loud applause.

At the conclusion of the meeting, cheers were given for the King, Premier Ross, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Stratton and the chairman.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year, I remain,

Yours respectfully,

The Aftermath of Xmas

The Holiday Shopping is all over, and this store is beginning to settle down to normal ways again. Our Christmas business was greater than it has ever been before, and our vast stock was pretty well picked over. Of course this picking leaves in its wake many things that are tumbled and bedraggled, and these have no place in a clean, fresh stock. So we've put them out and put hurry-out prices on them. Intrinsically, just as good as ever, merely lost a part of their good looks, that's all and for this you get the reduction on—

SHOVEL COMPANY WILL GET THE SITE.

An Arrangement Effected at a Special Council Meeting Yesterday Afternoon Attended by Representatives.

Mr. Kennedy Receives Two Shares of Stock to Vacate Portions of the Property Required by the Company.

Other Business Transacted by the Council — Insurance Rates are not the Same in Ashburnham.

The Town Council held a special session yesterday afternoon in the Town Clerk's office, the object of the meeting being to deal with the bylaw respecting the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company, and to overcome if possible, the difficulty into which it had fallen by the action of Mr. Kennedy, the present occupant of the lots which the town agreed to give the Shovel Company.

Representatives of the Company, Mr. Kennedy and the members of the Town Trust Commissioners were present at the meeting, the result of which was that an amicable settlement of the difficulty was arrived at, the Company agreeing to give Mr. Kennedy two shares of stock to vacate the property, or such parts of it as may be required for the operations of the Company, and the latter giving him the privilege of occupying such parts as are not required by them until they are needed.

The facts in connection with the matter are briefly that when the Lock Company were granted the lots in question some months ago, Mr. Kennedy at that time had a lease of the property expiring last May, and as an inducement to him to vacate before his lease expired the Company offered him some remuneration. Subsequently they decided not to build there, whereupon they made over to Mr. Kennedy to vacate, and his lease expired in May last.

The Shovel Company later made application to the town for these lots and it was understood that a bylaw giving them to the Company, subject to certain condition, for the safeguarding of the town's interests, would be passed. On the strength of this the Company let the contract for the foundation of their building, and work was commenced, but was suspended later, on the request of Mr. Kennedy, who claimed that his interests were being prejudicially affected and that he had never been notified by the town to vacate the property.

The Shovel Company were not prepared to pay him the amount agreed upon by the Lock Company, because they took the position that since he no longer held a lease of the property he had no claim upon it.

This was the position when the arrangement mentioned above was effected yesterday, as a result of the meeting, which was attended by Mayor Roger and Aldermen Johnston, Adams, Scott, Mason, Best, Hicks, Bush, Morrison; Messrs. W. H. Moore, R. Hall and J. Stevenson, of the Town Trust Commissioners, with Mr. A. Stevenson Secretary; and Messrs. Hon. J. R. Stratton, R. H. Fortye, W. Rudkins and D. O'Connell, of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications were read and dealt with:—

From D. W. Dumble, pointing out that as there is to be another sitting for registration of manhood suffrage voters, places for registration will be required and the town must pay the expense. The Clerk was instructed to take the necessary steps to provide the accommodation.

From J. S. Robertson, Toronto, on behalf of the National Sanitarium Association.—Received.

From the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company, stating that they relinquished any claim to the lots owned by the town south of Rink street and North of Perry and west of George streets, under the bylaw as it was not the intention of the Company to accept them under the terms and condition therein contained.—Received.

From J. T. Wright, stating that he would be unable to act as Deputy Returning Officer for Division No. 8, and recommending Jas. McDonald.—Received.

INSURANCE RATES.

From the Davis, Thompson Company, referring to the fire insurance rates on properties in Ward 5; there seems to be a misunderstanding or some trouble between some of the companies as well as the Underwriters' Association as to whether the properties there should rate the same as similar properties in other wards. The question of rates on one particular risk had been raised by one of the Companies when the writers were informed that Peterough rates did not apply to Ashburnham, notwithstanding the fact that the latter village had been incorporated with Peterborough. In the opinion of the writers the rates in all of the wards should be the same, and in fact since incorporation they had applied similar rates. Of course the council understood that formerly the key rate of Ashburnham was higher than that of Peterborough. There was no doubt, however, that until the matter was put right with the Fire Underwriters' Association trouble would arise from time to time, and they suggested that the Council take the matter up with the Underwriters with a view to a proper understanding. — Referred to the Mayor and Chairman of the Finance Committee and Fire, Water and Light Committee.

BOARD OF WORKS.

Ald. Best presented the following report of the Board of Works:—

Your Board of Works begs leave to report as follows:—

1. We recommend that the time for the completion of Mr. John Robson's contract be extended to May 15th, 1905, provided the Town Solicitor reports that doing so will not prejudicially affect the town with respect to the contract and bonds.

2. We recommend that the Inspector of sewer construction be allowed full time from the commencement of the work as recommended by the Engineer.

3. We recommend that the recommendation of the Town Engineer that the balance of $264.80 that had been retained from Mr. J. E. Hayes on account of his sidewalk contract be paid to him, be adopted.

4. Your Board has been informed by Mr. Learmouth that the owners of the bridge over the old Dickson Co. dam have no objection to the town repairing it for foot passenger traffic provided their rights are not prejudiced.

5. We recommend that the first cost of the concrete mixer be paid out of the general rates.

6. We recommend that John Robson be paid 85 per cent. on the sewer work completed this year, in accordance with a report from the Engineer, provided the Solicitor advises that doing so will not prejudicially affect the town with respect to the contract and bonds.

7. We recommend that the Town Trust Commissioners be furnished with a statement of the amount of gravel taken from the pit this year, as requested by them, with the understanding that no charge shall be made for it.

8. We recommend that the Street Commissioner be authorized to procure two snow ploughs from the Peter Hamilton Co. at a cost not to exceed $33 each.

9. As there was an error of $9.00 made in reading Mr. Zimri Blodgett's tender for snow ploughing in the northern district we recommend that he be paid $9.00 in addition to the amount stated in the by-law at the end of the season.

10. We recommend that W. Taylor & Co. be paid $28.43 in full of their account for cement pipe purchased by the Town in the year 1904.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Ald. Adams presented the following report:—

Your Finance Committee begs leave to report and recommend that the following accounts be paid:—

W. J. Main	$ 14 00
A. Hall	44 00
Canadian Contract Record	4 40
Union Publishing Co, ...	7 25
F. R. J. MacPherson	1 35
Peterborough Light & Power Co,	6 00
J. J. Lynch	25
G. Walter Green	21 50
Drummond & Duffus	10 72
Commissioners of the Town Trust	336 00

Ald. Adams moved, seconded by Ald. Scott, that a petition now submitted, asking the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to approve of by-law No. 1138, be signed by the Mayor and Clerk, and sealed with the corporation seal, and forwarded to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

The bylaw in question is one to authorise the raising of $10,000 for the current expenditure of the Water Commissioners for the year 1904. The bylaw was carried.

A bylaw was passed appointing J. Malone as deputy returning officer in No. 9 Division, instead of J. T. Wright.

Ald. Adams moved the third reading of an amended bylaw to provide for the freehold electors voting on the question of paying for the cost of granolithic sidewalks by a general tax system. The bylaw was given its final reading.

SHOVEL COMPANY'S LOT.

A deputation representing the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company, composed of Hon. J. R. Stratton, R. H. Fortye, W. Rudkins and D. O'Connell, was present at the meeting, to arrange for the transfer of the lot at the south end of the town, to that company.

Mr. Stratton, the president, addressed the council, stating that the company was desirous that the council would pass a bylaw at as early a date as possible conveying to the company the lots formerly given to the Lock Company, upon terms which might be mutually agreed upon. The company would be prepared to rely on the good faith of the council as to asking the Legislature to ratify the agreement.

The company is now waiting for the bylaw to be passed to commence the erection of the buildings for the machinery, which is now ordered.

The bylaw as submitted to the company, was satisfactory, with one or two amendments, one being that the company is to place machinery in the building to the value of $12,000, which was the amount agreed upon. They would also agree to not dispose of a part or parts of the property.

Mr. Stratton referred to the events which led up to the present controversy with Mr. Kennedy, as stated above.

Mr. Kennedy addressed the council on the matter, and said that he had a lease of the lots, expiring in May, 1904. Mr. Stratton had spoken to him, for the Lock Company, on the matter, and an arrangement had been made mutually acceptable to himself and the company. When the Lock Company had decided to not accept the lots, and the Shovel Company had agreed to take them, he thought that the same arrangements would be made by them. He considered himself a tenant of the lot still, and needed it in his business, and would like to continue in his tenancy of the lot. He thought that there were other lots which would be just as well situated to the requirements of the company as that in question.

The Mayor explained the position of the council, which was that the Commissioners had informed the former that Mr. Kennedy had agreed to vacate the property for the Lock Company, and he understood that the same arrangements could be made with the Shovel Company, as he thought the interests were practically the same. Mr. Stratton have informed the Mayor that the companies were entirely separate.

He had thought that since the same arrangements had not been made with Mr. Kennedy, and as there was some difficulty, he had better call a meeting so that the different interests might explain their views.

Mr. D. O'Connell, the solicitor for the Shovel Company, addressed the council and stated the position of the company, which was that the machinery had been ordered, as the company had been told that the bylaw would be passed, and on the strength of this they had let the contract for the foundation of the building. The present plan of the company was that their buildings would go 45 feet into the site of the building occupied by Mr. Kennedy, and this plan could not be changed, because it was the intention in the future to add a handle factory to the shovel factory.

Mr. W. H. Moore, on behalf of the Town Commissioners, addressed the council. He said that they had little to say, as they had been content to follow the lead of the council. Mr. Kennedy had leased the lot, and the lease had expired, and since that time no rent had been paid, and Mr. Kennedy had no lease of the land at present. The Commissioners had not taken any action towards asking Mr. Kennedy to vacate the lot, and they had nothing to say until the council had passed the bylaw. He stated that Mr. Kennedy had paid the town $100 a year rent, and $60 a year taxes.

If the council passed a bylaw giving the lot to the Shovel Company, the Commissioners would then deal with it.

Mr. Stratton said that the company felt that Mr. Kennedy would be entitled to some little remuneration to vacate the property, and he suggested that he might be paid $100 or $150, to which Mr. Kennedy replied that if the council did not intend to pass the bylaw he would not feel like leaving the property for that amount of money.

Mr. Stratton, after a conference with Mr. Kennedy, announced to the council that they had come to an agreement, whereby Mr. Kennedy was to be given two shares of stock, and would agree to vacate such portions of the property as are required for the purposes of the company, provided the Commissioners would release him from the rent for the time since May 1st.

A resolution was passed by the council, on motion of Ald. Best and Morrison, as follows:

That in the arrangements with the Shovel Company, the value of the machinery be placed at $12,000, and and that provision be made that the company transact dispose of part or parts of the land, but that it must be dealt with en bloc, and used for manufacturing purposes, and that the Town Trust Commissioners be asked to give the company possession immediately.

A bylaw embodying this with the other provisions will be passed at a future meeting of the council.

The council then adjourned.

ELECTED REEVE OF OTONABEE

Mr. John H. Fife Will Fill That Office for Next Year

Nominations on Monday at Keene—A Fight for the Council.

From our Own Correspondent.

Keene, December 27th. — There was a large number of the intelligent electors of Otonabee present in the Town Hall on Monday, when nominations for Reeve and councillors took place. For the past couple of years the ratepayers generally did not seem to take much interest in township affairs, and only a very small number would attend the nomination meeting. The entire council and reeve have been elected by acclamation for two years, but this year the electors evidently thought that an election is the most satisfactory way for all concerned.

There was a large contingent present from the western part of the township, and they nominated two candidates, Messrs. Thos. J. Welsh, and Wm. B. Stewart. Every part of the township was equally well represented.

Mr. J. M. Drummond, township clerk, was nominating officer and chairman.

Messrs. John H. Fife and John J. Moore were the only names proposed for Reeve, and as Mr. Moore declined the nomination, Mr. Fife was declared elected. The following gentlemen were nominated for councillors, all of whom signified their intention of entering the contest:—Messrs John Carey, Wm. J. Porter, Robert Humphries, Christopher Mowbray, Thos. J. Welsh, Wm. B. Stewart, and John J. Grady. The first two named were on the 1904 council, together with Mr. J. J. Moore and John H. Fife, the newly elected Reeve. Mr. John Dayell, who was elected a county councillor on Dec. 19th, was Reeve of the township during 1904.

Short speeches were given by the candidates also by Mr. Dayell and Mr. Moore. Mr. Drummond explained the new Assessment Act in regard to township assessment.

A meeting of local gentlemen was held in Mr. D. J. McCamus' rooms on Monday afternoon for the purpose of devising ways and means of preserving the fish and game, in and around Rice Lake. It was decided to form a club, to be called the Keene Gun Club. The officers will be President, Edmund Foley; secretary-treasurer, D. J. McCamus. It was pointed out that the law in regard to fishing and shooting is not properly enforced, and it was decided to urge the Government to make the law in regard to fishing and shooting more stringent, and also to see that it is properly enforced. It was also decided to petition the Government not to grant any fishing or shooting rights to any syndicate. It is understood that a syndicate of wealthy Americans is trying to obtain preserves on Rice Lake, and all sportsmen who enjoy a day's shooting, etc., should unite and frustrate their attempts to deprive them of the right to do so.

The funeral of the late Miss Ida McFarlane, who died recently, took place on Saturday from the G. T. R. station to the Pine Grove cemetery.

MR. McWILLIAMS' FIRST MEETING

In the Out-of-Town Campaign was Held Tuesday Night in Bensfort and was Most Successful.

Able Presentation of the Questions at Issue by the Candidate and Mr. Daniel O'Connell.

Splendid Opening Meeting—South Monaghan Residents Turned out Well to Support Liberal Candidate.

Despite the inclement weather, and the bad condition of the roads, there was a good attendance at the meeting at. Bensfort on Tuesday evening, at which Mr. R. F. McWilliams opened his campaign. Mr. D. N. Dodds occupied the chair, and in the course of his duties, made several happy little speeches, which added not a little to the good spirit of the meeting. The speakers of the evening were the candidate and Mr. Daniel O'Connell, both of whom got a warm reception and a most attentive hearing. Altogether the meeting was one which augured well for the success of the campaign it initiated.

Mr. McWilliams was the first speaker. He began with some personal explanations. He regretted, he said, that while he had spoken in almost every other part of the county that this was his first visit to South Monaghan. He hoped to come much oftener in the future. He eulogized very warmly Hon. J. R. Stratton who, at an age even younger than that of the speaker, had been elected to represent West Peterborough, who had rapidly forged his way to the front rank, and who, besides giving his best services to the riding, had brought great credit to it, by reason of the large share he had in the successful administration of the Ross Government.

Mr. McWilliams then dealt with the charges of corruption which have been made against the Government, emphasizing and explaining the cardinal principle that corruption in political life was all a question of the individual men; that the only way to put a stop to it was that each riding elect only representatives who are known to be opposed to all forms of electoral corruption. For what corrupt practices there had been, the speaker had no defence. He condemned them in the strongest terms, but he objected most emphatically to the implication that political corruption was all in the Liberal party. In the last two years there had been as many Conservatives unseated as there had been Liberals, and previous to that time there had been more Conservatives. The scandals of the last civic election in Toronto were still fresh in the memory of his hearers. Many corrupt practices were proven, and they were all done by Conservative workers in the interests of Conservative candidates.

The chief difference between the parties was that the Liberals admitted that there had been corruption in their ranks, and they deeply regretted it; whereas the Tories hypocritically shut their eyes to what was going on in their own party, while they clamoured loudly about the Liberals.

In this connection, Mr. McWilliams referred to the agreement between himself and Mr. Bradburn, which had been published in all the papers. They had mutually pledged themselves that there should be no bribery or corruption, and they would not in any way countenance it. He believed that the result would show that this election would be singularly free from such things, and also from unpleasant personalities.

The main issue of this campaign, the speaker contended, is the record of the Ross Government. That is a matter of vital interest to every elector. Quite aside from the pride they feel in having the most progressive and best managed province on the continent, it was a matter of dollars and cents to them. The Ross Government had instituted the Succession Duties, which were now yielding from $200,000 to $300,000 a year; taxes had been levied on loan companies, banks and other corporations. The Government had just finished a most careful inquiry into the assessment of railway corporations, and are now ready to pass a measure of railway taxation which should be more in the interests of the people. In all these ways revenue had been made for the province, and the burden on the individual electer lightened very materially, since if it were not for these taxes this money would have to be raised by a direct tax.

Mr. McWilliams dealt briefly with the policies of the two parties, as they constituted the present and future needs of the province. He specially commended the Government for the able manner in which they had met the many requirements and problems of the immense and wealthy territory of New Ontario. The building of the Temiscamingue Railway as a government work, he particularly commended. He also praised the promptness with which the government was carrying on the work of the necessary extensions to meet the Grand Trunk Pacific. In this way they were giving to the older parts of the province the cheapest and most direct method of supplying the millions of dollars' worth of material that would be consumed in the construction of the Transcontinental line, and afterwards in the country it would open up to settlement.

Mr. McWilliams dealt briefly in closing with the temperance question, outlining the reforms already brought about by the Liberal party, and the further reforms their platform called for. In temperance, as in all other matters, the policy of the Government was one of progressive reform, while that of the Conservatives was indefinite and unknown, for the Conservative conferences failed to endorse Mr. Whitney's ideas, and each leader was therefore free to follow his own fancy as occasion might require.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, who was the next speaker, was given a most hearty reception. He began by saying that it was greatly in the interests of the community to send as their representative to Parliament a young man who had all his future before him, for then his interests coincided with those of his constituency. The whole success of his career would lie in his making his services creditable both to himself and those who elected him.

Mr. O'Connell deprecated very much the tendency there was throughout the province to minimize the importance of the issues in this election. When it was remembered that the Legislature had charge of all the laws relating to our civil rights, the initiating and guiding of the educational system of the country, the care of the afflicted, the management of the immense natural wealth and developing of our natural resources, everyone must surely recognize the importance of putting the control of these vital matters in the hands of men who have been tried, and who have proved themselves capable and reliable in the conduct of public business. Since the time of Confederation practically, the Liberal party has had the management of our heritage of untold wealth—of our timber, our minerals, and our soil. It would have been an easy matter to squander these resources, as was indeed very largely done in the Dominion, and as was done in all the older provinces. It has required statesmanship of a very high order to establish and maintain a system of administration so honest and economical that although this province has spent money more lavishly than any other, the burdens so assumed have been more than met by the revenue yielded.

Of $123,000,000 collected under the Liberal regime in Ontario, $92,000,000 has been returned to the people in services and grants, which would would otherwise have had to be met by local municipalities by means of a direct tax.

The main cry of the Opposition, under the leadership of Mr. Whitney is that the Liberal Government has administered the affairs of the province too long, and that it should be removed from office for just that reason. But who ever heard of such a preposterous reason being advanced by practical men. The Opposition has put forward no great issue, nor has it found any large measure of reform on which to appeal to the country. Until that Opposition has leaders, who are able to bring forward a policy more effective and useful than that of carping criticism they cannot hope for, and do not deserve, support.

Mr. O'Connell expressed his pleasure at the agreement which had been made between the two candidates in this riding. He believed no greater service could be done to any community than the wiping out of the pernicious system, which had grown up to such an alarming extent. He thought the man who would offer, and the man who would accept a bribe, each unworthy of the precious right of citizenship.

Mr. O'Connell closed with an eloquent appeal to the electors to guard jealously the rights of suffrage and to consider well their duty to maintain in office the men who had always shown themselves capable of administering that office in such a way as to bring prosperity and credit to the province, whose affairs they guided.

Mr. Jas. Finnie, who accompanied Mr. McWilliams, to Bensfort, his old home, was next called upon by the chairman and the meeting for a speech, but he modestly declined to go to the platform.

The meeting broke up with cheers for the King and the candidate.

LINGERING COLD.

Withstood Other Treatment But Quickly Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"Last winter I caught a very severe cold which lingered for weeks," says J. Urquhart, of Zephyr, Ontario. "My cough was very dry and harsh. The local dealer recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and guaranteed it. So I gave it a trial. One 25 cent bottle of it cured me. I believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be the best I have ever used." This is one of the most staple medicines in use. Thousands have testified to its excellence. It not only cures a cold quickly and effectually, but counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It is equally valuable for children and may be given to them with implicit confidence. It always cures and is pleasant to take. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains no opium or other harmful drug. Sold by all druggists.

PROPOSED EXPORT DUTY ON CANADIAN WHEAT.

It is a strange fact, and one that shows a curious conception of the duties of government, that the ruling of the Secretary of the United States Treasury that Canadian wheat ground in American mills, for export, may enter the United States free of duty, should have been followed by a demand that an export duty on Canadian wheat should be imposed.

It is not surprising that the Minister of the Interior, when the question was put to him as to what he thought of such a proposition, should have replied that it was utterly out of the question.

It seems that American millers find that a mixture of Canadian hard wheat improves and cheapens their flour, but the duty of twenty-five cents per bushel, imposed under the Dingley tariff, has prevented its importation.

United States flour, moreover, is losing its reputation in the markets of Europe and United States millers find that it is imperative for them to have Canadian wheat if they are to hold their own in competition with other countries.

For the purpose of producing a high grade of flour, the soft wheat grown in the Western States must be mixed with hard wheat, such as is produced in Minnesota and Dakota, but nowhere else within the jurisdiction of the Republic. These two States no longer furnish a sufficient supply at Minneapolis, and to meet the demand the conditions regulating the importation of Canadian wheat into the States have been relaxed.

The American producers have given an undertaking to sell the flour made in part from Canadian wheat only in foreign markets, and on this understanding alone is the rebate of the duty on wheat allowed.

"Officials paid by the people" to adopt the phraseology of an American contemporary, "guard these mills to insure that England and Japan shall get every pound of flour at a lower price than our own people would be glad to pay for it."

Here surely is an irony by way of commentary on the economic system of the United States. Were Canadian wheat allowed to enter the United States freely, and be ground for consumption by the American people they would get better and cheaper flour and they would stimulate their own milling industry. But the American wheat growers claim they would be injured by Canadian competition.

This is a fallacy, because the price of wheat is governed, so far as rings and corners allow it to be governed, by the price in London, the chief consuming centre.

But American opinion will allow Canadian wheat to be ground for export, and thus foreigners are able to get the benefit of cheaper and better flour than the Americans themselves do.

But in this way the American flour producer is able to compete with Canadian millers in markets where they would otherwise be supreme.

Hence comes the demand for an export duty on Canadian wheat.

The proposition would be suicidal, and no government could for a moment entertain it.

As Mr. Sifton has pointed out, it would be a direct tax on the wheat grower, who is already paying his share of taxes.

It is not by any means apparent that the Lake of the Woods and the Ogilvie Milling Companies will not be able to hold their own against their Minneapolis rivals as they have done in the past.

In any case the best that can be done for these highly prosperous concerns is to improve the transportation facilities, and to aid them in their efforts to develop new markets.

The milling business is increasing, and will no doubt continue to increase in the future, but it cannot of course keep pace with the increase in the production of wheat. The efforts of all concerned will be directed to bringing the export price of wheat up to the highest possible figure by the most effective systems of inspection and transportation.—Ottawa Free Press.

Baden, Dec. 29.—A young man named Jacob Jamieson, whose home is near Moulton Station, Welland County, was killed about 3.30 yesterday afternoon at Sherk & Snider's flour mill, where he was employed as miller. His clothing got caught in the shafting, and he was whirled to death before assistance could be rendered.

Another Fire Victim.

Montreal, Dec. 29.—Another victim has been added to the list of the dead as a result of the fire in Perrault lane on Christmas morning, in the death of Ida St. George, who was taken from the building so badly burned that there was no hope for her recovery. The victim was 19 years of age.

Death Followed Operation.

Fergus, Dec. 29.—On Monday morning Byron Moir, about 19 years of age, eldest son of Forbes Moir of West Garafraxa, was going across the railway track to look after some stock on another farm, when, owing to the dense fog, he started to cross the track but was struck by the step of the hind car a few inches above the knee. After consultation it was found necessary to amputate the leg. The shock was too severe, as at midnight he died.

Christmas Present Kills.

Buffalo, Dec. 29.—Grace Sullivan, aged eight years, was accidentally shot and killed yesterday by her brother, Daniel, aged 12. BLAZE IN A BREWERY.

$30,000 Fire in Cosgrave's, Toronto, On Wednesday Night.

Toronto, Dec. 29.—The fire department was up against its first battle of this winter, and in a heavy gale and frigid atmosphere did creditable work at a blaze which caused some $30,000 loss to the Cosgrave Brewing Co., Limited, at Queen and Niagara streets. The fire occurred just after 6 o'clock, and although when first seen the blaze was at its incipient stage, the slight time elapsing between the giving of the alarm and the arrival of the firemen was sufficient to give the fire good headway.

The fire was confined to the manufacturing plant and malt kiln, the malt house, offices, barley houses and new ice plant being untouched. The loss is made up of $10,000 on hops, $10,000 on malt damaged by water and $10,000 on buildings. The machinery damaged is not expensive, but the company will be shut down for at least a month. Other breweries, were quick last night in proffering assistance.

WORKMEN AND APPRENTICES.

Gurney Company's Estimate of Those Enticed From Its Service.

Toronto, Dec. 29.—The Gurney Foundry Company have begun action against the Western Foundry Company of Wingham, claiming $12,000 because the defendant company is alleged to have enticed away 15 apprentices and workmen. The taking of evidence was begun yesterday by the master.

W. H. Carrick, first vice-president of the Gurney Company, referring to one apprentice, Mallory by name, said he estimated his services at $25 a day, but the wage he got was 66 2-3 cents. Other men are declared to have been worth from $25 to $75 a day to the firm. Some have returned to its employ. Ordinary apprentices are valued at $5 a day. The trouble dates back to 1903, when the Western Company was started.

DISTRICT OFFICERS

Are to Be Given Wider Powers Under New Militia Act.

BANQUET TO SIR F. W. BORDEN

Minister of Militia Speaks On the Militia Changes, and Points Out the Great Benefits of the New Militia Council —Canada Had No Despatches to Closing Imperial Dockyards.

Toronto, Dec. 29.—Sir Frederick Borden was the guest of honor last evening at a splendid complimentary banquet by the officers of the Toronto Garrison. The Minister of Militia, in a happy reply to the toast of his health, spoke at some length on the administration of the Militia Department, and forecasted some changes which will give wider powers to the district officers commanding. He referred to the closing of the Dockyards at Halifax and Esquimalt, and said that while the Government had no message from the imperial authorities upon the matter, he had no doubt the outcome would be satisfactory.

New Militia Act.

Sir Frederick discussed the new Militia Act, which he said was the most important fact in connection with the development of the Canadian militia within the year. He believed it would confer the most signal benefits upon the Canadian militia of anything since the militia was organized. He wished it distinctly understood that the new law was a Canadian law, first, last and all the time. When he was asked to join the Imperial Defence Committee and attended its meetings, he had only to state his case and his requests were granted. "We may now appoint a Canadian as General Officer Commanding, provided he is fit, and the reproach of inferiority in rank has been removed from Canadian officers, as compared with British; who formerly came out and were given a senior rank." (Hear, hear.) In passing, Sir Frederick observed that the General Officer Commanding coming to Canada had great power—perhaps not always as great as he thought. He usually set out at once to prove that his immediate predecessor was an ass—(laughter)—and he was oftentimes able to prove it without the slightest difficulty. (Renewed laughter.) The new system provided for co-operation among the members of the headquarters staff, which had not previously existed. "We want to administer, not to command," declared Sir Frederick, adding that the gathering of information for and the consultations by the new Militia Council would result in continuity, co-operation and co-ordination. He praised the work of General Lake, the new Chief of Staff, and declared his belief that the Council would result in great good to the militia.

Increased Powers For D.O.C's.

"We propose to decentralize very largely from Ottawa," Sir Frederick continued. "We propose to make a District Officer Commanding something more than a first-class clerk, which they have been very largely in the past, through no fault of their own. (Laughter.) We propose to give the D.O.C. some discretion with reference to the men of his district, and if he does not show that he is fit—not our friend here" (turning to Col. Otter)—"I know he is—(cheers)—but some new man that may be appointed, like Col. Lessard—(laughter)—if he should show that he is not worthy of his extraordinary powers, because they will be extraordinary, which will be given him—well, so much the worse for him. But how in the world can you train a man to command and to administer in his district if you don't give him an opportunity of doing so?" (Applause.) Sir Frederick added a word on the ability of Canadians to administer militia as well as justice, public works and other departments, and closed by again thanking his hosts for their kindness.

The banquet then concluded, and the remainder of the evening was spent in informal social intercourse.

Reports That Japs Were Dispossessed Evidently Untrue.

MOUNTING BIG GUNS THERE

Gen. Stoessel Injured By a Fall From His Horse—Gen. Kondratchenko Killed—More Returns of the Jap Dead—Food High in Port Arthur—Japs Guarding the Communications.

Che Foo, Dec. 29.—It is reported here that the Japanese in front of Port Arthur have mounted two 29-centimetre guns on 203-Metre Hill.

No Torpedoes Escaped.

Che Foo, Dec. 29.—The persistent rumor which has been in circulation for the past two weeks that several torpedo boat destroyers had escaped from Port Arthur and succeeded in reaching Vladivostock, is denied by the officers of the British steamer Ellinay, which arrived here from Vladivostock yesterday. These officers say that the cruisers Rossia and Grombol are in good shape.

Maj. General Killed.

Tokio, Dec. 29.—Trustworthy advices from Port Arthur confirm the report that Gen. Kondratchenko has been killed and that Gen. Stoessel has been injured by falling from his horse. Gen. Smilnoff is also reported wounded.

Jap List of Dead.

Tokio, Dec. 29.—The navy department publishes a list of nine officers and 65 men who were killed while on special duty.

The army department publishes a list of 28 officers killed and 56 wounded, presumably at Port Arthur.

Food Prices Are High.

Tokio, Dec. 29.—Reports from Port Arthur say the garrison is confident in the belief that relief will arrive before March 1. Despite its heavy losses Nov. 26 and subsequently the garrison is said to be cheerful and resolved to continue the struggle as long as a single soldier remains. The army claims to have sufficient provisions to last until February. The navy possesses about one month's stores. The price of food in the beleaguered fortress is high. Beef is a rouble and one-half per pound; horse meat is six copecks per pound; dog meat 25 copecks per pound; turkeys 150 roubles apiece; eggs 160 roubles per hundred. The Russian rouble to-day is worth about 77 cents.

Getting Ready For Spring.

Muanshan, Dec. 29.—Everything continues quiet along the front of the hostile armies. There is little expectation of a decisive movement till spring, when it will be possible for both sides to throw in strong reinforcements to commence the campaign in earnest. In the meantime the chief business of the Japanese seems to be regarding their communication eastward.

They have an extensive field system of narrow guage field railways, one of which connects General Kuroki's base at Shadeidzi with Fengwang with a branch to Saimatsa. A supplementary line is being laid in connecting Liaoyang with Haicheng. There is an important line of warehouses along the Yalu River and many bridges have recently been constructed with a care unusual in field operation. This elaborate system has been seriously threatened by Gen. Rennenkampff's raids southeastward.

There are evidences that the Japanese are strengthening and fortifying their line of communications toward Corea, which necessarily will absorb a considerable force.

Mines Off Coast of Formosa.

Washington, Dec. 29.—The U. S. State Department has been officially informed that mines have been placed in Keiung Harbor, northeast coast of Formosa, and that shipping has been notified.

Cossacks Die of Bubonic.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 29.—It is officially announced that a disease, whose characteristics are similar to bubonic plague, has appeared among the Kirghizoo Cossacks in two settlements of the Ural territory, resulting in nineteen deaths between Nov. 24 and Dec. 26. The localities have been declared to be infected with the plague.

Moscow Zemstvo Adjourned.

Moscow, Dec. 29.—The Zemstvo adjourned indefinitely yesterday evening after the adoption of this resolution: "This Zemstvo deeply moved by the Government note in regard to proceedings at Zemstvo meetings, is unable to continue its business with the necessary calm, and therefore adjourns sine die."

The resolution was signed by thirty-four delegates and seven voted against it.

FELL ON THE SIDEWALK

Mr. Ernest Ford Suffered a Painful Injury This Morning.

This morning Mr. Ernest Ford fell on the icy sidewalk, while on his way to the C. G. E. works, and badly hurt his left leg just above the ankle. No bones were broken, but the limb was badly sprained and it will be some time before he is about again. Dr. Dradd attended the injury.

A Regret Remedied.

LICENSE LAWS WELL ENFORCED.

Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown Pays Tribute to Late Provincial Secretary.

Mass Meeting Last Night in St. Paul's Church—Address on Temperance.

Last night in St. Paul's church a mass meeting was held, addressed by Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, the meeting have special preference to the present agitation for local option in Smith Township.

The meeting was not largely attended, the inclement weather affecting the attendance somewhat. Dr. Chown is a fluent speaker and dealt with the question of temperance and moral reform in an interesting address.

Rev. Dr. Torrance presided at the meeting, and after a hymn Rev. J. G. Potter offered prayer, followed by the address of the evening by Rev. Dr. Chown.

Dr. Chown opened his address with a reference to the late Dr. Caven, by whose death, he said, the church had suffered a severe loss. With regard to the temperance question, he said that its weakness was the fact that it was generally regarded as lying outside of the realm of the church. The best remedy for this, and every evil, is the universal establishment of the church on earth. In this question, as in every other moral reform, there were three stages: 1st, that of agitation, which in the temperance question, has passed; second, education, which has to a large extent, passed its necessity; and, third, legislation, of which we are apparently on the verge.

He referred for a short time to the educational stage of the question, and he said that there was apparently something yet to be done in this direction. The liquor traffic is directly opposed to the Bible way of Christianity, and in this case the Bible method should be adopted of dealing with it, that is, by judging it by its fruit, and, if this is done, it will be found that its record is such that its destruction is demanded.

The liquor traffic was at one time clothed with some respectability, but that time had passed, and even the dealers themselves admit that it is wrong. The whole thing is regarded as a public nuisance. Every one present, he believed, would agree with him, that it was a great evil, and our offspring would probably look back upon the men of to-day with disgust when they remember that liquor traffic was allowed to exist.

This traffic may not look so bad when looked at in a Liberal convention or a Conservative conference, but when it is looked at in the light of the Gospel it is seen to be an unmitigated evil.

We should ask the question, which is the worse, the drunkard or the drunkard-maker, or the maker of the drunkard-maker? In his opinion the two latter are equally guilty. He was glad to see that the people are becoming aroused, and in a number of towns and townships efforts are being made to drive out the evil, and in response to the arguments advanced by those advocating the traffic, he hardly knew what to say, because they were so unfounded.

This local option movement he was in favour of, but he would not be in favour of it unless the law could be enforced.

He said that he was forced to tell the truth, and that under the late Provincial Secretary, Hon. Mr. Stratton, did lend his energies and put behind his efforts all the forces of the Government, and during the last eight months the License Laws have been well enforced, and he thought Mr. Stratton deserved credit for his efforts in this particular. Since the re-organization of the Government, he had been assured by chief officer in the Department that the policy inaugurated by Mr. Stratton would be continued by Mr. Graham. With this assurance, and that of Mr. Whitney, that he would go to the limit of the law in enforcing the license law, he was in favour of local option, because he believed that it would be enforced.

The liquor traffic was the foundation of the corruption in both political parties, and if corruption is to be abolished the liquor traffic must be stopped.

He believed that the ballot is the very soul of our liberty, and next to the Bible and the holy sacrament, it is the most sacred.

Speaking of the question of party politics, he said that in his opinion we robbed ourselves of the services of the most efficient men in municipal affairs by the introduction of political partisanship. Righteousness must be the first consideration in elections, and partisanship and prosperity take secondary places. He was of the opinion that a ballot should represent the man who cast it, and he would refuse to vote for a man who did not look in the same direction as he did on some great moral question. Christians should go into politics and take their Christianity with them.

He counselled his hearers to ask themselves before voting in municipal or Provincial elections, whether the man represented the person voting. What was needed was not less politics but more Christian men in politics.

Dr. Chown answered several questions as to the workings of the local option law, put to him by different persons in the audience.

At the conclusion of Dr. Chown's address, a vote of thanks was passed to the speaker, moved by Dr. Torrance and seconded by Mayor Roger.

Rev. E. Bowerman, of Smith, followed with a short address, and said that there was an exceedingly interesting time in Smith, in working for local option. He did not believe that the local option would stop drinking entirely, for there are some who will drink as long as it is to be had, but it will do away with the treating system.

Short addresses were also given by Rev. Dr. Crothers and Rev. J. G. Lewis, after which the meeting was brought to a close.

C.P.R. EXPRESS TRAIN KILLS VALUABLE HORSE

Belonging to Mr. T. Lush—Accident Yesterday Afternoon.

A very valuable horse belonging to Mrs. T. Lush, baker, Dublin street, was killed yesterday afternoon at the C.P.R. crossing on Park street.

The horse was being driven by Mr. Jas. Downing, who went into a house on Park street to deliver some bread. The horse which was usually a quiet and knowing animal started northward without its driver, at a fair rate of speed, though not at a runaway pace by any means. The C.P.R. 5.10 train was leaving the station at the time and when the horse reached the crossing it apparently did not notice the train which struck the animal fairly on the head, killing it instantly. The delivery sleigh was overturned but not injured. The horse was a very valuable one and Mrs. Lush's friends will be sorry to learn of her misfortune. A new horse was secured this morning, however, and her business will not be seriously affected.

PERSONNEL OF TEACHING STAFF.

Peterborough Conservatory of Music.

Herr Heinich Klingenfeldt, Violin; W. E. Farelough, Organ; Herr August Wilhelmy, Voice.

Mr. Rupert H. Gliddon, who has done so much in the interests of music in Peterborough — to raise the standard of taste and develop enthusiasm in musicians — has taken another forward step in the establishment of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, which will open for the receipt and instruction of pupils on January 2nd.

The building employed, the Loch residence, corner of Hunter and Rubidge streets, occupies one of the most commanding sites in town. As it is situated, while being close to the business centre of the town, it is far enough removed to insure the surroundings of quiet, essential in an institution of this kind. This commodious building, ample in size to begin with, has been thoroughly changed and renovated within, to fit it for its intended use. Large and well lighted class rooms have been provided, and everything arranged in the interests of the persons and purposes the building is intended to serve.

It is no surprise that the idea of a local Conservatory of Music appeals strongly to the musical public of Peterborough. We have in town a great deal of natural musical talent, whose development, in part, at least, has been hindered by the expense incurred of going abroad — to Toronto and elsewhere — where the best of musical instruction can be obtained. This hindrance, at least, is now removed. The Peterborough Conservatory of Music, in addition to a local staff representing our best local teaching talent, will have upon it the best teaching talent of Toronto in the several departments. The local teaching staff includes Miss Alice Roger, Miss Helan Davies and Prof. Davies, pianoforte; Miss Foy, musical kindergarten; Mr. Gilbert Markle, violin; and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, German.

The visiting staff comprises at present distinguished artists in their several specialties, who are among the best in the city of Toronto — Herr Heinrich Klingenfeldt, of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, violin; W. E. Fairclough, of the Board of Examiners, of Toronto University, of the College of Music, and organist of All Saints church, Toronto, organ; and Herr August Wilhelmj, son of the great violinist, a consummate vocal artist, vocal department. These teachers will visit the Conservatory one day each week.

With a fine building, beautifully situated and thoroughly well equipped, and with a staff like that presented above, the Peterborough Conservatory of Music is eminently calculated to inspire confidence in the people of the town, in its ability to provide musical education of the highest order.

Details of information regarding classes, terms, etc., can be obtained on application to Mr. Gliddon, director of the Conservatory.

This musical institution enters upon its course with the best wishes of the musical and music-loving people of Peterborough, and if it is conducted with the thoroughness and attention to detail which characterizes Mr. Gliddon in the well known capacity he has so successfully occupied in the past here, it has promise of a successful and useful future. It is to be hoped that the advantages for musical culture if so abundantly offers, will be largely and practically appreciated. Already an encouraging number of pupils has registered.

A manufacturing centre should have at least three representatives of the industrial classes on the Municipal Council. Vote for Johnston, Begley and Crowe.

GOLD CANE FOR "DADDY" TAYLOR

Presentation From his Manvers Friends.

Wednesday morning Mr. William ("Daddy") Taylor, whose retirement from the service of the C.P.R. was announced in the Examiner some days ago, was honoured by his many friends in Manvers, who have been associated with him during the twenty-two years that he has worked for the C.P.R. at Manvers.

During these years Mr. Taylor had shown them many kindnesses and Wednesday morning to show their appreciation for this, his friends presented him with a gold headed ebony cane, accompanied by the following address, which was read by Mr. W. H. Cook, the station master, while the presentation was made by Mr. Herb. Porter:

Manvers Station, Dec. 28, 1904.

Mr. William Taylor,

Manvers, Ont.

Dear Friend,—We, the employees of the C.P.R. Co. and your many friends of this community, cannot allow you to enter into your well-earned retirement without some expression of our esteem for you and your work.

While the company has recognized your faithful services, we have felt your abounding good nature and willingness to meet the public needs, calls for some expression on our part and we therefore beg you to accept the accompanying gift as a tangible token of our appreciation of your many happy qualities and the unfailing kindness you have shown to all cast in your way. When we remember that such characteristics have been expressed by you for over twenty years, in your position as pumpman at Manvers Station, we feel that you have been thoroughly tested and have never been found wanting.

We wish you yet many years of life, and better still, that the same spirit may ever characterize your dealings which have so endeared them in the past.

Signed on behalf of the Company,

W. H. COOK,

Signed on behalf of the Community,

WM. PORTER.

Mr. Taylor in acknowledging the gift, expressed his appreciation of the kindness shown him, and in doing so gave some good advice along the lines of mutual helpfulness, saying that it was much better to help our fellow men upwards than to push them down.

Mr. Taylor's popularity was amply evidenced by the handsome gift of which he was made the recipient. May he long be spared to use it, or rather with such strength as not to need its help.

LATE T. J. BYERS HIGHLY RESPECTED

Was a Resident of Peterborough for Twelve Years.

The funeral of the late Thomas J. Byers, which took place last Tuesday morning, was largely attended by the many friends of the deceased gentleman. He leaves to mourn his loss, a wife and three sons and two daughters, the former being Sidney and Herbert, of Winnipeg and Bert of town, and the latter, Mrs. W. Mitchell and Miss Kate Byers, of town. He also leaves two brothers and three sisters, the former, William, of Millbrook, and John, of town, and the sisters, Mrs. S. Cunningham, and Mrs. Vincent and Miss Caroline Byers.

The late Mr. Byers has been a resident of Peterborough for 12 years, and during that time he has been a contractor. He was a respected member of St. Luke's congregation.

INSTALLATION OF MASONIC OFFICERS

New Official Roll of Corinthian and Peterboro' Lodges A. F. and A. M.

Large Gathering of the Craft—Impressive Ceremonies—Banquet in the Refreshment Room.

Observing the anniversary of St. John the Evangelist, the 27th of December, comes regularly to the Masonic fraternity with special interest, St. John the Evangelist and Apostle of Jesus, whose gospel is so important to all Freemasons, was a Galilean, a son of Zebedee He was a man of great energy. His gospel was a gospel of love, and his book contains the fundamental doctrines of Freemasonry,

"God hath made mankind one mighty brotherhood; Himself their Master, and the World his Lodge."

The Masonic Temple, corner of George and Simcoe streets was a scene of unusual activity Tuesday night, when the brethren began to congregate, in response to the special summons from their respective lodges. Quite a number of visiting members were present,—altogether the impressive ceremonies of installing their newly elected officers for the ensuing year, was witnessed by over one hundred and fifty craftsmen. The customary routine business of both lodges having been disposed of, the insignia of the Installing Master's office was delivered to Rt. W. Bro. W. H. Walkey, who proceeded to instal the officers. He was assisted by Rt. W. Bro. H. Rush, W. Bro. G. I. Rowzel, W. Bro. and Dr. M. A. Morrison, with W. Bro. D. Burritt in the W., Rt. W. Bro. Alex. Gibson in the S., and V. W. Bro. A. Dawson as I. G.

The respective representatives of the positions of honour in the two lodges were then severally invested with their official badges of office, as follows:—

This concluded the business of the evening when the lodges were closed down, after which the members adjourned to their spacious refreshment rooms, where the J. W's had provided suitable refreshments,

TOAST LIST AND SPEECHES.

Rt. W. Bro. W. H. Walkey occupied the chair, and the vice chair was filled by W. Bro. M. A. Morrison.

After ample justice had been done to the excellent spread provided, the toast list was proceeded with.

The chairman gave the first toast, "The King and Craft" which was heartily honoured by all singing the National Anthem.

"The Grand Master and the Grand Lodge of Canada" responded to by Rt. W. Bros. B. Shorts and W. Miller.

The vice-chairman gave the toast of "Canada" which received proper credit at the hands of the brethren.

"The Newly Installed Officers" was very effectively replied to by W. Bro. H. R. H. Kenner, W. M., elect of Corinthian Lodge and W. Bro. F. Morrow, W. M., elect of Peterborough Lodge.

W. Bro. Kenner's response was an elucidation of what constituted the idea; Mason. It was impossible for the most superficial brother not to have been impressed with the beautiful precepts which Bro. Kenner outlined. The higher thoughts suggested by the sublime quotations from the Ancient Charges, were uplifting, and everyone was recommended to purify their minds with them.

W. Bro. R. F. Morrow thanked the brethren for the high honour they had conferred on him and in an eloquent address dealt with:—

1. The need of more instruction of members in the symbolism of the Masonic ritual. Not enough time is given to the explanation of the significance of many parts and features of the charges, lectures and rites of the work.

2. The propriety of purchasing a piano for the use of both lodges during the 4th degree. This would add very much to the interest of the entertainment provided for this important social function.

3. Allusion was made to the desirability of holding the installation ceremony on some other evening as it is difficult to procure foreign talent on the 27th of December, it being so near Christmas. Caterers also find it an inopportune date as it is their busiest season.

Other toasts followed including "The Visiting Brethren", "The Installing Master", and the "Junior Warden's toast."

The evening was very much enhanced by the excellent singing of Bro. Coward a visiting brother of the Westminster Abbey Choir.

Bro. Thos. Hooper was the caterer on this occasion and won the general praise of the brethren for his satisfactory spread.

A Rare Chance.

For the balance of this week Chime Hall will place on sale all of its fine ornaments, vases, etc., at cost price and under. JAPANESE TAKE ANOTHER FORT.

Gradually the Strongholds at Port Arthur Fall.

Fort Rhiiung Captured at Three O'clock This Morning With a Japanese Loss of 1000 Men.

Special to the Examiner.

Headquarters of the Japanese Army, before Port Arthur, via Fusan December 29. — Rhiiung Fort was captured at three o'clock this morning, with a thousand Japanese casualties. Seven dynamite mines exploded at ten o'clock yesterday made breaches in the front wall, through which a large number of Japanese troops charged under cover of a tremendous bombardment, and captured the first line of eight guns. A bitter fight resulted in the capture of the fort. The garrison, numbering five hundred men, were captured.

HON. W. A. CHARLTON

Was Unanimously Nominated by South Norfolk Liberals.

HON. GEO. P. GRAHAM SPEAKS

Mr. Charlton Gives Emphatic Denial to the Slander That He Was Been the Collector of Campaign Funds From American Lumbermen—Several Conservative Nominations—Mr. Powell Retires.

Fort Rowan, Dec. 28.—For the seventh time the Liberals of South Norfolk yesterday expressed their confidence in Hon. Wm. A. Charlton, Minister of Public Works, by unanimously tendering him the nomination for the Legislature. The gathering, which was the most enthusiastic and largest in the history of the riding association, was not a delegated convention, but was a mass meeting of the Liberals at which every part of the riding was represented. Not a discordant voice was heard, the harmony and unanimity which prevailed bearing eloquent testimony to the unity which exists in the ranks of the party. This is especially significant in view of recent reports of lack of harmony. Mr. Charlton took advantage of the opportunity to give an emphatic denial to the slander that he has been the collector of campaign funds from American lumbermen, and suggested that the fact that the Opposition had imported a candidate from Toronto was an indication that the local Conservatives had abandoned hope of success. Hon. Geo. P. Graham made a telling speech in support of the candidature of his colleague, and vigorously defended the Administration.

POLITICS IN A NUTSHELL.

Conservatives of Leeds nominated John R. Dargavel on Tuesday.

The Rev. F. Chisholm is in the field as Prohibitionist candidate in Leeds County.

Conservatives of Leeds have renominated their old member, Walter Beatty.

Mr. Whitney will address the electors of Centre Simcoe at Barrie on Wednesday night.

The Conservative convention of Haldimand County on Tuesday nominated Michael McConnell, who accepted the nomination.

At a meeting held at Montreal Tuesday night, presided over by Hon. E. J. Flynn, it was decided to hold a Conservative provincial convention not later than June.

At a meeting of the executive of the Ottawa Conservative Association Tuesday night, it was decided to call a convention on Jan. 8 to nominate a running mate for Dennis Murphy.

East York Conservatives have nominated Alex. McCowan as their candidate for the Legislature. Six ran, but Mr. McCowan was elected on the first ballot, and the nomination was made unanimous.

There was only one named offered in nomination at the Conservative convention in Waterloo on Tuesday afternoon. That was Dr. Lackner, who has represented North Waterloo in the Provincial House for the past two years.

LACK OF WATER THE CAUSE.

Why Leamington Cut Off Pere Marquette Water Supply.

Leamington, Dec. 28.—This town has not refused the Pere Marquette Railway a supply of water. The town has been unable for nearly a week to get fuel enough to run the pumping station. Hence the lack of water. There was no refusal; simply inability.

Several car loads of coal for the town were delivered to the Pere Marquette at its yards at Walkerville on Dec. 15, but they had not reached here on Dec. 23. To use the words of a prominent citizen: "The freight situation in the Pere Marquette is infernal."

Let Shippers Sue.

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—The Railway Commissioners are now looking into the case of the Pere-Marquette Railway. Mr. Bernier is of the opinion that the proper course to pursue is for the shippers to take proceedings against the railway for the delays caused to their shipments, and for other cases. Mr. Mills is looking into the matter to see if the Commissioners cannot proceed direct against the company.

French Catholic Church.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 29.—The French Catholic population of the City of Winnipeg has increased so rapidly that it has been decided to build the Church of the Sacred Heart, which will hold services entirely in French. Rev. Father X. Portelance, formerly of the Sacred Heart, Ottawa, has been appointed parish priest, and has arrived here to commence the work of organizing the new parish. The new church will cost between one and two hundred thousand dollars. A whole block has been purchased for it and its mission, situated between McDermott, Bannatyne, Lydia and Marguerite streets.

Killed a Canadian.

Crookston, Minn., Dec. 29.—Jos. Guilmette of Woonsocket, R.I., yesterday was found guilty of murder in the first degree for killing Mathias Mongeon, whose home, it is believed, was in Ontario, Canada. The crime was committed on Oct. 17 last. The men, who had just returned from the harvest fields, were thought to have quarreled over the summer's earnings. The victim was shot and his head was crushed with some blunt instrument. The body was then dragged to some underbrush, where it was later found.

QUICKLY CURED.

Pollard, Ark.

"Enclosed please find fifty cents for two boxes of Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills. I have a few of the last lot, but will be out soon. I am finishing up the fourth box, and when I commenced using the pills I had to get up one of bed every night from three to fifteen times to urinate, and the calls were fully as frequent every day. I now do not have to get out of bed more than once during the night and often not at all. I feel confident that they will cure any curable case if used according to directions and for a sufficient length of time. Hoping to receive pills by return mail, and wishing you much success, I remain very truly yours,

G. W. McDONALD."

Partial Change For the Better in Mr. Whitney's Speech At Barrie On Wednesday Night.

Barrie, Dec. 29.—A blinding snowstorm, with a wind that prevented the beautiful affording secure footing on the ice-covered roads, and a hockey match in town, constituted a combination that kept down the attendance at the meeting held in the Grand Opera House here last night in the interest of Mr. A. B. Thompson, Conservative candidate for Centre Simcoe, and at which Mr. J. P. Whitney was the chief speaker. The audience was enthusiastic enough, however, and the Opposition leader was warmly received and generously applauded throughout his address. He was not perhaps quite so free with strong adjectives as in some of his previous addresses in this and other campaigns when criticising the course of the Government, but still devoted a considerable portion of his time to that vigorous denunciation of his opponents without which his political speeches would sound and read strange and unfamiliar to the people of Ontario. While speaking of the Gamey case, he said he was willing to submit to arbitration the question as to whether there was one member of the Cabinet as it existed during the Gamey negotiations, with the exception of Mr. Ross, who was superior in intellectual talent to the man from Manitoulin. There was nothing strikingly new in his address.

Fortune Teller Closed Out.

Pittsburg, Dec. 29.—Through the interference of Manager Harry Davis, of the Avenue Theatre, yesterday afternoon, Anna Eva Fay was forced to surrender to the District Attorney and her show has been closed. She had a hearing before Alderman Toole on a charge of fortune-telling, and she and her managers are to have a hearing to-day on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the public. Alderman Toole reserved his decision in the fortune-telling case. Miss Fay has had crowded houses for five weeks, many of her patrons being society women.

Winnipeg, Dec. 29.—The Manitoba Dental Association met yesterday and drew up a resolution to present to Parliament, asking for legislation to enable dentists with Dominion certificates to practise in Manitoba and thus do away with local examinations. Their solicitor is now preparing the details of the resolution which will be presented to a general meeting of the association in two weeks' time.

APPOINTED GENERAL MANAGER.

Montreal, Dec. 29.—The first circular issued by Mr. Charles M. Hays as President of the Grand Trunk Pacific announces that Mr. Frank W. As Vice-President and General Manager he will have general supervision and direction of all departments. His headquarters will be at Montreal. Mr. E. H. Fitzhugh, Vice-President and General Manager of the Central Vermont branch of the G.T.R., will succeed Mr. Morse. A successor to Mr. Fitzhugh has not yet been announced.

Others to Toronto Via Kingston.

Ottawa, Dec. 29.—At a mayoralty campaign meeting here last evening, Mayor Ellis announced that he had reason to believe that the G. T. R., which is to take over the Canada Atlantic Railway, will construct a line from Ottawa to Kingston.

This would connect with the main line, and would allow of a train being run direct from Ottawa to Toronto, and would do away with the present changing of cars, as required when going to Toronto on the C. P. R.

The Mayor says the city will not be asked to contribute any share of the cost.

Arrested in Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Perry Mason, who declares that he is connected with the Foreign Office at London, England, was arrested here yesterday, charged with attempting to steal a typewriter. Mason, who, the police officials believe, is also known as Rudolph Greer, is well educated and of good address.

Why Needed in Every Home

TO OVERCOME THE MOST COMMON AND ANNOYING OF HUMAN ILLS.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Indigestion, constipation and torpid action of the liver and kidneys are known in every home.

Both on account of the distress and discomfort which accompanies them and as a cause of other ills of a more painful and deadly nature, these derangements require prompt attention.

In every home there is needed more or less frequently a treatment which can be depended on to regulate the organs of digestion and excretion.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have become the most popular family medicine extant, because they exactly meet the requirements.

They are unique in that they act directly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, and thus ensure a prompt regulating and invigorating of these organs.

The result is good digestion and assimilation and the prompt removal of the poisonous waste matter from the body.

One pill a dose at bedtime two or three times a week soon cleanses the system and removes the cause of pain and ill health.

Mr. S. Carr, Point Alexander, Renfrew Co., Ont., writes, "Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have done me wonderful good. Being troubled with kidney disease and heart affection, I tried them with excellent results, and would not think of being without them in the house."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box. 11

CHAPTER XVII.

On the morning about the 1st of December George was alone in the office. He had just finished writing some letters when Jeff Truitt came in and stood near the stove. He was a slender young man, under twenty-five, short and frail looking. His clothing was ragged and his sandy hair unkempt. Buckley looked at him and smiled. "Been getting yourself into no end of rows over home," he remarked. "My mother tells me they sent you a death's head the other night, and your father said somebody shot at you in the field."

"That's all so, George," said Truitt gloomily. "I reckon I've been shootin' off my mouth a little too much."

"I really thought you had more sense than to report that desperate gang over there for moonshining," said George in a kindly tone.

"Wouldn't 'a' done it of I'd been sober," replied Truitt. "They made me mad when I was full, an' I done 'em all the harm I could."

"Well, what are you going to do about it, Jeff?"

"That's what I come to ax you, George. Ma and pa are mighty nigh crazy about it, an' I give 'em my word I'd come an' ax yore advice. By gum, they think they'll go to you when they die! If you was me would you go back over thar today, George? I—I got another warnin' last night; in fact, six or eight of 'em was scattered all about the place. I say warnin', but I reckon they was wuss than that; they was to pa an' ma an' said of they hetched me they wouldn't do a thing to me."

"Well, there's some consolation in that," said George dryly.

"You know I hain't afeard o' any reasonable number of men," said Truitt in his whining voice, "but when a whole regiment of 'em comes to drink a feller's blood I jest git rattled an' want to make tracks. Ef I had my way, though, I'd go back home an' defy 'em, but ma's mighty nigh crazy."

"No; you'd better stay in town today anyway, Jeff," said Buckley after a moment's reflection. "Go up to the Johnston House and get your breakfast—take all your meals there while you are in town—I've got an account there; tell them to charge it to me. Stay in town tonight anyway. I'll see you tomorrow. I'm very busy today. Do you think the gang would dare follow you here?"

"They might, George. They raised a rumpus here about a year ago, you know—whippin' niggers in Niggertown."

Later in the morning Buckley met the town marshal, Joe Batey, on the street. The officer wore a broad brimmed hat, a dark blue suit of clothes with brass buttons and carried a policeman's club strapped to his wrist. George gravely explained the situation to him, but the officer refused to concern himself in the matter.

"Look y' here, George Buckley," he said. "Do you reckon I'm paid measly town wages to do both town and county work? Ef the sheriff cayn't keep down them riots over thar in the mountains, I cayn't. Fer $30 a month I'm expected to do police duty in daytime, watchman at night an' act as coroner on special occasions. Besides, Jeff Truitt's gettin' entirely too numerous. Every time he gets full he wants to scratch some o' them daredevils' eyes out. He's a funny chap. They say when he's drunk he'd fight a swarm o' wildcats, but when he's sober he'd scare at the sight of a baby popgun, an', on top o' that, when he sobers up he's so stubborn he'd die 'fore he would apologize fer what he's done. What you goin' to do with a man like that? He's no ornament to the community."

"Well, I only thought I'd let you know the situation," George smiled as he walked on. "All I want to do is to save the fellow's neck."

George saw no more of Jeff Truitt that day. He had some important calculations to make in connection with the sale of certain large quantities of cotton to mills in the east, and he was closely occupied in his office till past midnight. When he had finished he went to the front door of the warehouse to get a breath of fresh air before retiring. He did not feel sleepy. Such work as he had been doing usually had a contrary effect on him. Suddenly he heard a shout up the street in the direction of the Johnston House, a revolver was fired, and a gruff voice cried out, "Thar he goes, boys!"

This was followed by a clatter of many feet on the brick sidewalk, a storm of furious ejaculations and stifled oaths, and then a dark human billow rushed down the street in Buckley's direction. It was a mob pursuing Jeff Truitt.

Hardly knowing why he did it, George ran into his office and secured his big revolver from the drawer of his desk and turned back quickly to the door. He was just in time, for the mob, numbering fifty or more, was not ten yards away. Panting and almost out of breath, Jeff Truitt came bounding along ahead of them and just out of their grasp. He was making for the warehouse with the instinct that there, and there alone, lay some chance for escape. He gasped out something to George and darted past him into the warehouse.

"Halt!" George thundered, his revolver leveled at the man in the lead. "Halt or I'll blow your brains out!"

The man fell back against those behind him, and the surging mass came to a sudden pause.

"Heigh! What's this?" panted a man in the rear. "What's this?"

"It's me," said Buckley calmly. "That boy has come to me for protection, and he shall have it if I have to shoot six of you in your tracks!"

"Oh, thunder! Come off!" sneered a man in the front. "Git out o' the door, Buckley, or we'll mash you flatter'n a fritter."

"The first man that tries to pass this step dies as sure as God's in heaven!"

There was a swerving back from the weapon in Buckley's steady hand. Silence fell—a threatening silence. The cocking of a revolver somewhere in the crowd sounded clearly.

"That's right, shoot at me, you dirty coward," said Buckley defiantly. "Here I stand in the light, and I can't pick you out in the dark. Shoot, you cowardly sneak!"

"Put that gun down," cried a determined voice in the throng. "You harm George Buckley an' I'll put daylight through you."

There was a sound of a struggle, stifled oaths and the clash of a revolver as it struck the pavement. It was followed by grumbling words, hot disputing and—silence.

"You are a set of cowards," said Buckley, "running like a pack of wolves after a poor boy for what he said and did when he was drunk. Now, clear out, the last one of you! You know who I am—and you know if there is any one of you, or any three, that want to hold me responsible for this step I'll be on hand. Has any one here any row to pick with Jeff Truitt, then let him speak up. I'll represent him. I'm in a fighting mood tonight and will satisfy just as many as will apply."

"An' he'll do it, too, boys," said an admiring voice. "Buckley's got the right stuff in 'im! Come on, let's go home. George seems friendly to the cuss, an' any friend o' his is safe as fur as I'm concerned."

"Same here," joined in another voice. "Buck, yo're all right, but that's a dern slack wad ye're takin' up fer, as shore as yo're knee high to a duck."

"Well, he's my friend, and I'm his mother's friend," said Buckley. "A mob like yours shan't send his corpse home to her if I can help it."

"He'd be about as much use to 'er that a-way as in his natural condition," laughed a man near the front. "But ef she hankers after 'im, an' Buckley wants 'im to live on, I'll withdraw my claim. This is the sort of rabbit hunt I don't much like nohow."

A laugh rose and went round. It was a favorable sign. George lowered his revolver. "Go home, boys," he said wearily. "I'm sorry I spoke as I did just now. You are all my friends; I can see that. Good night."

They stood for an instant as if uncertain what step to take, but Buckley's last words had completely disarmed them. Slowly they disbanded and straggled away. When they were all lost in the darkness George closed the door and locked it. Just then Jeff Truitt emerged from the darkness in the interior of the building and, with hanging head and downcast eyes, drew near.

"Oh, George," he faltered, "I wish they had killed me. I'm a coward. I was afeard of 'em—afeard of 'em!"

"It wasn't that, my boy; don't you believe it," said George consolingly. "You were simply stampeded. The best soldiers are that way when they see overwhelming numbers approaching. You've got grit, but they tell me you have to fill up with whisky to float it."

"But you wasn't afeard of 'em," wailed the boy.

"Yes, I was—at first," said Buckley. "I shook all over, and then I got drunk with rage, just like you do on whisky. It's the same thing—just as wide as it's long. Don't you bother; you'll fight, Jeff. If I'd thought you were a coward I'd never been the friend to you I am. My Lord, don't I remember, away back at the log schoolhouse, how Press Tilton bullied you all day, pinching you, calling you names, and finally, when he began to bump your head against the wall, you turned in and gave him the worst licking he ever had? He had black eyes and puffy jaws for a week. Some men are that way—just don't like trouble and stay away from it till it's shoved on them. How did they happen to come here for you?"

"They went home after me, I reckon," said the boy, "an' when they found out I was here they come on to get liquor an' settle with me. Ef you was me, George, what would you do—go home tonight? You know the folks will be a-worryin'."

"No; you stay here and sleep with me," said George. "I'm not going to risk you anywhere else tonight."

They went back to the bedroom, Buckley carrying the light. As they passed the big fireproof vault in the office Jeff said, "Looks like it would be reaky to leave just one man here with a whole lot o' money in a safe like that, George."

"It has a combination lock," Buckley told him. "It would take an expert burglar several hours to open it, and the noise would wake me. That's why I sleep here. Nearly all the poor people in the mountains and here in town deposit their savings with us. It's a big responsibility, but the safe and vault are the best in the state. They are better than those at the bank uptown, an' that's why the people want to deposit with us. It's a lot of trouble, but Mr. Hillyer likes to accommodate them."

"And thar's always a lots o' money in the safe, I reckon," said Jeff.

"Thousands of dollars, my boy," replied Buckley; "but it's fireproof, and the risk is very little, as I told you. I am in this room every night, and when I go away Kenner sleeps here."

"But thar's another thing you hain't thought of," said Jeff. "Robbers sometimes slip up on a man, git 'im well covered an' then force 'im to open a safe. What would you do in a case like that, George?"

Buckley laughed. "I haven't thought of that, I'll admit," he answered; "but, with the responsibility on me like it is, I believe I'd die fighting rather than voluntarily give in."

"That ud be foolishness," said Jeff. "Whatever money—even a fortune—to a man's life?"

"It's different with me, my boy." George placed the lamp on the little table. "You could give in and many others could and nothing would be said about it, but if I did it they would say it was—my father's weakness cropping out in another generation. That would be the general verdict, Jeff. Folks are that way."

"Do you reckon so, George?"

"Yes, that's the way of the world. Now git in bed, Jeff."

Truitt hesitated and flushed. "Jest le' me lie on a pile o' sacks on the floor," he said. "I don't want to crowd you, George."

"You think I'd be above sleeping with you, my boy." Buckley laid his hand on his shoulder and turned him forcibly to him. "You've heard all that talk out home about my being stuck up, but it is a lie out of whole cloth. Jeff, Jeff"—Buckley's breast rose high and fell—"I'd give all I have to feel as good in the eyes of the world as you are. There's a stain on me that nothing will remove. Yes, I'd freely give up my life to prove that I am not naturally a thief."

Awed to silence by the strange manner of his friend, Jeff Truitt undressed and got into bed. George turned out the light. Jeff heard him undressing, and then all was still for two or three minutes, after which Buckley rose from his knees and got in the bed.

"Been sayin' yore prayers, George?" Jeff asked in wonder.

"Yes, Jeff; I try not to neglect it once a day. It seems to be about the only thing that keeps me straight. Good night, Jeff."

"Good night, George."

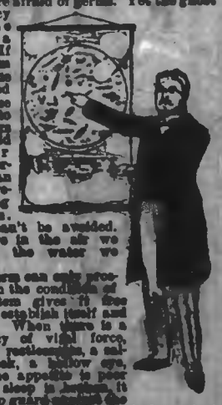
Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to the terror it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon.



Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, debasement, nutrition, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, enhances the system of digesting nourishes, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no ground to plant or thrive. It is the great blood purifier, and is the only medicine of its kind that contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant.

"Your 'Golden Medical Discovery' is a great man's friend," writes Mr. H. Gardner, Esq., Financial Secretary of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Freemasons, 118 Gerrard Street, Denver, Colo. "For years I was troubled with a dreadful cough and my health became nervous and debilitated, and I became emaciated and unable to sleep. So I commenced to use it, and I felt Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery' was just the thing for me. It has given me strength, built me up and increased my vitality until I am now a well man. I have recommended it to my friends, many of them having a complete cure and gladly do I recommend it."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets—only one or two a day will regulate and cleanse and invigorate a torpid liver, stomach, torpid liver, or sluggish bowels.

A HOME SHAMPOO.

How to Clean the Scalp and Have the Hair Soft and Fluffy.

Washing the hair is a task most women dislike, and even the girl who can least afford the dollar a month necessary to a professional shampoo prefers to pay it at a sacrifice rather than bother to wash her own hair. Yet if the work is gone about in the right manner at home it need not be difficult at all.

The first thing is to prepare a shampoo liquid. Take a square inch of some good soap, shave it fine and dissolve it in half a cup of hot water. Then add a teaspoonful of violet ammonia and the raw white of an egg. Beat these thoroughly and strain through a wire sieve. Now stand with the head over a basin, pour a little of the shampoo over the scalp and rub briskly with both hands. Use all the liquid in this way, rubbing it thoroughly on the scalp. After this wash the scalp with several basins of warm water and then wash the long hair in the basin of water. Rinse by holding the head over the bathtub and pouring over it a stream of warm water, keeping this up until the water that drips from the hair is perfectly clean. Then dash with cold water to close the pores and prevent taking cold.

You are now ready to dry the hair. First wrap it in a thick towel and wring thoroughly. Then spread a dry towel across the back, throw the hair back and rub the scalp well and dry. It may take some time, but it is the best possible means of drying, acting as a massage too. Call in the aid of the sun if possible, but never use steam. Do not brush the hair until it is thoroughly dry. Then, as you brush, raise the hair, that the strands may be separated. After this combing will not be difficult, and when the hair is ready to go up it will be soft and fluffy.—Chicago News.

Vest and the Yellowstone.

A string of jack snipe was responsible for the founding of Yellowstone park, says a St. Joseph (Me.) communication to the Galveston News. The snipes were carried into a hotel in St. Joseph one night in 1878 by W. O. Fredericks and attracted the attention of George Graham Vest, late United States senator. The jack snipes answered the purpose of an introduction, and the two men were soon on friendly terms. Fredericks, who had been all over the west, began telling Vest, who was a sportsman, of the wonderful country in Montana and other states. Vest later joined a party in Omaha and inspected the country of which Fredericks had told him. When he became a senator one of the first things he did was to introduce a bill setting aside the Yellowstone district as a national park.

Owing to the special nature of our business, which is largely one of trust and confidence in the ability, judgment and honor of the salesman, it is utterly impossible for us to fill our store with salespeople who know nothing about the watch or jewelery business, or of the quality of the goods they are selling. LATEST NEWS OF SPORT.

QUEEN'S WON CLOSE GAME.

Collegians Defeated the Locals by 9—8 Last Night.

THE FIRST MATCH.

Peterborough's Made Fine Showing Against Intercollegiate Champions —Fair-Sized Crowd Saw the Interesting Contest.

The Peterborough hockey team opened the season with a defeat last evening at the hands of the Queen's University senior team last year's champions of the Intercollegiate League. In the past two years the homesters have opened the season with a victory, but eventually were put out of the running. This year things have commenced differently and different results may be looked for when the team plays its scheduled games. The score last night was very close, being 9—8 in favour of the students. The locals were going at a fast clip at the close and nearly succeeded in tying the score. There was a fairly large crowd of spectators present and as is always the case there was all kinds of enthusiasm, especially towards the close of the match when the excitement was intense.

Considering the fact that it was the first game for both teams which had had but little practice, the quality of hockey was fair. The play at times was lightning fast, though the pace began to tell upon the players as the game progressed. Neither team had its "com." down as fine as will be the case in a month from now, but individually the men showed good form. The ice was perfect and some pretty stick handling and skating were displayed. It was an interesting contest to witness and the crowd enjoyed it thoroughly.

On the form shown last evening Queen's was the better team, everything considered, but they had to work and work hard for every goal. The game especially in the initial period was of the see-saw variety with the visitors always in the lead when the score was not tied. The game was not a rough one and though some of the players had disagreements there were no hard feelings.

The locals showed surprisingly good form and played the speedy Collegians a much closer game than was the general expectation. The loss of several of last year's stars was felt, but their places were taken by strong payers, who did very creditable work and when the team gets working proper'y it will take a pretty strong intermediate O. H. A. team to put them down and out. The forwards will improve in combination play and in shooting as time progresses and the defence will become steadier. Wasson was between the stakes again and did good work especially in consideration of the fact that it was his first appearance on skates this year. He checked nicely and cleared quickly and showed that his eye is still on the puck. Ford played his first game in fast company and created a favourable impression. He checked and lifted well and made several effective dashes down the ice, three of which resulted in scores. Crowley at cover point played a splendid game, checking well and relieving smartly. He had speed to burn and when he started off with the puck he was very hard to stop, and his rushes always proved effective. Capt. Cavanah at rover, played his usual star game and his rushes and deadly shooting were big factors in the scoring. Parnell who figured at centre and left wing played a good game though he was suffering from the effects of an injury early in the first half. His stick handling was clever and his checking accurate. Morgan was always in the thick of the fight and rarely missed a pass. He played a hard and useful game throughout. Graham, who is always in the best of condition, showed fine speed at left wing and frequently broke away for a long run. Especially in the second half he was quite conspicuous by his good work and materially assisted in the scoring.

Queens presented their strongest septette on which there was not a weak spot. The forwards are all brilliant stick-handlers and fast skaters and play well together, while the defence is very strong. Mills stopped innumerable warm ones tickeled for the nets, while MacDonnel at point was a veritable stonewall and performed splendidly. E. Sutherland made a strong coverpoint. Richardson was the pick of the forwards and was the fastest player on the ice. Walsh was also very prominent while Williams and B. Sutherland were always dangerous.

It was 8.40 o'clock when the teams lined up as follows:

Queens.	Peterborough.
	Goal.
Mills.....	...Wasson
	Point.
MacDonnel	...Ford
	Cover point.
E. Sutherland...	.....Crowley
	Rover.
Walsh	...Cavanah
	Centre.
B. Sutherland	...Parnell
	Right wing.
Williams	...Morgan
	Left wing.
Richardson.....	...Graham

Referee—Dr. Lionel King.
Goal Umpires—A. E. Mahood and R. Hay.
Timekeepers—H. S. Wood and F. A. Clarke.

The play was fast at the outset and for the first twelve minutes neither team had any apparent advantage. Finally Williams blocked a lift and scored in 12 minutes.

One minute afterwards Cavanah scored from a neat shot at quater way.

Richardson took the puck from the face-off and scored in one minute. Score 2—1.

Cavanah took the disc down the side and passed to Morgan who returned and Cavanah tied the score in three minutes.

A rush by Walsh and Williams resulted in a score by the former in one minute's time.

Walsh and Sutherland got busy and the former scored in 3 minutes.

Cavanah and Williams were ruled off. Parnell was hurt and Williams went off to even up. Ford rushed the rubber down the side and passed to Crowley who scored by a pretty shot in three minutes. Score 4—3.

Ford again took the puck up the ice and passed to Cavanah who scored, tying the score.

Sutherland put Queens ahead in eight minutes and half time was called with the score 5—4.

In the second half Graham made a pretty run down the wing and Mills had a warm one to stop. Cavanah secured and scored in four minutes.

Graham nearly scored on several occasions. Walsh took the rubber down the centre, passed to B. Sutherland who returned the rubber and Walsh scored in eight minutes.

Walsh blocked Cavanah's lift and scored in three minutes. Score 7—5.

Walsh missed an easy chance to score but Richardson notched a goal in thirty seconds.

Williams was ruled off and Richardson got hurt, but resumed play. Ford went up the ice and passed to Graham, whose shot sagged the net. Score 8—6.

Richardson made a long run and scored in one minute.

The locals finished in strong form. Cavanah made a nice rush but MacDonnel blocked the shot. Graham was on the spot and swiped it through. Score 9—7.

Walsh was ruled off for the rest of game. Morgan had some trouble with Mills and got a five minutes' rest. Cavanah scored by a nice side shot. Score 9—8.

The locals tried hard to tie the score but there was nothing doing.

JUST NOTES.

The locals play in Smith Falls on Monday and meet Port Perry here in a league game on Jan. 6th.

Cavanah's shooting was much in evidence last night. He played a strong game at rover.

Queens forwards checked back faster than did the locals.

Crowley did fine service at cover-point.

Dr. King gave good satisfaction as referee.

The homesters were penalized for offsides more frequently than were the visitors whose passes were generally short ones.

Richardson was as slippery as an eel.

Lindsay defeated Fenelon Falls by 6—4 at the former place on Monday.

On one occasion Richardson dodged through the entire defence and a score seemed certain, but Wasson, skated out to meet him and the shot went wide.

There were a number of Queen's supporters in the rink who made themselves heard.

The Grasshopper Club has come to life again especially for the hockey season and sang "Blue Bell" and other things last night.

The juniors meet Port Hope here in an exhibition game to-morrow night.

The local defence was guilty of passing the puck in front of their own goal at times. This is a dangerous practice.

BELLEVILLE HERE NEW YAARS NIGHT

Bay City Champions to Play Basket-ball With Local Seniors.

The Belleville Hardware Basket-ball team will be here on New Year's night to play the senior Y.M.C.A. team of town. The Belleville team has won the championship of the city league of that place, and is a fast and well balanced quintette. The local team will be a strong one, and one of the best games of the year is assured for the holiday. This will be first visit of a senior team to Peterborough this fall, and there will no doubt be a large crowd present to see the game.

HOCKEY.

The members of the High Life hockey team met Saturday evening for the purpose of electing officers, when the following were chosen:—President, H. Lachaus; 1st Vice-President, J. Knox; 2nd Vice-President, E. Dillon; Treasurer, H. Gunsolus; Secretary, Bob. McEwan. This club would like to arrange a game for Friday the 30th. Captain Harry Morgan has a fast bunch to pick a team from. The faster they come the better they will like them.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

To the Electors of the town of Peterborough,

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have again the honour to request your vote and influence in my favour in the election of Aldermen for the year 1905.

If elected, I will give civic questions the same careful consideration as I do my own business affairs.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

W. J. JOHNSTON

respectfully solicits your vote and influence to secure his election as Alderman for the Town of Peterborough for the coming year.

He wishes to thank the Ratepayers for the cordial support accorded to him in the past.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year. 5d140

CARD TO THE ELECTORS

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having been urged by a number of the ratepayers to accept the nomination for alderman for 1905, I have decided to become a candidate and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

If you have confidence in me to elect me to assist in managing the affairs of the town, I will exercise my best judgment in all matters that may come before the Council. I am in favour of a progressive, wide-awake town policy, but not to the extent of squandering the people's money without seeing good returns for it.

As I do not intend to do any personal canvassing, I take this means of asking your support.

Card to the Electors.

Municipal Council of 1905

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

As a candidate for election to the Municipal Council of 1905, I respectfully solicit your vote and work in my behalf.

I am in favour of municipal ownership of our utilities and a strong policy to encourage the location here of additional manufactures. By push and energy I think this can be accomplished, and if favoured with your preference, I will endeavour to show that my work will merit approval. It will be of some assistance to my friends to know that my name will appear last on the ballot form, according to the alphabetical order, and that they will please govern themselves accordingly.

The Aftermath of Xmas

The Holiday Shopping is all over, and this store is beginning to settle down to normal ways again. Our Christmas business was greater than it has ever been before, and our vast stock was pretty well picked over. Of course this picking leaves in its wake many things that are tumbled and bedraggled, and these have no place in a clean, fresh stock. So we've put them out and put hurry-out prices on them. Intrinsically, just as good as ever, merely lost a part of their good looks, that's all and for this you get the reduction on—

Men's Mufflers, Ladies' Mufflers, Ladies' Silk Waists, Ladies' Silk Skirts, Muslin Pillow Shams, Ladies' and Gents' Silk Handkerchiefs, Fancy Raffia Baskets, Bevel Plate Hand Mirrors, Fancy Handkerchiefs Boxes, Ladies' and Child's Coats, etc.

WESTERN MAN'S ROMANTIC SUIT

Ended in a Quick Wedding Yesterday Afternoon.

An Interesting Story of a Young Man's Ardour Overcame Objections.

Peterborough was the scene of an interesting episode yesterday, but it is doubtful if many of the residents knew of the fact that a romantic little affair was reaching a climax in their very midst.

A young man, a former resident of a small village not far from Peterborough, went to the west some years ago, and eventually settled in Nelson, B.C., in which city his home is at present, and he travels out of that city, representing his firm throughout the west.

Since he first went west he has made frequent visits to the east, and even since his parents died, he has still continued his periodical trips, but the home of his youth was no longer the town he visited most frequently, but it was to Lindsay, that town of fair women, to which his footsteps most frequently turned. Subsequently it became known to some of his most intimate friends that in the not distant future he would take unto himself a wife from the ranks of the fair maidens of Lindsay. It was understood, however, that that pleasure was not for him just yet, and though he pressed for a speedy union, the lady was firm, and would not agree.

During the Christmas holidays the young man came from his western home to pay a visit to his friends here, and it happened that his Lindsay friends were spending the winter in Toronto, where he met them. He renewed his request for an early marriage, and, as most western men do, got his own way, and the result was that yesterday morning the young man, accompanied by his friends and his sister, journeyed from Toronto to Peterborough, lunched at one of the hotels, and at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon took a cab and drove to the home of a local divine, where the young man and his lady love were united in the bonds of matrimony, and left last night on the 5.28 G. T. R. train for Toronto again.

BARBERS' UNION ENJOY BANQUET

Retiring Officers Were Honoured Last Night.

A Delightful Event at Long's Parlours—Brilliant Speeches.

Last night the members of the Barbers' Union held a banquet in H. Long's Palm Parlours, and the evening was one very pleasantly spent, and thoroughly enjoyed by those present. The occasion was one the object of which was to do honour to the retiring officers of the Union, and was a most successful event.

There were about 30 members of the Union present, among whom were:—Messrs. A. Mitchell, retiring President; F. Hughes, C. Gainey, J. Lewis, J. Primeau, Joseph Treaham, A. Campbell, G. Nicholls, W. Morgan, A. Brenalt, W. Rundle, E. Mitchell, S. Baker, W. Patterson, A. Donaldson, H. Brenalt, E. LeClaire, J. Lefave, F. Hubbs, D. Richardson, G. Irwin, D. Lake, L. McBrien, H. Gainey, retiring Secretary.

At the conclusion of the excellent supper provided by the host, a delightful programme of toasts was proceeded with, the first being the "King," proposed by the chairman, Mr. A. Mitchell, and honoured in the usual hearty fashion.

"The Bosses" was the next toast honoured, proposed by Mr. S. Baker and responded to by Mr. J. Lewis and W. Rundle.

The "Retiring Officers" was then proposed by Mr. H. Gainey, and responded to by Mr. LeClaire and Mr. A. Mitchell. Mr. A. Brenalt was entrusted with the duty of proposing the toast to "The New Officers," which was responded to by Mr. E. Hobbs and Mr. J. LaFave.

Interspersing the clever speeches were songs rendered by Mr. J. LeFave and Mr. L. McBrien, and Mr. W. Morgan delighted the company with a recitation.

In addition to the social features a number of business matters were discussed.

"NOT-OUTS" DANCE WAS VERY ENJOYABLE

About 40 Couple Danced in Foresters Hall Last Evening.

The "Not Outs'" dances in the Foresters' hall last night was one of the most pleasureable social events of the season. About forty couples were present, and most heartily was the occasion enjoyed. The list of dances was a lengthy one, and a spirit of sociability was manifested in such a manner as to provide a delightful evening for all present. The Maiorano orchestra of Toronto, supplied music in their usual very satisfactory manner, adding greatly to the success of the evening. Refreshments were provided by the young ladies. The patronesses were Mesdames R. S. Davidson, J. A. Aylmer and R. B. Hall.

A great deal of the credit for the splendid success of the affair is due Misses Helen Davidson and Edyth Aylmer of the Managing Committee.

A TRIP THROUGH OLD IRELAND

Lecture on Ireland by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick.

Illustrated by Stereopticon Views by the Only Roy.

At St. Martin's Hall, Ennismore last night there was, considering the wretched condition of the country roads, a very large audience assembled to listen to a lecture on Ireland by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, parish priest. The lecture was beautifully illustrated by stereopticon views by Mr. E. M. Roy. These beautiful views were in colours and added greatly to the equally beautiful descriptive lecture of the reverend father. Mr. Roy also exhibited for the first time his series of coloured views of the Russo-Japanese war. They are exceedingly realistic and the best of any set of views he has thrown upon a screen.

In addition to the lecture and pictures there was an excellent programme of musical selections, recitations, etc., supplied by local talent.

A most enjoyable as well as instructive and interesting evening was spent in the beautiful new hall, of which the T.A.S. and Ennismore generally has so much reason to be proud. Peterborough town may plume itself upon its progress, but it would have much more reason to be proud if it had a hall for such purposes as the entertainment of last night, half as good as St. Martin's Hall, Ennismore.

CHILDREN HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Played With Fire—Yesterday's Small Blaze—Inadequate Fire Protection.

The fire brigade was given a run to Mr. S. Bates' residence, corner of Downie and Smith streets yesterday afternoon, but their services were not required. It seems that Mrs. Bates had left her two children in the house while she went to get a pail of water and upon her return discovered that the children had taken a stick of wood from the stove and a sofa had become ignited. By the assistance of the neighbours, the blaze was soon extinguished and the damage was slight.

The two children had a very narrow escape and had Mrs. Bates not entered the house when she did, both would have been severely burned.

The residents of that portion of the town in which the incipient blaze occurred last evening, complain bitterly of the inadequate fire protection they have in the way of hydrants. The nearest hydrant is on the summit of the Smithtown hill, near Mr. Hammond's residence, and being situated so high the pressure is necessarily weak. When to this is added a long line of hose, which would have to be done if a fire occurred to the west, the resulting stream would be practically useless to extinguish any serious blaze.

LITTLE FOLKS HAPPY TIME

Primary and Kindergarten Classes of St. Andrew's School Celebrate.

Tea, Concert, and Christmas Tree Last Evening—Presentation of Diplomas.

The Primary and Kindergarten Classes of St. Andrew's Sunday School had a most enjoyable time last evening. About 90 of the scholars were present and partook of the tea which was served at five o'clock, after which an hour was spent in games of different descriptions, providing much amusement for all the little folk.

At seven o'clock a programme was presented by the scholars whose parents and relatives were present in large numbers. The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss Geraldine Byers and was followed by recitations by Masters Gordon Beary, Gordon Stevens and Miss Adeline Grant. A cantata by 15 members of the Primary class was very successfully given. The cantata was entitled "Joy of the Christmas Morn", the scene presented being one of the Shepherds in the field and the manger where the Saviour was born. A chorus by the graduating members of the Primary Class concluded the programme.

The Christmas tree was a source of much interest and the gifts were distributed by Santa Claus Peter Kerr, who performed his part in admirable fashion.

The presentation of Diplomas to those graduating from the Primary and Kindergarten classes was made by Rev. J. G. Potter. The Kindergarten class is taught by Miss Mabel Tully and the Primary by Mrs. Geo. Laing.

SPURIOUS CHARGES.

One preminent characteristic of Mr. Whitney, the Conservative leader, his followers, and the press behind him, is the reckless manner in which charges against the Liberal Government, and its supporters, are made. In many cases these charges of wrong doing against Liberals, are made without a semblance of justification or reason. Based on pure assumption, they are uttered as facts. For instance, Mr. W. A. Charlton, before he became Minister of Public Works in the Ross Government, was spoken of by the Opposition in the highest terms. Afterwards no words were too vile to describe him. Mr. Whitney, with the recklessness of assumption habitual to him, said that Mr. Charlton was the most successful collector of campaign funds from the American lumbermen, the Government ever had. This charge, with all the insinuation it involves, is utterly without foundation. Mr. Charlton never collected one dollar of campaign funds from Americans, or any other lumbermen. The present campaign is being fought out by the Conservatives on baseless slanders of this kind. We might expect a ward heeler to originate such charges in the roorback season, but the leader of a great party, and newspapers with pretensions to respectability, should be above the making of political capital for their party by mendacious means of this kind.

During the last session of the Legislature, while the "Soo" guarantee bill was under discussion, the Opposition, headed by Mr. Whitney, repeatedly made the charge that the legislation proposed was a corrupt measure in the interest of Messrs. Jas. Commee and C. M. Bowman, two members on the Government benches, who had as contractors, a claim against the Algoma Central Railway, and if the measures passed, would be beneficiaries under it. As a matter of fact, as was shown at the time, the claim of these gentlemen was amply secured apart from the legislation proposed. Still, in face of this proof, the assertion was repeated that the "Soo" Guarantee Bill was a corrupt effort to benefit Government supporters. Further proof that Mr. Whitney's charge was unfounded and gratuitous assumption, is afforded by the fact that though many creditors' claims have been paid under the provision of the guarantee Act, the claims of Messrs. Commee and Bowman, have not, unless within a day or two, yet been paid. It would be a Herculean task to trace all these spurrous charges to their source of invention. Its enough to say generally, that when similar charges against the Government or Government supporters emanate from the sources mentioned, they should not be accepted without better proof than the pure assumption—to speak mildly—upon which they are—ten to one—likely to be based.

THE PROVINCIAL CONTEST.

The manner in which any Government administers the affairs of the country, is one of vital interest to all citizens, touching, as it does, the daily practical life at many points. Therefore, the record of the Liberal party, which is now asking a continuance of power, must appeal to every voter. Here are some of the details of that record, as Hon. J. R. Stratton told it, in his thoroughly comprehensive review of it, at the opening meeting of the campaign in East Peterborough.

The provinces entered Confederation on equal terms, as to financial condition. The province of Quebec has now a net debt of $22,817,902, while Ontario has a net surplus of $2,849,164. Next year the province of Quebec must pay a million and a half dollars interest on its debt, while Ontario will begin the year with over $300,000 interest on its investments.

Ontario is the most advanced agricultural community on the continent, which is largely due to the fact that Hon. John Dryden, himself a practical farmer, is the most capable and successful administrator of an agricultural department on this continent.

Our public institutions have been well and economically managed. In asylums in other provinces, the annual cost per patient is $199.70; in Ontario it is only $125.90, while our institutions compare very favourably with any others in Canada, or elsewhere.

Under the Ross Government the average price per square mile received for timber lands, is $3,245. This unusual price is due to the policy of the Government in opening up heretofore inaccessible areas of good pine lands by means of new railways.

In 1851 there were only 12 miles of railway in New Ontario. When the lines now actually under construction are completed there will be 1,000 miles not counting the Grand Trunk Pacific which will run through this part of the province for 750 miles.

The summit of the Government's railway policy is the Temiskaming road which is being built without the addition of any permanent financial burden. It is being paid for out of the development of the natural resources of the region through which it travels.

Aid extended by the Ross Government has made the establishment of the pulpwood industry practicable. Without an earnest effort in this direction, the $115,800,000 of revenue which it is estimated our pulpwood yield, cannot be realized.

The same progressive policy of the Ross Government saved the Town of Sault Ste. Marie from being depopulated and the country from losing much wealth. The various industries there are now doing business to the extent of nearly ten million dollars annually, which amount, therefore, has been actually created and added to the wealth of the province by this Government's action. Contracts now given to these plants, most, a few months ago, have been sent out of the country.

The Ross Government has granted charters for the production of power at Niagara Falls on terms which yield the province $275,000 per year. If Mr. Whitney had had his way the province never would have had this revenue. Neither would it have an Agricultural Department for Hon. John Dryden to administer, nor the various "Soo" industries, nor the pulpwood industry, nor its advanced railway policy for to all of these the Opposition has been strenuously opposed.

This is only a suggestion of the record, but it is surely enough to show that the provincial administration under the Ross Government has been enterprising, capable, honest management. A vote for R. F. McWilliams in West Peterborough and for William Anderson in East Peterborough is a vote for the continuance of the present satisfactory state of affairs.

DARING ROBBERY IN HASTINGS.

Mr. L. Platt, of Warkworth, Relieved of $105.00

Two Men Rob Him Early in the Evening on Hasting's Street.

Hastings, Dec. 29.—On Saturday last Mr. L. Platt, of Warkworth, came to Hastings to visit his brother, Mr. S. Platt. He spent the day in town and just before six o'clock he had occasion, while in the Bank to pay out some money, and in doing so took from his pocket a large roll of bills. Soon afterwards he left the hotel and started for his brother's, who resides about two blocks south. He noticed that two men left the same place a few seconds afterwards and followed him, but this did not arouse any suspicion of danger in his mind until just one block south of the hotel he was seized by one of the men and firmly held. The other man relieved him of his money, amounting to $105.00.

No arrests have yet been made but from good information it is learned that a couple of arrests were to be made yesterday. (Wednesday.)

It might surprise many to learn that this kind of work is becoming common in Hastings, and that during the past three years several persons have been touched up for amounts ranging anywhere between $20 and $150.00.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BETTER SYSTEM SHOULD PREVAIL.

Another Letter, With Reference to the Post Office.

This Writer Suggests a Railing, and Make the People Pass Single.

Peterborough, December 26, 1904.

Dear Sir,—I have been a resident in Peterborough for over a year during which time I have had to get mail from the Post Office on an average of twice a week. On these occasions I have of necessity been one of a pushing, struggling crowd of humanity, each one eager and anxious to get his or her mail first. An institution with less system and poorer management cannot easily be conceived in a civilized country. Ask the public if aware that the Post Office is their own property and not a business house belonging to a private company. One would imagine, to see the anxious, almost pleading, looks on the faces of the mail gatherers, that they were receiving a boon from boss actors, rather than what is their own by right of possession. Surely the public are not the servants of the postal authorities. I had always imagined this to be vice versa. I have no quarrel with the powers that be, I have every reason to believe that the work of the Post Office is done fairly well, considering the small building, limited facilities, and the large amount of work that is done there. I refer merely to the poor system they have for those who have to get their mail at the wicket. Could not a small rail be put so that between it and the wicket, those desiring mail could pass? This would save a considerable amount of the pushing and crowding that is now so disgusting an eyesore to those taking part and lookers on. Perhaps this is too expensive for what I believe is the largest town in Canada? In that case I will suggest that a notice be put up requesting the public to stand one behind the other and take their turns in a proper manner, instead of having to summon that most necessary and worthy official, the policeman, would it not be wise to have him there for a day or two to enforce this system? Never a word of complaint do I hear within the sacred precincts of the Post Office. "Far away from the maddening crowd", however, when there has been a particularly heavy crush, I sometimes hear of battles fought and victories won, but not without casualties. A broken cigar that has been lying contentedly in an inside pocket; a baby has been crushed until the little one has been forced to ask protection of its mother in baby language, or worst of all, a lady who has had her hat pushed awry by unsmith force.

Only yesterday, I heard the sad story of a man who had stayed for an hour, valiently forcing his way to the front, and at last when victory seemed within his reach, the town clock (a splendid example of system) loudly struck the hour of nine and the wicket closed.

Are the citizens of Peterborough going to submit to this, when it could be so easily remedied? Or are they going to receive what is their own in a proper, decent and Christian like manner? Personally, I am not greatly discomfited by the system now prevailing, being dread shouldered and of patient character, but it is for the benefit of others and for the good of the town that I write. The thought struck me that it would be a good thing for a business man to take cinematograph photos of the crowd that gathers at the wicket every evening. I really think such a scene depicted on a sheet would be the making of any vaudeville entertainment.

I have heard that you have printed two other letters on the same subject, and bearing in mind the old nursery proverb, "The third time pays for all", I have written in the hope that it may do something to put a stop to the detestable system which now prevails.

Believe me, Sir, to be

Yours very respectfully,

ERNEST SANDERS.

FOUND CHARRED REMAINS.

John McIntyre, Canal Man, Loses Life At Port Dalhousie.

St. Catharines, Dec. 30.—John McIntyre, employed on the canal, was burned to death yesterday morning at Port Dalhousie. McIntyre, who was about 30 years of age, lived alone in a little shanty on the lake shore. The neighbors were awakened by the flames about 5.30, and found that the fire had gained too much headway for them to do anything. They supposed McIntyre had got out safely, but when the fire died down sufficiently his charred remains were found among the ruins. McIntyre was a brother of Capt. B. McIntyre of the steamer Danforth.

MR. W. J. FRANCIS' UNIQUE GIFT.

Presented Masonic Lodges With Set of Columns and Gavels.

Made From Oak Taken From Old Lock Bottom A Pleasing Festival.

A pleasing incident in connection with the Masonic installation on Wednesday evening, Dec. 27th, was the presentation to the Masonic Lodge of a unique set of emblematic columns and gavels by Bro. W. J. Francis, C.E., of Peterborough Lodge. It will be interesting to non-Masons as well as Masons to learn that the material from which these important emblems of the craft were made came from the bottom of the lock at the outlet of Little Lake. It seems that the oak planks which were used in the lock at the time of its construction, as far back as 1837, were recently removed when making the repairs in the fall. Their long service under the water had made the planks quite black at the bolt holes, but after being skilfully fashioned by Bro. Francis produced typical emblems of a very attractive nature. The inscription on the silver plate attached to the gavel reads as follows:—"Columns and Gavels made from Oak Sills of Whitlaw's Lock, Peterborough. Used from 1837 to 1904. Presented to Masonic Lodges by Bro. Walter J. Francis, St. John's Day, 1904."

Rt. Wor. Bro. Walkey, the presiding Master, took occasion to thank Bro. Francis in the name of the craft of Peterborough for the very thoughtful and well executed emblems. He was sure the Lodges would value them highly and that the donor could not help to be long remembered thereby.

CLOSING CONCERT AT ENNISMORE

Schools of Township Held Joint Closing at T.A.S. Hall

Presentation to Rev. Father Fitzpatrick —Rev. Father Galvin was Chairman

Special to the Examiner

Ennismore, December 28th. — Last Thursday the five schools of Ennismore held their annual closing in the new T. A. S. hall, where upwards of seven hundred people were present, to listen to the varied talents of the future hope of the township. The large commodious hall was taxed to its utmost to supply even standing room for those present, and the stage proved small enough to accommodate the two hundred children who took part in the opening chorus. Rev. Father Galvin, of St. Peter's Cathedral, presided as chairman and opened the evening's entertainment with an excellent address in which he touched on various important topics, the necessity of a good education, the interest parents should display in the work of their children, the educational advantages of the new hall, the good work of the teachers, etc., all of which was highly appreciated by the large audience. The programme consisted of dialogues, farces, drills, declamations, speeches, tableaux, together with a liberal supply of vocal and instrumental music. The perfect manner in which the children acquitted themselves reflects great credit on the careful training received from the hands of their teachers, and was favourably commented upon by the parents and friends.

The distribution of the prizes was another enjoyable feature of the programme, and as the pupils came forward to receive their well won reward, they were loudly applauded by their less fortunate playmates.

At the close of the entertainment Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, who takes a lively and active interest in the work of the schools, was presented, by the pupils, with a short but very expressive address, accompanied by a beautiful office chair and a berry dish, mounted on a silver pedestral.

This is the first time the different schools were able to hold a joint concert, and judging from the enthusiastic applause accorded the little ones, it would be safe to predict, that they will favour us each year with a similar treat. The teachers for the coming year are Miss Lizzie Scollard, S.S. No. 4; Miss Maggie St Ivan, S. S. No. 1; Miss Lottie Calvin, S. S. No. 7; Mr. Steve McDonald, S. S. No. 2; and Mr. Perdue, S. S. No. 3, the latter being the only new member of the teaching staff.

The contest closed by singing the National Anthem, and with three rousing cheers for the Rev. chairman.

CANADIAN CUSTOMS.

Supplementary Circular Issued Has Been Favorably Received.

London, Dec. 29.—(C. A. P.)—The supplementary circular issued by the Canadian Customs Department, modifying the existing regulations regarding invoices, certificates and declarations has been favorably received by the merchants carrying on Canadian trade. This, however, is only a minor point raised by the Chambers of Commerce. The Canadian Government has adopted the following regulation: The amount of any advance in the market value of goods, between the time of purchase and exportation to Canada shall not be subject to the special duty after Nov. 9, 1904, provided the goods have been exported in the usual course and the actual date of the purchase established to the satisfaction of the collector by the contract or sufficient document produced for his inspection and attested to.

This, along with other concessions referred to, practically closes up the difficulty. A few minor points remain, such as the clause that no consideration be paid anyone acting on behalf of the exporter, which is not mentioned in the invoice. This clause cannot be complied with for the reason that British firms having agents in Canada have to pay them a commission or a salary, which does not appear on invoices rendered their customers. It is thought this point will be satisfactorily arranged.

London, Dec. 29.—(C.A.P.)—Mrs. Close, writing to The Times, refutes Lord Crewe's statement that Canada is averse to receiving state pauper children. DEFY THE FISH LAWS

Ohio State Fish and Game Association Ask Canada's Aid.

BIG COMPANIES CHARGED

Send Out Tugs and Bring in Much Fresh Fish—Season Closed Dec. 15 But They Keep Right Along Doing Business —How It Is Proposed to Remedy the Nuisance.

Cleveland, Dec. 30.—The members of the Ohio State Fish and Game Commission have made a formal request to the Canadian authorities for co-operation in an effort to apprehend the fish companies now said to be operating in defiance of the fish laws. No answer has yet been received, but it is quite probable the co-operation will be arranged and a determined effort be made to catch some of the violators and see that they are punished.

The members of the Commission make charges of flagrant violations of the law against the fish companies, and admit that thus far the companies have been able to evade the watchfulness of the state patrol boat that is kept in service on the lakes. They believe that if the Canadian authorities are made to realize the depredations they say are now being committed, they will be quick to co-operate and thus run down the perpetrators.

The lake is suppose to be closed for fishing after Dec. 15, but there are said to be few, if any, of the fish tugs out of commission. Instead of laying up for the winter, it is claimed there are about 60 kept under steam, fully equipped and manned for service, from Ashtabula to Sandusky. These boats carry on an average about six miles of fish net, so that when out there are about 300 miles of gill nets set, even though the law declares the season is closed.

The Commissioners have been making a close investigation and find, they say, that a lot of fish tugs are bringing in large amounts of fresh caught fish.

The plan is to have the Canadian people put their boat again in commission, to remain active as long as the lake is open, and chase the fish tugs out of Canadian waters. The tugs clear from the Ohio ports for a Canadian port and when they come in loaded with fresh caught fish and are challenged, they reply the catch was made in Canadian waters, and the officers here are powerless. It is not an offence to bring Canadian caught fish into the ports here at any time.

A new law is to be asked, making it an offence to bring into the state fresh caught fish from the lakes during the closed season. With this law it is believed much greater protection can be given the fish.

A YANKEE COMPLAINT.

Canadian Railways Keep Report of Inspection of Mails.

New York, Dec. 30.—At a special meeting of the Trans-Atlantic Passenger Combination and the Trunk Line Association held yesterday, it was decided to send to Washington a protest against the action of certain United States immigration inspectors along the Canadian border, who the transportation men think, make their examination of aliens seeking to travel through the United States so onerous that traffic of this sort is diverted to Canadian roads that might travel on the roads in the States and on ships coming to this port.

Tax Aliens $2 a Head.

New York, Dec. 30.—A head tax of two dollars on aliens entering the United States from Canada for the purpose of creeping to some Atlantic port on their way to Europe, was proposed yesterday at a meeting of the Atlantic steamship conference with the Trunk Line Passenger Association.

Canada Company's Good Showing.

London, Dec. 30.—At the half-yearly meeting of the Canada Co., the chairman stated that during the year ending Nov. 30? 2,404¾ acres had been disposed of, but applications for licenses were fewer than immediately after oil was discovered in Essex County. Speaking of mineral rights as assets not to be ignored, he referred to the discovery of felspar in Loughboro township and iron pyrites in Madoc township. He proposed a dividend of 22 shillings per share, making altogether £2 4s. per share for $1904.

The White Pass and Yukon Railway will pay a dividend of three shillings per share, less tax.

During the present year there were 90 disasters less than last year on the great lakes, the total wrecks being 37 vessels, of 17,817 tons against 31,644 tons last year.

Shooting After Snowballing.

Niagara Falls, Dec. 30.—The police are looking for Louis Price, 16 years old, who shot William Turner, 12 years old, Wednesday. The boys were out hunting together. Price had a small rifle. The lads got to throwing snowballs at one another, and, in the midst of the quarrel, Price fired at the smaller boy. The bullet lodged in the muscles of the boy's back. The wound is not considered serious.

Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier dined with Lieutenant-Governor and Lady Jette at Spencerwood, Wednesday night.

BOBS ON "THE ARMY"

Field Marshal Points Out the Demands of Modern Warfare.

NO COMPULSORY SERVICE

But Every Man Should Be Taught Elementary Military Exercise and How to Shoot Straight—Britain Must Have a Larger Proportion of Mounted Troops If She Would Be Up to Date.

London, Dec. 30.—"The army as it was, and as it is to be," is the text under which Field Marshal Earl Roberts, in The January Nineteenth Century, reads Britons a noteworthy lecture on the duty of all classes if Great Britain would meet the demands of modern warfare. Every man should be trained to be an efficient soldier should the nation ever require his services, is the burden of his article. After frankly pointing out the existing deficiencies, Earl Roberts writes:

"A terrible lesson awaits the nation whose soldiers find themselves opposed by equally brave but better trained opponents on the field of battle. No amount of money, no national sacrifices, will then avail, for modern warfare moves fast and time lost in peace can never be made up during the stress of a campaign. I hold this view very strongly, and would urge my fellow countrymen with all the force at my command to look the plain facts in the face."

Earl Roberts does not advocate compulsory service, "because it is distasteful to the nation and incompatible with the conditions of an army which has a large proportion of units in foreign service," but maintains that Great Britain must have a large reserve force, and "if the citizens of so great and prosperous a nation as ours are to remain exempt from compulsory service in time of peace without the safety of the Empire being endangered the right class of men must be attracted to the regular army by good conditions of pay and pension; and it is the bounden duty of the State to see that every able-bodied man in this country, no matter to what grade he may belong, undergoes some kind of military training in youth, sufficient to enable him to shoot straight and carry out simple orders, if ever his services are required for national defence."

Earl Roberts interestingly reviews the changes of the last fifty years, describes the military system prior to the Crimean war and points out how the introduction of modern guns necessitated the complete abolishment of the idea that men must be mere machines. Officers, he says, are no longer directly able to control their men because the fighting formation has been changed, and therefore the man must have a fair higher standard of individual intelligence, while among the officers intelligence, self-reliance and the power of leading must be on a proportionately higher level.

"The sooner this is realized to the fullest extent," Earl Roberts says, "the better for all ranks when the hour of trial comes."

Earl Roberts says the report of the commission on the war in South Africa made it clear that much is still needed before Great Britain has an army fit in all respects for war with a modern foreign power. Among other things, she must have a larger proportion of mounted troops for rapid reinforcement, and in order to quickly seize points of vantage. He refers to the action of the Government in ordering new quick-firing field guns and of the complete re-equipment of the army, and says these guns would be 12½ pounders for horses and 18½ pounders for field artillery. Simultaneously with Earl Roberts' article, it is officially announced that 160 batteries will be supplied with new guns at a cost of $17,500,000, and that the order will be executed within twenty months.

Earl Roberts concludes his article as follows: "It will be necessary to have a reserve force of officers amounting to some thousands. These can be made available by a system for the military training of the entire youth of the country, which is essential to our success, no matter under what system our army may be organized."

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP PROVES POPULAR

Candidates for Aldermanic Honours Declare Themselves in Favour of This Policy—Public Meeting Held Last Night in the Opera House to Discuss Municipal Affairs—Mayor-elect Best Favours a Policy of Retrenchment—Would pay for Part of Public Works out of Current Revenue and not Issue Debentures---Mr. T. F. Matthews Urges Passing of $20,000 Waterworks Bylaw to Provide Extensions to the System---Electors Show an Interest in the Municipal Affairs---Mayor Roger's Words of Thanks.

Last night an audience, which at the first numbered about two hundred, but which at the close had dwindled to a mere handful, gathered in the opera house for the purpose of listening to a discussion of the leading municipal questions by the candidates for municipal honours.

A number of the present aldermen were at the meeting, as well as other gentlemen who are seeking aldermanic positions, and a number of important questions were dealt with by them.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Water Commissioners, was also present, and explained the necessity for passing the $20,000 waterworks bylaw to provide additional mains, and improvements to the system. The question of fire insurance rates was also dealt with by Mr. Matthews, and he showed how the key rate for Peterborough, 60 cents, was made up. He stated that if the fire-fighting equipment of the town were up to the standard requirements, the rate would be reduced 25 cents per hundred.

Mayor-elect Best addressed the audience, principally upon the amount of public works that have been done in the town, and the debenture debt. He counselled economy in the expenditure saying that while the town was prosperous at the present time, there might come a time of depression, when increases in taxes would be felt severely.

He was in favour of paying for at least a part of the cost of public works out of current revenue, and increasing the taxes for this purpose, instead of issuing debentures.

Those present evidenced an interest in the addresses of the speakers, and all were given a good hearing.

The candidates for aldermanic honours, who were present, gave short addresses, and showed a familiarity with the affairs of the town which should stand them in good stead when they fill places at the council board.

His Worship, Mayor Roger, occupied the chair.

The Speakers.

There were on the platform, Mayor Roger, Mayor-elect Best, Ald. Batten, Adams, Mason, Johnston, and Messrs. Jas. O'Brien, R. H. Leary, J. Clancy, J. Crowe, and T. J. Begley.

His Worship Mayor Roger suggested that a time limit should be placed on the speakers, and his suggestion was acted upon, for none of the addresses were not tediously lengthy.

Ald. Batten Opens.

Ald. Batten was the first speaker, who humorously remarked that at every similar meeting he was asked to speak first, the idea being that the other speakers would get their ideas from him. During the four years that he had been in the council he had acted in the best interests of the town, as far as his judgment went, and he had endeavoured to do his very best for the department of which he was in charge, that of the town property. His first act had been to secure the remission of taxes on the powder magazine. The other town buildings he had placed in good shape, which were an index of the progress and prosperity of the town.

He did not believe in canvassing for votes, and had never done it in the past, and the people had generally voted for him. He asked them if his record had been satisfactory, to re-elect him for the fifth term.

Ald. Batten expressed his belief in municipal ownership of public utilities. The town now owned the waterworks, and he believed the time was not distant when the town will generate and distribute its own power. He believed that Peterborough was bound to increase in population and prosperity, and closed by wishing his hearers the compliments of the season.

A Harmonious Council.

Ald. Johnston was the next speaker, and said it was a great pleasure to him to stand before the audience and ask them to support him for a second term as alderman. He had always had pleasant relations with the present year council, and hoped it would continue. He was not representing any particular section or class of the people, but believed in all working together for the good of the town. The Trades and Labour Council had expressed the belief that the fire limits of the town should be enlarged, and an inspector appointed, from whom permits to erect houses could be procured. An assessment commissioner was also an appointment which in his opinion should be made. He also advocated the appointment of a plumbing inspector, the expense of whom would be well-spent money. He thought the city engineer might be appointed to do this work, with assistants to look after the streets and sidewalks.

Free Postal Delivery.

He mentioned, amid applause, that a free postal delivery should be inaugurated, for he said it was disgraceful the scenes enacted at the post office, and he pledged himself to do all he could to urge it. He was in favour of allowing the town to grow into a city naturally, instead of getting special legislation. The street leading to the Lift Lock should be opened up, and he thought that those who owned the land should be willing to give it for that purpose. During the past year he had been considerable of a learner, and had not been a very heavy speaker, but he had gotten a fair insight into the town's affairs. He believed, in answer to the letter from the teamsters, that they should be given a fair wage.

Careful Financing.

Mr. Crowe thought that very much could not be expected from him, for he had not been in the council yet to be educated. Speaking on the question of paying for sidewalks by the frontage or general tax, he said that he was not sufficiently conversant with the matter to express an opinion. The town was progressive, no doubt, but the Council should be careful as to giving franchises, and he was of the opinion that the Street Railway bargain was not a good one. He was in favour of public ownership of all public utilities, and asked for the support of the electors.

Not a Corporation Candidate.

Mr. T. J. Begley was the next speaker, and contradicted the rumour that he was a candidate of any corporation. He was opposed to corporations holding up the town, and if elected he would be found to be in this position. His candidature was endorsed by the Trades and Labour Council; he had also been assured of the support of many of the business and professional men of the town. Speaking on the question of sidewalks he said that he was between the devil and the deep sea, and did not feel in a position to intelligently deal with the arguments pro and con.

Public Ownership.

He wished it understood that he was in favour of public ownership, and at the close of the present street lighting contract, the town should go into street lighting.

Mr. Begley was in favour of purchasing land in the outlying parts of the town if the burden would not be laid on the people, and offering it to manufacturers to locate there. Referring to the present post office facilities he said it was disgraceful, and if he was elected he would do all he could to bring pressure to bear at Ottawa to have the present conditions improved. Owing to the increased cost of living he felt there should be a corresponding increase in wages. As a workingman he was in favour of dealing justly with all wage earners, and if elected he would give the teamsters' communication the consideration it deserved. He closed by wishing those present the compliments of the season.

A Water Commissioner.

Mr. T. F. Matthews was the next speaker, representing the Water Commissioners and opened his address by congratulating Mayor Roger and the Council on the clean administration of the past year, and also Mayor-elect Best, on his unanimous choice.

He referred to the $20,000 bylaw upon which the people were to vote to provide for new mains on the water works system, and said that the improvements ensured by the expenditure would give a better rating with the fire underwriters. A number of new hydrants had been placed throughout the town during the last year, and these had not cost the town anything. The money, if voted, would be judiciously spent, and the first step would be to issue debentures for $5,000.

Insurance Rate High.

Mr. Matthews referred to the fire rates in force in Peterborough, and explained how the key rate of 60 cents had been arrived at. If the condition of the equipments were brought up to the standard required by the underwriters, the rate would be lowered 25 cents per hundred which would mean that a saving of from $7,000 to $8,000 per year would be made. The defeating of the bylaw to provide for a new fire hall had made it impossible to provide the necessary equipment, but he thought the whole blame for this matter was not with the ratepayers, for the Mayor and Council had not put the matter before the people properly.

Mr. Clancy's Plank.

Mr. Jas. Clancy followed and said that he was not an orator, but a worker. His plank was a general one, which covered everything. He referred to the sidewalk question and said that if an injustice was done by changing from a frontage to a general tax those to whom the injustice was done should be compensated.

No Injustice Done.

Ald. Adams addressed the meeting next, dealing principally with the question of frontage tax versus general rate for macadamitic walks. Many who had been identified with the work from the start had said that it was a wrong system, and never should have been started, because it was opposed to the recognized system of levying taxes.

If the people voted for the change the Council could do nothing on their own initiation, but apply to the Legislature for the passing of the bill allowing the system of taxation to be changed.

The Sidewalk Question.

The speaker went on to show that there would be no injustice done to those who have been paying for four or five years towards the walks by frontage tax. If the change suggested were made the addition in taxes would be 4-10 of a mill on the dollar, to assume the present debenture debt for sidewalks. The whole tax for the portion of the cost of the walks paid for by frontage tax for the whole 36 miles more of the walk yet to build, would not be more than one mill, in addition to that paid at present, if the walks did not cost more than those constructed this year.

The present system is cumbersome and every member of the Council will testify to this. Ald. Adams closed by asking the support of the ratepayers in the approaching contest.

Should the question meet with the approval of the ratepayers on Monday next, and the Legislature refuse to give the council authority that would be satisfactory to the council, to issue debentures to pay for the proposed extensions of the sidewalks he would be in favour of doing the work, and paying for it year by year out of the current year's taxes. This could be done, and no addition be made to the debenture debt — provided the Legislature will give authority to change the existing debenture debt on this account from the present frontage tax, to a general tax. With the increase in the assessment for 1905 over 1904, there would be about $7,000 additional taxes raised for 1905 more than in 1904, by the same rate. If the cost can be reduced to the figures given by Mayor-elect Best, three miles of walk could be built for about $7800. He was of the opinion that it would be better to not increase the debenture debt $100,000 or $110,000 that will be necessary to complete the system of cement walks in the town, if the present system is continued. If the people endorse the proposal it would be the duty of council to give the question due consideration, and he would earnestly urge every voter who is the owner of property, to vote for the bylaw.

Ald. Mason's Policy.

Ald. Mason said in opening his speech that he had served one year in the Council and was therefor in a better position to serve the people well. If re-elected he would do his best to advance the interests of the town and as a large property owner, he was interested in keeping down the taxes as low as possible. He was in favour of inducing manufacturers to locate here to employ labour. As a candidate he would make only one promise that if he were elected he would give the affairs of the town the same attention that he had given his own business.

Mr. Leary Wants the Canal.

Mr. R. H. Leary, who followed, said that he had been asked by the Board of Trade and many other of his friends to become a candidate, and if elected he would do the very best in his power to advance the town's interests. He was in favour of a progressive, live council, and with the completion of the canal and the splendid power facilities the town should increase in prosperity. He did not think much of the honusing business, but other towns gave them, and he thought since this was the case Peterborough must do the same.

Will Serve Town Faithfully.

Mr. James O'Brien, also promised, if elected to do his best to serve the town well, and he would be the servant of the people, who would be the master. Speaking of the Post Office he thought that the town should not let the authorities rest until the improvements promised had been provided.

The Mayor-elect.

Mayor-elect Best was the next speaker, and was given a good reception, and upon rising he thanked the people for the honour they had bestowed upon him. He hoped there would be a good strong council elected to give him support and conduct the business of the town upon business-like principles.

Mr. Best gave a statement of the public work carried on during the last nine years.

Mr. Best first gave a statement of the length of sewers that had been constructed to date, as follows:

SEWERS.

Completed to end of 1903:—

Brick sewer	9,189 feet
15 inch pipe sewer	11,197 feet
12 inch pipe sewer	19,281 feet

The Mayor's Message.

Mayor Roger closed the meeting and thanked those present for the attentive hearing they had given the speakers. He referred briefly to the $12,000 bylaw to be voted on next Monday. This bylaw was a most important one, and was intended to provide for two separate classes of expenditure, that of providing for street extension and for rebuilding and repairing the bridges on Hunter, Simcoe, Charlotte and George streets.

He thanked the electors for their support during the last year and felt sure that in the hands of Mr. Best and the new council the town's interests would be safe.

This closed the speaking and the meeting adjourned.

MRS. STUBBS WAS REMEMBERED.

Members of the Bible Class Presented Her With Beautiful Gift.

The young ladies of Mrs. Stubbs' Bible class of the George street Sunday school, remembered their teacher in a very pleasing way Christmas time, when they met and presented her with a very beautiful gift, a set of elegant silver knives, as a mark of appreciation and esteem for her services in the interest of her class. The gift was accompanied by the following address:

Dear Mrs. Stubbs.—Once more the wheel of time has brought to us the happy Christmas tide, the season of thanksgiving and thank offering; the great Christmas festival that is so intimately associated with warmth, light and joy, that gives to those, who are privileged to enjoy it year by year an overflowing kindliness and earnest desire that on this day, at least, all shall be happy; and we find none more deserving of our remembrance than our dear teacher. We are bound together by ties of love and friendship and, as unity is strength, we should be a great power for good in the service of our Master.

We would ask you to accept this little remembrance, accompanied by our love and esteem and best wishes for a very Merry Christmas and many happy and prosperous years to follow.

Signed on behalf of your S. S. Class,
ETHEL MILLER.

Mrs. Stubbs expressed her gratitude for the kindness shown to her, and spoke of the help and assistance they were to her in her labours of love, and hoped they would continue in helping on the Sunday school work and the study of God's word, and concluded by wishing them the compliments of the season.

TAKE RIHLUNG FORT

Japanese Capture a Fine Vantage Point at Port Arthur.

GEN. KUROKI ALIVE AND WELL

Exploded Seven Dynamite Mines, and Jap Troops Charged Under Cover of a Tremendous Bombardment and Captured the First Line of Guns—A Bitter Fight, and a Loss of 1,000 Men.

Tokio, Dec. 30.—A report from headquarters of the third Japanese army before Port Arthur received here on Wednesday, Dec. 28, at midnight, says:

"On Wednesday, Dec. 28, at ten o'clock in the morning, the left centre column of our army, following some heavy explosions on the frontal parapet of Rihlung Mountain, charged and occupied the parapet under cover of fire from heavy guns and constructed defence works despite the enemy's fire.

"At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when our occupation was practically assured, we charged and occupied the inner lines of heavy gun positions, subsequently dislodging a remnant of the enemy's force stubbornly holding the gorge fort, which we occupied and captured the entire works."

Jap Casualties One Thousand.

Headquarters of the Japanese Army before Port Arthur, via Fusan, Dec. 30.—Rihlung fort was captured at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, with a thousand Japanese casualties. Seven dynamite mines, exploded at ten o'clock Wednesday, made breaches in the front wall through which a large body of Japanese troops charged under cover of a tremendous bombardment and captured the first line of light guns. A bitter fight resulted in the capture of the fort. The garrison, numbering 500 men, escaped.

Rihlung fort, situated on Rihlung Mountain, formed part of the inner circle of the chain of forts defending Port Arthur. Rihlung is situated about two miles from the outskirts of the town of Port Arthur, from which it bears due northeast. The fort just captured is a mile and a half west of the east Kekwan fort, recently captured by the Japanese. The possession of these two forts should make a most important breach in the fortifications of Port Arthur.

From Rihlung Mountain, which is nearly opposite 203-Metre Hill, it would appear that the Japanese will be able to reach anything in the harbor and town which the Japanese heavy guns on 203-Metre Hill are unable to hit, thus making it apparently impossible for the Russian second Pacific squadron to make use of Port Arthur, even should the Japanese content themselves with holding the strong positions they now occupy.

Captured 43 Guns.

Tokio, Dec. 30.—(1.30 a.m.)—The Japanese captured forty-three guns when Rihlung fort was taken.

Russian Cavalry Repulsed.

Tokio, Dec. 30.—Manchurian army headquarters reporting yesterday, says: "On Dec. 27 at 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Russians with heavy field guns bombarded the Shakhe River railroad bridge in the neighborhood of the station and the Russian guns at Taliantun shelled Chihsiangtun and Shulintsu. Russian cavalry attacked Heilintun at sunset on the same day, but were repulsed by Japanese cavalry. At 5.30 o'clock on the same evening the Russian cavalry enveloped the Japanese pickets, who were reinforced and finally repulsed the enemy. The Japanese casualties were three men killed."

Prince Yildaroff Killed.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 30.—General Sakharoff, in recording recent reconnoitering operations, reports that a Cossack officer, Prince Yildaroff, has been killed.

KUROKI ALIVE AND WELL.

Answers a Telegram of Congratulations, Showing He Is O.K.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—A convivial circle at Dortmund sent Gen. Kuroki in September a card of enthusiastic congratulations on his military successes, and has now received the following answer:

"On the battlefield in Manchuria, Nov. 5, 1904.—How I rejoice to be congratulated at so great a distance upon our victories. As you know, we are pupils of German tactitians, hence I have double pleasure in being congratulated by German men. With special regards. Your obedient servant. (Signed) Kuroki."

The above letter from General Kuroki removes all doubt, if any existed, that General Kuroki is alive.

Russian Member Recalled.

Paris, Dec. 30.—The members of the international commission of the North Sea incident were surprised yesterday to hear Admiral Kasanakoff, the Russian member, had been recalled.

Drumelzier Abandoned By Crew.

Soon after 13 of the men had been taken off by the Sandy Hook life-savers, the remaining members of the Drumelzier company, including Capt. Nicholson, were rescued from the steamer by the life-saving crew of Oak Island. This accounts for the 29 members of the Drumelzier's company.

Immorality On Shipboard.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 30.—Immigrants who arrived this week by C. P.R. steamer Lake Manitoba recount stories of shocking immorality on shipboard. An investigation has begun. Many of the immigrants arrived penniless.

He could not let go, and was held there in terrible agony until his son Ralph, who had on rubber boots, put his foot on the handle, and in some way broke the circuit. Medical aid was at once summoned, and at last reports Mr. Davis is resting easily, although the shock was a terrible one.

By the regular use of this preparation for a time I was completely cured of kidney disease."

Chester on board, reports having rescued them in mid-ocean, when the Chester was sinking, after having encountered a four days' storm. Capt Nelson set fire to the schooner before abandoning her, that she might not prove a danger to navigation. The American consul at Havre will send the rescued persons home.

PRINCESS RADZIWILL.

Will Sue the Executors of the Estate of Late Cecil Rhodes to Vindicate Her Character.

London, Dec. 29.—The Daily Chronicle states that Princess Radziwill will bring an action against the executors of the estate of Cecil Rhodes to vindicate her character from accusations in connection with her personal relations with Mr. Rhodes.

Princess Catherine Radziwill was sentenced to two years' imprisonment by the Supreme Court of Cape Colony, April 30, 1902, for forgery in connection with notes purporting to have been endorsed by Mr. Rhodes. She was released from prison in August, 1903. The Princess is the daughter of the Austrain Count Dymski, formerly one of the great landed proprietors of Galicia. She eloped with Prince Radziwill on the eve of the day set for her marriage to a wealthy manufacturer. About four years ago she appeared in London, where she lived in luxurious style. Subsequently she moved to South Africa, where she attempted to float evidences of credit purporting to have been signed by Cecil Rhodes, but which were repudiated by him, several suits tried at Cape Town finally culminating in her conviction. It was alleged by the London papers that Mr. Rhodes' death was due to the worry which she caused him and to the fact that he was obliged to return to South Africa in the hottest weather to prosecute the case against her.

LEGAL ACTION THREATENED.

School Section No. 4, Emily, Has Separate School Question.

Lindsay, Dec. 29.—Downeyville, Victoria, has a separate school question at S. S. No. 4, Emily. There are only four Protestant ratepayers. Yesterday morning at the annual school meeting Father Breberton, who was a public school trustee, announced that under instructions from Bishop O'Connor of Peterboro, he had organized the territory into a separate school section, that the other trustees had agreed to act with him as trustees in the new organization and that the school property had been transferred to them.

About 30 ratepayers were present. Not many of them besides the four Protestants objected vigorously to the priest's course and demanded without avail that the books be handed over to them. Later the objectors met and elected public school trustees under the direction of Inspector J. H. Knight, who was present. Legal action is being instituted against the separate school board to get control of the school property.

Bronchitis Grows Chronic

AND RETURNS YEAR AFTER YEAR OR DEVELOPS INTO ASTHMA OR CONSUMPTION. CURE IS

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Bronchitis is too serious a disease to trifle with.

Children are most likely to contract bronchitis, and, if neglected, it becomes chronic and returns year after year until it wears the patient out or develops into some deadly lung disease.

Chills and fever, nasal or throat catarrh, quick pulse, loss of appetite and feelings of fatigue and langour are among the first symptoms.

The cough is dry and harsh. There are pains in the chest which are aggravated by deep breathing and coughing. Expectoration is of a frothy nature, stringy, tenacious and sometimes streaked with blood.

Pains in the limbs or joints and extreme depression and weakness result from continuation of the diseases.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is, we believe, the most effective treatment for bronchitis that money will buy.

It is the most effective treatment for bronchitis because it is so far-reaching in its effect on the whole system, not only loosening the hard, dry cough, but actually and thoroughly curing the disease so that it does not return.

Mrs. George Budden, Putnamville, Ont., says:—"I feel it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, as I had the asthma very bad; could get nothing to do me any good. A friend of mine persuaded me to try this remedy, as he had it and it proved successful. I tried it and it cured me. I am thankful to-day to say I am a well woman through the use of this remedy. I keep it in the house all the time and would not be without it."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 35 cents a bottle; family size, three times as much, 90 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.—12.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THEY say this old junk shop was turned into a regular fort last night," Kenner jested as he slouched into the office the next morning after breakfast, a bundle of letters in his hands.

George and Hillyer exchanged glances and smiled.

"You'd have thought something was wrong if you'd been here," George answered lightly.

Hanks was at his desk munching a piece of cracker and now and then taking a sip of water from a thick, unclean tumbler. He had no comments to make. If the building had been half demolished during the night he would have inspected the ruin with supreme indifference, for it was not his personal property. Half an hour later a man and a woman came down the street and entered the warehouse. The woman was short and fat, wore a black sunbonnet and a heavy gray shawl. The man carried a worn Confederate flag in his left hand, in his right a battered army bugle.

"Jeff's mammy an' daddy," Kenner said. "My Lord, they got here quick! I reckon somebody must 'a' told 'em the news last night."

"Come on in, old woman," Truitt said to his wife. "Nobody hain't a-goin' to hurt you." He took the chair Kenner was proffering and placed it near the stove. Then he leaned unsteadily on the short staff of the furled flag. The bugle rattled on the brass buttons of his long overcoat as his arm hung down.

"I'm cayne mouth today," he said huskily, "but I hain't blowed a note yit, an' I hain't stuck up the flag. The boys will wait on ol' Bas this mornin'. I wish some o' my tried comrades could be here to listen to what I got to say. George Buckley, I'm goin' to speak to you."

George had flushed all over with embarrassment. His people was to the front, but out of the corner of his eye he had caught a glimpse of a woman's figure in the main doorway. The thought flashed through his brain that it was Mrs. Hillyer or Hortense Snowden, and he wanted to direct Hillyer's attention thither, but with set, expectant features the merchant was staring at the speaker.

"Jeff told us jest how it happened," Truitt went on, his earnest eyes half full of tears, "an' me an' my old woman felt like we wanted to see, to look at, the man that saved our child. That he is, Matilda; that he is! That's the chap that stood up in the teeth o' that ragin' mob an' said ef they got our boy it ud be over his dead body. George Buckley done it. He"—the old man's voice sank so low for a moment that it was scarcely audible—"he done it! I wish God would help me talk, but he won't, an' I cayn't. I had lots to say, but I cayn't talk. I want to show what I feel, but I cayn't. I 'lowed that a—a man that fit fer Jackson an' Lee an' Davis was good enough, but a man blessed by a high place in the world that stoops down an' offers his life fer a pore, weak, scared boy is better'n a soldier. He's more like God than a soldier. He's actuated by love an' pity, while the soldier is fightin' fer spite. I—I jest wish God would give me a chance to show what I feel. Matilda, ef you want to say anything, say it. Yore old man's made a fool of hisself!"

"Oh, don't, don't, Mrs. Truitt!" George protested as the old woman pushed back her bonnet and began to speak, but she went on.

"I cayn't say what I want to, nother," she sobbed, "but I kin pray fer you, George, an' I will. I hope the Master will shower blessings down on yore head. I've knowed 'im, gentlemen, ever since he was a little boy, an' he always was one o' the best children that ever lived. God knows he's had trouble, but it jest seems to 'a' sanctified 'im. Folks says he hain't a happy man, that he has lots to contend with here in town an' that it looks like he cayn't git all he wants, but he will, God bless 'im, of my prayers kin do any good. I'm a-goin' to ask the Lord A'mighty to give 'im peace an' all he wants!" She drew her bonnet over her face and fell to sobbing aloud.

Truitt stood his flag in a corner and led her to the door, and, as all eyes followed him, George looked and saw Lydia Cranston and Kitty Cosby standing a few feet from him. They had heard all. In Lydia's eyes great tears stood, and in her face shone a kindling light upon which her very soul seemed to breathe. Covered with embarrassment, Buckley went to them.

"I'm very sorry," he began, but Lydia put up her gloved hand and stopped him.

"Don't, don't!" she said gently, almost reverently, as she looked straight into his eyes. "Don't!"

He had not been introduced to her companion, and the fact seemed to have escaped her. The three walked to the door.

"I am Miss Cosby, Mr. Buckley," Kitty said sweetly. "Lydia has completely forgotten that we don't know each other."

"I am delighted to meet you," he faltered, red in the face. "This is a rather rough and tumble camp meeting reception to offer you the first time you honor the old warehouse with your presence, Miss Cosby," he managed to get out, "but we are an emotional people and"—

"Hush!" suddenly exclaimed Lydia, facing him with her great, wondering eyes. "Don't speak lightly of that." Then her voice sank into ineffable sweetness. "Show me, Mr. Buckley, where it happened. I mean from which direction did the mob come, and is this the door—where the poor boy—where you stood—this here?"

George grew redder; he essayed a light laugh, but she was persistent. She laid her hands on his arm. "Tell me," she urged, "is this the very spot?"

"That's right, miss," said Truitt, coming up. "The gang come runnin' right down that walk after Jeff. He hain't a plumb coward, but a mob o' fifty bloodthirsty men would rattle any boy that's been made a pet of all his life. They was all right on his heels, an' he seed George Buckley's open door an' made a break fer it. George let 'im in an' then stood right on that sill thar an' dared one of 'em to pass 'im. He had a gun, but they could 'a' ground 'im to sausage meat. One man cocked a revolver, an' George heard it an' yelled out an' dared 'im to shoot 'im while he stood in the light, an' bemeaned 'im fer a coward an' all he could think of. His pure grit, an' the respect they had fer 'im, shamed the gang, an' they left. But thar's a hero, miss. You young ladies study about leaders of great battles that are this an' that, but I'm a old soldier, an' what George Buckley done last night was the bravest thing I ever seed or heard tell of."

"We thought Major Cranston was here," Miss Cosby explained when Truitt had gone. "We have been looking all over town for him."

George accompanied them to the carriage and helped them in. He was still flushed and embarrassed. Lydia was quiet and thoughtful.

"You must come up and see us very soon," she said. "I want you to know Kitty."

Buckley turned back to the office, angry with himself, the Truitts and everything pertaining to the recent happening.

"Oh, what an ass I made of myself," he thought—"what a deplorable, helpless ass!"

He had just seated himself at his desk when Jeff Truitt came in. "George," he said, "Kenner has offered me a job at the compress, and"—

"Well"—George looked up from his work, with a frown—"that's all right, I guess."

Their eyes met, and Truitt's fell to the ground. He turned out of the door, meeting Kenner on the sidewalk.

"I made George mad jest now," he said to Kenner. "I wouldn't 'a' done it fer the world, but"—

"You didn't make me mad, old boy," said George, coming up, with a smile. "I was worried about a calculation I was making. I hardly knew who was speaking to me."

"Well, I'm glad," said Jeff, with a smile of relief. "I wouldn't bother you fer the world."

"I'll bet he was mad," said Kenner to himself as he moved on. "George Buckley's as hard to understand sometimes as a woman. He didn't like the way the Truitts carried on 'fore them young ladies. Lord, he don't know which side his bread's buttered on! Ef I live a hundred years I'll never forget Lydia Cranston's face while old Truitt was a-talkin', an' George is as tickled as a bat—kickin' himself right now."

He went into the office a few minutes later. George was at his desk, a dry pen in his hand, the flush still on his face. "I met Bob Hanks uptown awhile ago," Kenner observed.

George did not seem to hear.

"He's put on a new two horse delivery wagon, painted up with his sign on it, jest like city wagons."

Buckley was still inattentive.

"By the way, the little devil told me he was goin' to let up on that schoolgirl racket o' his. He told me of his own accord, so I reckon my talk did some good t'other night."

"I suppose it did," said Buckley, with a start, and he went to work. Kenner stood watching him for several minutes. The flush remained on Buckley's face all that morning, and he seldom answered when spoken to. Even Hillyer remarked upon his strange conduct.

"He's a quar boy," said the old man. "I don't pretend to understand 'im, but I bank on 'im jest the same."

"I think I understand 'im," replied Kenner. "I kin see through a plank, when thar's a knot hole in it." But that was as far as the cotton buyer would commit himself.

"Show me, Mr. Buckley, where it happened."

CHAPTER XIX.

On their arrival at home that morning the two girls separated in the hall, Lydia going up to her room with a grave look on her face, and Miss Cosby turning into the parlor to take off her wraps. Mrs. Cranston joined her immediately.

"I was in the summer house and saw you coming," she said eagerly. "I thought I'd give Lydia a chance to go upstairs, for I am crazy to hear what you have to say. Well, did you meet the paragon?"

Miss Cosby rubbed her kid glove down from her wrist toward the tips of her slender fingers. "Meet him?—by a large majority, I assure you. We walked right into his den. Your scheme worked, Mrs. Cranston. As soon as we missed the major uptown I told Lydia that you said he might be down at the grain warehouse, and she ordered the carriage there. I have one thing to ask you, Mrs. Cranston"—Miss Cosby was smiling—"what are the rates of board in this town?"

"Rates of board?" exclaimed Mrs. Cranston. "What on earth do you want to know that for?"

"I'm going to pay my board while I'm with you," said the girl, with mock seriousness. "I know you invited me down here to help you out of your mess, and I have washed my hands of the whole business. I'm out of it from now on—out. Do you understand?"

"Oh, Kitty, do be serious—don't be silly."

"I'm out of it, I tell you," persisted the girl, pulling at the other glove. "I won't work for anybody that don't tote fair. Why didn't you tell me this Buckley was a regular Apollo in a business suit? Why, I never felt in my life as I did with him. I may be romantic, cracked, soft or something, but I simply stood and stared at him, unable to say a thing that was sensible. Besides, we were all upset—excited to death, and"—

"Excited!" gasped Mrs. Cranston. "Why, what about?"

"Oh, about that White Cap affair down there last night. You never heard half of it. The major hinted that it was only some drunken mountain rowdies, personal friends of Mr. Buckley's, when it was—oh, only a little thing like a great, tall god of a man standing in a door daring a mob of fifty strong to pass in after the man they were pursuing! The man in the door with the revolver and the blazing eyes was George Buckley, and the little, dried up man he was offering his life for was no relation to him and a man he could not be congenial with."

"Kitty, you surprise me," said Mrs. Cranston.

"You'll be more than surprised before this thing is over with, if I'm any judge of human nature," Kitty laughed. "Why, Mrs. Cranston, you are battling with Niagara falls in a dugout when you are trying to keep two people like Lydia and that young man from admiring each other, especially Lydia or any real woman." She then proceeded to describe minutely all that had taken place in the office. At times her voice would clog and her eyes fill to overflowing. "And the beauty of it was," she ended, "that the hero of it all was mad enough to kick the people who were sobbing out his praises."

"Lydia heard all that!" said Mrs. Cranston.

"Yes, she heard it all. You have always thought she was proud and haughty and cold. Huh! She melted all over and ran out at the eyes. She doesn't know she's in love with him. She doesn't comprehend it any more than a baby comprehends life. He followed us outside to apologize—just think of that—apologize! He tried to laugh it off. I introduced myself. I had to. Lydia was acting as if she were in a dream. She was asking questions about the exact spot where he had stood, as reverently, Mrs. Cranston, as a girl looking for the grave of a soldier lover. Then the father of the rescued boy came out and went all over it again. I've been to plays that moved me, but always, away down in my heart, lay the knowledge that it was only acting, but that this morning was the real thing. They say all the world loves a lover. I was asked to thwart that pair, but when I saw those two together—he with his great, hungry, dreamy eyes that seemed full of eternal suffering with love for her actually burning in their depths, and she with her sweet, wondering face—I—I felt like an egg sucking dog! I wanted to put out my hands and draw their heads together. Love is beautiful always. It was like a glimpse of heaven this morning. I always considered Lydia a strong woman. I admire her more now than ever. All along she has seen what there is in this man and been trying to give him simple justice."

Mrs. Cranston groaned aloud and sat down, covering her face with her hands. "I reckon we'll have to send her off," she said.

"Send her off? Where to? Send her to Mars, and she'll still see his eyes and hear his voice and—and know she has wronged him for something he can't help. Think of that! You knew, after all, he can't help what his father did. Huh! If a man like that adored me as he does Lydia Cranston and wanted me to marry him I'd do it if fifteen powdered and perfumed princes stood with their arms stretched out to me, and—yes, if he had fathers looking out of jail windows on every street corner in proud old Richmond. Oh, I've thrown up my job! I'm not the man for it. The weight of a hair would make me work on the other side. You'd better send me away. My own heart is hopelessly in danger.

BOWEL POISON.

Thousands of Men and Women Poisoned and Don't Know It.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Bowel poison means blood tainted by fecal excretions absorbed from the bowels. Here are the symptoms:

If your skin is disfigured by eruptions, humors, pimples, blotches, sores or eczema; if you tire and burn and your skin is scaly and rough; if you feel tired and worn out, your nerves weak, constipated, cross and depressed; if your head aches heavy and aching, your eyes bleared and specks dance before your vision; if your hands cold feet and your hands get sweaty and clammy—if you have these danger signals they point unerringly to bowel poison, impure blood, and show that your stomach, liver and bowels are not working right.

Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills are what you must have to make your bowels right; they will remove the impurities from your blood by tonicing up the liver and bowels so that they will perform their functions naturally and regularly. They cleanse and invigorate the blood by stimulating the sluggish liver and regulating the bowels by their gentle laxative action. They are a sure and satisfying cure for bowel poison in young or old.

FARRIERS AND T.A.S. VICTORIOUS

In the City League Games, Last Evening.

Verniers Beaten by 4—1 in Warm Contest—T. A. S. won From Earl Greys by 10—4.

Two games were played in the City League last evening before a small crowd of spectators. In the first game which bordered decidedly on "shinny" at times, the Farriers won from the Verniers by 4-1 and in the second game the T.A.S. had an easy victory over the Earl Greys by 10-4. The hockey exhibited was not of the best, but, nevertheless, was interesting for the spectators. The T. A. S. played the neatest hockey of the night.

FARRIERS BEAT VERNIERS.

In the first game, the teams mixed it up in lively fashion, slashing being a prominent feature and several exhibitions of fisticuffs varied things. The play was warm and some of the men appeared to forget themselves at times and performed in a very questionable manner. The Farriers were much larger and heavier than their opponents and played faster hockey throughout though the losers put up a very creditable showing considering their disadvantage in weight. In what combination there was, the Farriers excelled and were also better shots.

For the winners, Thornton did all that was required of him in good shape. Simpson played strong hockey both at point and on the forward line, where he figured on the second half. Blade checked well at cover-point and played a useful game. H. Long made several long rushes and was very effective, but he should remember that he is of much more value to his team when on the ice than when on the fence. Nicholls played a dashing game at left wing and shot splendidly. A. Long at centre and Smith at right wing are good players and did considerable work.

For the Verniers, Hillier made some good stops in goal and Ellis at point saved this cidate frequently. Anglesey played a head game at cover point. Miller at rover was the pick of the forwards and was the neatest dodger on the ice. Time and again he cork-screwed his way through several opponents and throughout he played brilliantly. He certainly is a comer and will bear watching. Delaney at centre had lots of speed for a youngster and should develop into a strong player. Henderson and Mulligan were speedy and played well.

Both teams were guilty of much unnecessary slashing and the players were constantly running to the sides for new sticks.

The line-up was:—

Farriers.		Verniers.
	Goal.
Thornton		Hillier
	Point.
Simpson		Ellis
	Cover point.
Blade		Anglesyc
	Rover.
H. Long		Miller
	Centre.
A. Long		Delaney
	Right wing.
Smith		Henderson
	Left wing.
Nicholls		Mulligan

Referee, W. Crowley.

From the face-off Miller got the puck and dodging the Farriers' defence scored from a pretty side shot and scored in one minute.

H. Long took the puck three-quarters the length of the rink for a score. In the next game Anglesyc and H. Long were ruled off, Nicholls scored for the Farriers by a nice side shot. H. Long and Henderson went to the fence for scrapping. Half time score 3-1.

In the second half Smith and Nicholls each scored for the Farriers. Nicholls and Anglesyc had a mix-up but neither were ruled off. H. Long punched Anglesyc and was ruled off. The game concluded with the score 4-1.

T. A. S. 10—EARL GREYS 4.

The second game was a much cleaner and some good hockey was exhibited, especially by the winners. The Earl Greys worked hard but were up against a team of fast skaters, good stick-handlers and wicked shots. The winners showed an improvement over their form of a week ago and are by no means out of the running.

There were two changes on the line-up of the T. A. S., Foley and LaForge replacing Kennally and Quigley, who were debarred as Trent Va ley players Both the new players showed up well, especially LaForge who hails from Victoria Harbour. He is a fast skater, an expert stick-handler and shoots with deadly effect and is sure to prove a decided acquisition to local hockey circles. The forward line of the T.A.S. played well together and several times scores resulted from neat combination play. Callaghan played an excellent game at rover while Ross and Kelly also showed up prominently. The defence was strong.

Laing in goal made some fine stops for the Earl Greys. Seward at point played well. There was not much to choose between the forwards all of whom worked hard and were fairly fast.

The teams were:—

T. A. S.		Earl Greys.
	Goal.
Derocher		Laing
	Point.
Doris		Seward
	Cover Point.
Foley		Brand
	Rover.
Callaghan		Gilbert
	Centre.
LaForge		Howson
	Right Wing.
Rose		McFadden
	Left Wing.
Kelly		Doughty

Referee, H. Morgan.

The summary of goals scored is as follows:—

Earl Greys, Gilbert.
T. A. S., LaForge.
T. A. S., Kelly.
T. A. S., LaForge.
T. A. S., Callaghan.
Earl Greys, Doughty.
Earl Greys, Gilbert.
T. A. S., Callaghan.

SECOND HALF.

T. A. S., Kelly.
T. A. S., Rose.
Earl Greys, Seward.
T. A. S., Callaghan.
T. A. S., Callaghan.
T. A. S., LaForge.

The standing of the City League teams is now:—

	Won.	Lost.
Colonials	1	0
Karnots	1	0
Farriers	1	0
T. A. S.	1	1
Verniers	0	1
Earl Greys	0	1

Next week the Colonials play the Karnots and the Farriers meet the T. A. S. Both should be good games.

The sharp weather is developing a good deal of curling talent. Last evening at the rink an interesting match a deux took place between the city editors of the Examiner and Review with the result that the Review man won by a score of 12-9 in a ten-end game. The Examiner man accounts for his defeat by the fact that his opponent from his political affiliation is naturally more at home in a slippery game.

A Regret Remedied.

A regret which may easily be overcome, is the regret that some of your friends have been unintentionally overlooked at Christmas. Before New Year's day you may make amends and give useful gifts from the City Clothing Store, and make some one spend a happier holiday. Perhaps our suggestions will help you to get him just what he needs and what will please him. MR. ROSS' MOTTO "I PRESS FORWARD"

Premier Recounts Great Past but Aims for Greater Things---Can see no Signs of Defeat---Masterly Recapitulation of the Legislative and Administrative History of the Government Furnishes Great Contrast to the Opposition's Record of Successive Failures--Opposition Criticism Unreal.

Toronto, Dec. 31.—A record of Opposition blunders and incompetence, contrasted with a Government record of progress, honesty and efficiency, is what Premier Ross presented to the public at the banquet in his honor by the Ross Club last night, in one of his most effective fighting speeches in recent years. If reasons were wanted for the rallying of Liberals to the banner of the Premier in the present campaign, they were surely furnished by his masterly recapitulation of the legislative and administrative history of the Government, which in many of its most important steps was resisted and ridiculed by an Opposition which periodically resorts to new leaders, who have one after another failed, just as each campaign brings a new cry to take the place of those which have failed before to make any impression on the intelligent electorate.

It was a speech in which no quarter was given the enemy. A public man who has been the victim of a steady volume of abuse and misrepresentation was able to stand and quote from the records instance after instance of the failure of the Opposition to grasp the needs of the Ontario public. With such a record of success on the one hand, and such a record of failure on the other, Mr. Ross was able to look forward hopefully to the vote of January 25th, when the electors would decide on the merits of the two parties.

Outlook Is Good.

In opening he spoke of the outlook for the election, referred to the good class of candidates now coming out, and said, "I don't see how we can be defeated." He reviewed the work of the various departments of the Government, and was able to say: "Every matter, large or small, with which we have dealt has been successful, and that in itself shows some judgment on our part." A glance over some of the legislation showed that the Government had capacity in that direction, and, the field having been covered, the Opposition resorted to "vituperation and criticism, unreal, in most cases untruthful, and in almost every case a misrepresentation of the facts." As the raven could only say "nevermore," so the Opposition could only use the parrot cry, "corruption." Mr. Ross reviewed some of the blunders of the Tories in abandoned cries and discarded policies, and referred to them as "abandoned luggage." As to the "forgetting of the past," it was to do as Paul did, "Forgetting things that are behind, I press forward."

In speaking of the "Soo" reorganization, the Premier announced that it was said in some quarters that the obligation of the Province would be relieved in January. The Opposition in general terms had forsaken their past policy, and now they were looking into the Liberal platform to see if they could crawl in on it. In a stirring conclusion Mr. Ross declared he did not claim to be the equal of his predecessors, but he did claim to have the interests of the whole people at heart.

Some of Those Present.

The banquet was held in the assembly room of the Foresters' Temple, and was attended by nearly three hundred of the leading Liberals of Toronto.

Mr. Dan A. Ross, President of the Ross Club, was in the chair. At his right was Premier Ross, and at his left Arch. Campbell, M.P., Hon. J. O. McCarthy of the Quebec Government, and Hon. John Dryden. Others at the head table were: Messrs. E. T. Malone, K.C., ex-Ald. George Curry, Hon. S. C. Biggs, Dr. John Ferguson, L. V. McBrady, Rev. J. A. Macdonald, Ald. W. S. Harrison, Edward M. Fleming, J. F. MacKay, T. O. Robinette, K.C., Dr. J. E. Elliott, Rev. Dr. Milligan, Hugh Blain, Robert Jaffray, J. Herbert Denton, H. M. Mowat, K.C., Walter Beardmore, P. C. Larkin, J. F. Eby, T. C. Irving, Dr. R. H. Adams, Geo. Ritchie, Elias Rogers, Rev. Dr. Cornish, G. Tower Ferguson and others.

During the enjoyment of the table excellent music was rendered by Meaton's Orchestra. The toast of the King was honored with enthusiasm.

Sir Wilfrid's Tribute.

The Secretary, Mr. A. E. Hacker, then read the following letter of regret from Sir Wilfrid Laurier: "In my absence in California an invitation came to me to attend a complimentary dinner to be offered to Hon. Geo. W. Ross. I regret that pressure of business will not permit me to avail myself of this invitation. If circumstances had made it possible at all it would have been a great pleasure to me to attend, to testify to my strong admiration for the eloquent speaker, courageous leader, and the upright man, Mr. Ross. Wilfrid Laurier."

HORSE THIEVES WERE INDIANS.

But the Fences Were French and Made Big Money in Alberta.

MacLeod, Alta., Dec 31.—For many months past the ranchers of Southern Alberta have been losing horses and the guilty parties could neither be located, nor the horses discovered. Sergt. Piper, N.W.M.P., has just succeeded in rounding up a gang of seven Indians and three white men who are now awaiting trial here. Careful investigation shows that Indians have been lifting horses and selling them to three Frenchmen, M. M. Chaput, S. J. Chaput and S. Kuren, who have recently come into the country from the States and settled on Pincher Creek. These men paid the Indians $5 per head for beasts worth $125 and then drove them to the nearest shipping point, selling them in British Columbia. Sergt. Piper corralled a bunch of 50 head about to be disposed of in this way.

INVOLVES $250,000.

Syndicate Purchases 54,000 Acres in Block East of Calgary.

Calgary, N.W.T., Dec. 31.—Negotiations were closed yesterday, by which an American syndicate purchases 54,000 acres from the C.P.R., just east of the city. The land comprises half of a block of 100,000 acres above the irrigation canal, set aside by the company for sale this year, as being too high for irrigation purposes. Up to Dec. 1 about 50,000 acres of this block had been disposed of to individuals, amounting to $250,000. In the meantime negotiations had been opened with the American syndicate of Beissker, Hoople & Salbyer. The transaction with this syndicate involves $250,000.

Three Cent Fares.

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 31.—The Cleveland Electric Railway Company will experiment in three cent fares for a distance of two miles from the centre of the city on the lines of that road. The three cent cars will run only the three-cent fare distance. The experiment is the first of its kind in the country.

Given a Silver Casket.

London, Dec. 31.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Percy Girouard has received a silver casket with a testimonial signed by 1,700 employes of the Central South African railways who worked under him. It expresses regret at his giving up the post.

INSANITY TO BE THE PLEA.

Line That Will Be Adopted By Mrs. Chadwick's Lawyers.

Cleveland, Dec. 31.—Bertillon measurements were taken of Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick yesterday. When Mme. De Vere was arrested in Lucas County 15 years ago she was subjected to the same measurements, and those records are on file. The measurements of Mrs. Chadwick will be compared with the De Vere records. Several developments in the case yesterday seem to indicate insanity as the defence. It was learned that Dr. H. C. Eyman, superintendent of the Massillon State Hospital for the Insane, made an examination of the woman last Tuesday. Dr. Eyman's visit was kept a secret at the time.

Rescued the Crew.

London, Dec. 31.—(C. A. P.)—The steamer Dalmatty has landed at Liverpool with Capt. Peter King and a crew of five, rescued in mid-Atlantic from the water-logged schooner Utility of Moncton, N.B. On Dec 13 a heavy sea struck the Utility, smashing most of her gear. She had previously sprung aleak, filled and become waterlogged. The mainmast was cut away. For two days they had little to eat except a piece of raw beef. The signal which attracted the Dalmatty was a fire in the ship's saucepan of tar, fat, pork and rope yarns.

Canadians At Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—Before the American Political Science and Economic Association yesterday, Hon. George E. Foster, ex-Minister of Finance in the Canadian Government, discussed the Imperial preference as embodied in the Canadian tariff. Prof. Adam Shortt of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., read a paper entitled "Preferential Trade Between Canada and Britain." Prof. A. W. Flux of McGill University, Montreal, devoted himself to the question "Do reciprocal preferential tariffs tend towards free trade?"

Five Pound Notes.

London, Dec. 31.—The city police yesterday morning arrested two important members of an international gang, who for two or three years are alleged to have been conducting extensive forgeries in Bank of England £5 notes, large quantities of which, it is said, have been circulated in America, and on the Continent.

The good sleighing brought a large crowd to town to-day.

King Edward Single and Double Breasted Overcoat.

Grand Aunt of Robt. Fair Celebrates 100th Birthday

Was Formerly a Resident of Cavan—Passed Through Many Hardships

On December 27th, Mrs. Simon Fennell, a grand aunt of Mr. Robt. Fair, of town, celebrated her one hundredth birthday at her home in Montreal, and in this connection the Berlin News-Record, gives some interesting facts with reference to the family.

Mrs. Fennell, who this week, passed the century mark, was formerly a resident of Cavan, and came there with her father, Mr. Thomas McCamus, in 1870 from her home in Shercock, Ireland. She was married while a resident of Cavan, to her late husband, Mr. Simon Fennell, who predeceased her some years ago.

Mrs. Fennell has two sons, Mr. J. Fennell, of Berlin, a wholesale hardware merchant, and Rev. Joseph Fennell of Hamilton, an Anglican clergyman. One daughter, Mrs. George O. Stanton, lives in Montreal, and it is with her that Mrs. Fennell makes her home.

Mr. Fair saw this remarkable old lady in August, when, as now, she was quite healthy, and in excellent spirits. Her mind is slightly impaired, as to recent events, but strangely enough she remembers quite distinctly events which transpired in her youth.

About thirty years ago she discarded wearing spectacles, which she has used for some years, but recently she has had to make use of them again.

She experienced many of the hardships incidental to life in a new country, after removing to Cavan, but evidently her methods in early life was conducive to long life, for she, to all appearance, is good for some years yet.

WAS WEDDED IN CAVANVILLE

Mr. W. Eyres Marries Miss Frances Amelia Coe

A wedding of considerable interest was that which took place yesterday afternoon in Cavanville Methodist church, when Miss Frances Amelia Coe, daughter of the late John Coe, of Cavan, was married to Mr. Wm. Eyres, of Peterborough.

The wedding was performed by Rev. H. V. Mounteer of Cavanville Methodist church, and was attended by only the immediate friends of the contracting parties.

After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Eyres left on the afternoon G.T.R. train for Toronto, and other western cities.

They are at present staying at the King Edward Hotel, in Toronto. On their return they will reside at 168 Antrim street.

Mr. Hartley Dewart, K. C., of Toronto, will speak in Mr. R. F. McWilliams interests in the Ashburnham Hall, on Tuesday, January 3rd. This will be the opening meeting of the Liberal Campaign in town, and a rousing meeting will be held. Mr. Dewart is well known as one of the best speakers in Toronto.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT AND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP.

The progressive spirit of the Ross Government is shown more conspicuously in nothing perhaps than its railway policy, applied and defined. The most recent railway legislation has been in the direction of public ownership and control with a view of protecting popular rights and restricting monopoly. The building of the Temiscamingue Railway is a radical departure. This road runs from North Bay to open up the rich agricultural tracts north of Lake Temiscamingue and a contract has been made to extend this line to connect with the Grand Trunk Pacific, thus assuring to Ontario a full share of the benefit arising from connection with another transcontinental railway.

In regard to public ownership the Ontario Government has been in advance of public opinion which is now apparently setting strongly in the direction of public ownership of public utilities. In this connection it will be interesting to note in what effective and large way the policy of the Government aims to safeguard the public interests.

The construction and management of the Government railway is vested in a board of commissioners appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. The commissioners have power to appoint an engineer and other necessary employees; to decide the location of the line and plans of all necessary works; to fix tariffs and rates to be charged; and to enter into agreement with other railway companies to secure reciprocal running powers and traffic arrangements. To meet the cost of construction and equipment the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time set apart a tier of unoccupied townships adjoining the railway to an extent not exceeding 20,000 acres for each mile of the line, the proceeds of the sale of such land to be applied to the payment of debentures issued by the commission. The act further provides that the railway must be built of material purchased in Canada; that current rates of wages are to be paid to all employees and labourers; that no person shall be employed in contravention of the Alien Labour Act; and that the commission shall have powers conferred by the General Railway Act.

The granting of subsidies has been made the means by new conditions attached, of securing from railway companies a number of valuable concessions. In 1900 the General Railway Act was amended to provide as conditions attached to all unearned subsidies as follows:—

That subsidized railways shall comply with regulations hereafter imposed by order-in-council as to rates charged settlers or prospectors travelling on any such subsidized railway.

The workmen and labourers employed in the construction of subsidized railways shall be paid the current rate of wages.

That subsidized lines are to be built of material made and purchased in Canada, including rolling stock, steel rails, etc.

That no labourer shall be employed who is a citizen of a country having an alien labour law operating against Canadians.

All companies receiving aid under the act of 1901, in addition to previous requirements must agree among others, to the following conditions:

The province reserves the right to expropriate all lines, the amount of subsidy to be deemed part payment of the amount fixed, as the price to be paid by the province, making the subsidy virtually an investment.

Secret special rates, rebates, drawbacks, or concessions to favoured shippers that will affect or prevent free competition, are declared unlawful.

Farm drainage must not be obstructed, and the railway companies aided are to be amenable to the provincial drainage laws.

Workman and labourers on construction work must be paid current wages, without exorbitant charges for board, clothing and the necessities of life.

Companies aided are not to amalgamate with other companies without consent of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

The provisions of the Act to secure payment of wages for labour performed in the construction of public works are to apply to subsidized railways.

Companies are required to erect stations where directed by the Commissioner of Public Works, comply with regulations for fire protection along the line of railway; use rolling stock, rails and other materials of Canadian manufacture; maintain sanitary conditions for labourers in construction camps; and carry road-making material at the actual cost of handling and carriage.

It will be seen from the above outline of the railway policy of the Ontario Government that the policy is thoroughly up to the spirit of the times, and that the principle of public ownership is recognized as it has been recognized by no other state or province on this continent.

Presentation to School Teacher—Visitors in the Village.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Lakehurst, Dec. 27.—Mr. D. A. Brodie, of Washington, D.C., and Mr. J. Stevenson, of St. Louis, left last week after spending a few days visiting friends and relatives here.

The teachers came flocking home for the Christmas holidays. Miss Lizzie Weir and Miss Ethel Clarkson came home Saturday.

Mr. Fred Truesdale arrived here from Manitoba on Saturday. Fred is one of the Harvey boys and all are pleased to see him again.

Last Wednesday forenoon the pupils and a number of young people gathered at the Lakehurst school to bid farewell to the teacher, Miss Josie Howson. After a delightful programme composed of speeches, duets and recitations, the pupils presented their teacher with a beautiful ladies' companion, and address, which showed their appreciation of her untiring efforts in their behalf during the past year. A short time was then spent in general amusement, during which all regaled themselves with taffy, and amid the greatest good feeling the crowd dispersed.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Anderson, of Keene, spent Christmas at the home of Mr. J. Coons.

Mr. Wm. Irwin left on Monday for British Columbia, where he intends spending a month with relatives, and also looking after business interests there.

Quite a number attended the tea-meeting at Buckhorn last week and they report an excellent tea and entertainment.

We are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mr. John Wilson, who was hurt while working in the woods last week. So far little improvement is noticed, but all hope for his speedy recovery.

Rev. Mr. Bowerman and Rev. Mr. Pickup exchanged pulpits on Christmas Sunday. The Presbyterian church was well filled in the morning and in spite of the unfavourable weather quite a large congregation gathered in the Methodist church in the evening.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SPRINGVILLE SUNDAY SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT

Annual Event was Enjoyed on Thursday—A Presentation.

(Special to the Examiner)

Springville, Dec. 28th.—The Presbyterian Sabbath School held their annual entertainment of Thursday when four sleighs were arranged for the comfort and accommodation of the whole school who went for their annual sleigh ride which has been so anxiously looked forward to and owing to the favourable condition of the roads and the mild weather all testified to the fact that it was one of the most enjoyable afternoons of the season and on their return to the hall sat down to an excellent supper provided for them by the ladies of the congregation. After doing ample justice to that they proceeded to the church where a very fine programme was disposed of which consisted of addresses, recitations and singing and then distributing of the prizes awarded to the various classes after which Mr. Smyth's class presented him with a very fine address accompanied by a case containing gold mounted fountain pen with all its equipments. The address was read by Miss Vollet Bothwell and the presentation by Miss Amy Bowles and read the following address:—

Mr. Smyth:

Dear Teacher,—We the members of your Sabbath School Class wish to acknowledge to you our appreciation of your services rendered to us during the past summer's your kind and genial manner always made it a pleasure for us to put forth every effort to meet with you on Sabbath morning for class work and we can assure you that your labour and wise counsel in explaining the truths of the Bible did not fall fruitless in our memories but will be treasured forever to act upon in the future.

We therefore ask you to accept this small present as a token of the respect we have for you as friend and teacher and may God be with and spare you long in our midst is the sincere wish of your class.

Signed on behalf of the class,
AMY BOWLES,
ELLA WHITE,
VIOLET BOTHWELL.

Mr. Smith being asked to reply by the Rev. Mr. Yule, who acted as chairman, acknowledged his inability to find language sufficient to express his gratitude to them as a class for their kindness shown him, as he assured them that he had been fully repaid by their strict attention.

CLYDESDALE.

Several of the young people attended the entertainment at Apsley on Monday.

Nearly all of the boys returned home from the camps for the holidays.

Rev. Father Phelan of Young's Point, was in Clydesdale on Sunday last.

Miss Lottie Mahoney has returned home for her Christmas holidays to Deare.

Mr. John Menogue has returned home from Coe Hill, where he has been working.

Mr. Patrick O'Brien spent the Christmas holidays at home.

Mr. Joseph Long has returned home from town, where he has been spending a few days.

Mr. Robert Shaw and Mr. John Menogue will serve us for another two years in the county council. It shows that our two representatives must have served the people faithfully during the last two years they were in office.

SPLENDID RALLY AT VILLIERS

Mr. William Anderson Held a Good Meeting Thursday Night.

Notwithstanding the absence of Hon. Mr. Stratton, who was billed to speak at Villiers on Thursday night, but was prevented by illness, there was a well-attended meeting, which made up by enthusiasm, for the absence of those who were prevented by the icy roads from being present. Mr. Renwick was appointed chairman of the meeting, and introduced Mr. Anderson, who briefly but clearly dealt with the work of the different departments of the Government, and was followed by Mr. George K. Martin and Mr. F. D. Kerr. The speakers received a very cordial hearing, and were awarded a hearty vote of thanks at the close of the meeting.

BARONESS MACDONALD.

Holds Private Audience With the Pope, Who Is Kindly.

Rome, Dec. 31.—The Pope yesterday received in private audience in his study Baroness Macdonald, widow of the late Canadian Premier. The Pontiff on this occasion spoke in French for perhaps the first time in a private audience. He asked Lady Macdonald to sit next to him, saying her visit was an honor to him.

The Pope said he knew how fairly her late husband treated the Canadian Catholics and presented the Baroness with a medal bearing the Pope's head on one side and his arms on the other side.

Afterwards Baroness Macdonald visited Papal Secretary Merry del Val, in the famous Borgia apartment, which, she said, was the most perfect representation it was possible to imagine of an apartment of the middle ages.

Death Committed.

Berlin, Dec. 31.—William Schott, charged with forging George Shirk's name to a $153 note, and passing it on J. F. Shoemaker, was committed for trial yesterday and Warren Hastings Jenkins was committed for trial on two charges of forgery. Jenkins was accused of forging the mark of George Cruthers of Elma township to a $45 note, and the name of Ira Moore of Brussels to a $35 note, passing both at the Wellesley branch of the Western Bank. Moore was not present, but Cruthers was there and swore he could write and always signed his name, not a cross. He declared the note was a forgery.

LEFT THE NEW TOWN

Russians Compelled to Abandon That Part of Port Arthur.

WELCOME TO NAVAL HEROES

Remarkable Ovation to Admirals Togo and Kamimura in Tokio—Interesting Letter From a Sevastopol Sailor Who Declares Port Arthur Cannot Hold Out After December —British Officer Drowned.

London, Dec. 31.—A despatch from Che Foo to The Daily Telegraph says:

"A messenger from Port Arthur states that the Japanese have mounted eight guns commanding positions north of the Etse forts, but they suffered heavy losses by the Russian fire.

"The Russians have abandoned the new town, but the Japanese have been unable to occupy it because of fear that it had been mined."

HALF OF GARRISON BLOWN UP.

Two Tons of Dynamite Used Against the Rihlung Fort.

Headquarters of the Japanese Army, Before Port Arthur, via Fusan, Dec. 31.—Rihlung fort, captured Thursday, is the largest and strongest of the eastern fort ridge. Tunnels for miles were cut through solid rock, and two tons of dynamite were used to blow up the walls. The spectacle was magnificent, and the work of the assaulters was splendid. Half the garrison was killed by the explosion of the first charge. The remainder of the Russians made a stubborn resistance. Four heavy guns, seven rapid-firing guns, and two maching guns were captured, as well as thirty quick-firing guns, which were stored in the fort.

Captured Fifty Guns.

Tokio, Dec. 31.—The headquarters of the army besieging Port Arthur telegraphs that on the night of Dec. 28, after the occupation of Rihlung fort a small body of Russians still offered resistance in the passage between the siege gun line and the gorge.

At three o'clock in the morning they were dislodged entirely and the occupation of the fort became secured.

According to the statement of three prisoners the defenders of Fort Rihlung numbered about 500, besides some sailors. A majority of the defenders were killed.

The trophies captured with Fort Rihlung include four large calibre guns, seven small calibre guns, thirty-seven millimetre guns, two machine guns, and much property as yet unenumerated.

A TELL-TALE LETTER.

Capture of 203-Metre Hill Means Fall of the Town.

Tokio, Dec. 31.—The Navy Department published last night a letter written by a man on the battleship Sevastopol, which had fallen into the hands of the Japanese. The writer despairs of relief of the fortress and tells of the destruction wrought by Japanese shells. He says the Russians are resigned to their fate and are determined to fight to a finish rather than suffer the shame of surrender, owing to starvation. Following is the text of the letter:

"The fortress cannot resist after December. The progress of the enemy in reducing our principal line of outer defences is not fully known, but it is irresistible.

"We are sadly disappointed over the non-arrival of the second Pacific squadron, and are daily nearing our miserable end.

"Gen. Stoessel's so-called impregnable line of outer defences is now a myth. With 203 Metre Hill lost, the fall of Port Arthur cannot be avoided. Its capture by the Japanese means the fall of the town, however strong the other defences.

"Two-thirds of the defenders of 203 Metre Hill were lost.

"The Sevastopol, which was exposed to the enemy's fire in the daytime left the harbor on the night of Dec. 6 without being towed. She carried only 111, instead of her complement of 660 souls. When she went out she had her nets down, but was struck twice by the enemy's torpedoes and was beached, irreparably damaged.

"Who is responsible for the fate we face? It is he who did not give instructions for the prevention of a Japanese landing on the Liaotung Peninsula."

South of Shakhe.

Siapanta, via Mukden, Dec. 31.—Russian artillery engaged in an action on Dec. 29, against the Japanese south of Shakhe and near the railroad bridge, the firing continuing till 6 o'clock in the evening. The bombardment of the Japanese position was effective. The Japanese replied very slowly with shrapnel and shimose shells and did very little damage.

Kuropatkin All Right.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 31.—The War Office absolutely denies the report in circulation to the effect that General Kuropatkin is ill.

British Officer Go Missing.

San Francisco, Dec. 31.—It is learned that Captain Glass of the British navy was aboard the Japanese battleship Hatsuse when she was sunk recently and was drowned. The presence of the British officer on the ship had not been made public before, but the news now is said to be official.

May Have to Come Back.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 31.—A report that the cruisers Orel and Izumrud of the second Pacific Squadron have been ordered to return is current here, but lacks official confirmation. If the report proves true, Vice-Admiral Rojestensky may be obliged to await reinforcements—the third Pacific squadron.

Croup Absolutely Cured.

"There is no remedy in my opinion that can act more promptly than Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It cured my son of croup absolutely in one night. We gave him a dose when he was black in the

WHITNEY'S TIPPLE

Had a Scotch After Hours in a Kingston Bar.

HOTELKEEPER WAS FINED

Liquor Was Illegally Sold At the Bar to a Number of Prominent Conservatives—"Scotch" Included in Leonard's Bill in the Morning—Adjourned to the Bar of the Hotel After a Meeting.

Kingston, Dec. 31.—A liquor case before Police Magistrate Daly of Napanee yesterday has caused great interest, as it was proved that on the night of December 22nd Mr. J. P. Whitney, ex-M.P.P., received liquor from the bar of the Paisley House within prohibited hours, also that several prominent Conservatives of Belleville were unlawfully drinking in the bar. The liquor served was Scotch whiskey, and it was charged in Mr. Whitney's bill the next morning. The charge was against Manley Conger, proprietor of the Paisley House, and the night on which improper selling took place was December 22nd, when the Conservative leader, E. Gus Porter, M.P., and other prominent Conservatives spoke at a public meeting. After the close of the meeting several speakers and a number of their supporters adjourned to the Paisley bar, regardless of the restrictions of law and order. When the case was called the defendant, who had as counsel Mr. Herrington of Napanee, pleaded guilty, and his counsel asked that the sentence be light, owing to the previous good reputation of the defendant. He was fined $50 and costs.

Mr. Whitney At Brampton.

Brampton, Dec. 31.—The Town Hall, which seats nearly 500, was crowded last night to hear J. P. Whitney, leader of the Opposition. Mr. Whitney was very enthusiastically received and delivered a vigorous speech, covering practically the same ground as he did at Napanee and Barrie. He once more defended Mr. Gamey, and loudly declaimed against political corruption.

THE DRAWBACK SYSTEM.

U.S. to Allow Refund of Duties On Wheat Imported.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The first important step in the extension of the drawback system, along the lines favored by Secretary Shaw, as a substitute for tariff revision, will be to allow the refund of duties on Canadian wheat imported to be mixed with American grain in the production of flour exclusively for export.

Attorney-General Moody has decided that this can be done under the drawback law. His opinion was approved at the Cabinet meeting yesterday, and Mr. Shaw will issue an order providing for the extension.

The concession was asked by the millers of New York and the Northwest, and was opposed by the northwestern farmers.

Inspectors who will keep track of all the Canadian wheat will be assigned to all the mills which import grain under the new arrangement. Their salaries will be paid by the millers.

Russo-British Agreement.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 31.—An agreement has been signed between Sir Charles Hardinge, the British Ambassador, and Foreign Minister Lamsdorff, precisely similar to the American-Russian agreement of last summer, whereby joint stock and other companies domiciled in either country are recognized as having a legal existence in the other country and are permitted either to bring or defend actions in the law courts.

J. B. Jackson Ill.

Ingersoll, Dec. 31.—Word has reached Ingersoll that J. B. Jackson, formerly of Ingersoll, and now Canadian emigration agent in Leeds, England, is dangerously ill. Mr. Jackson has had a number of sick spells lately, and it is feared that he has become the victim of a cancer.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP. RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

LA GRIPPE is epidemic catarrh. It spares no class or nationality. The cultured and the ignorant, the aristocrat and the pauper, the masses and the classes are alike subject to la grippe. None are exempt—all are liable.

Have you the grip? Or, rather, has the grip got you? Grip is well named. The original French term, la grippe, has been shortened by the busy American to read "grip." Without intending to do so a new word has been coined that exactly describes the case. As if some hideous giant with awful GRIP had clutched us in its fatal clasp. Men, women, children, whole towns and cities are caught in the baneful grip of a terrible monster.

The following letters speak for themselves as to the efficacy of Peruna in cases of la grippe or its after effects.

After Effects of La Grippe Eradicated by Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Fred Weinberger, Westerlo, Albany County, N. Y., writes:

"Several years ago I had an attack of la grippe which left my nerves in a prostrated condition. Then I had another attack of la grippe which left me worse. I had tried three good physicians but all in vain. I gave Peruna a trial. In a short time I was feeling better and now I am as well as anyone."—Mrs. Fred Weinberger.

Hon. James R. Guill of Omaha.

Hon. James R. Guill is one of the oldest and most esteemed men of Omaha, Neb. He has done much to make it what it is, serving on public boards a number of times. He endorses Peruna in the following words:

"I am 68 years old, am hale and hearty, and Peruna has helped me attain it. Two years ago I had la grippe—my life was despaired of. Peruna saved me."—J. R. Guill.

A Relative of Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Silas M. Lincoln, who resides at 918 I. Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., has the honor of being third cousin to Abraham Lincoln. He writes:

"I had la grippe five times before using your medicine. Four years ago I began the use of Peruna, since which time I have not been troubled with that disease. I can now do as much work at my desk as I ever could in my life. I have gained more than ten pounds in weight."—S. S. Lincoln.

Pe-ru-na Not Only Cured La Grippe but Benefited the Whole System.

Miss Alice M. Dressler, 1313 N. Bryant Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"Last spring I suffered from la grippe and was partially cured but the bad after effects remained through the summer and somehow I did not get strong as I was before. One of my college friends who was visiting me asked me to try Peruna and I did so and found it all and more than I had expected. It not only cured me of the catarrh but restored me to perfect health, built up the entire system and brought a happy feeling of buoyancy which I had not known for years."—Alice M. Dressler.

An Actress' Testimonial.

Miss Jean Cowgill, Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., is the leading lady with the Aubrey Stock Co. She writes the following:

"During the past winter of 1901, I suffered for several weeks from a severe attack of grippe, which left a serious catarrhal condition of the throat and head.

"Some one suggested Peruna. As a last resort, after wasting much time and money on physicians, I tried the remedy faithfully, and in a few weeks was as well as ever."—Jean Cowgill.

A Southern Judge Cured.

Judge Horatio J. Goss, Hartwell, Ga., writes:

"Some five or six years ago I had a very severe spell of grippe, which left me with systemic catarrh. A friend advised me to try your Peruna which I did, and was immediately benefited and cured. The third bottle completed the cure."—H. J. Goss.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

A wise old owl is on exhibition in Mr. J. O'Brien's tobacco store window on George street. The bird paid a visit to the hen house of Mr. H. Mr. Sanderson made Mr. O'Brien a present of the bird, and the latter will endeavour to train it up in the way it should go.

Two Hundred Guests Present—A Delightful Evening Spent

Last night the members of the Peterborough Club were at home to their friends, in their commodious and comfortable club rooms on Hunter street, and the event was one of the most successful and enjoyable in the history of that organisation.

An orchestra of three pieces provided music for dancing, which was enjoyed until after mid-night, the billiard room being used for that purpose. Three other large rooms were used for setting out and cards, and supper was served in the card room, the caterer being Mr. H. Long, who served the large company with splendid satisfaction, and many commendable remarks were heard on both the quality of the repast and the serving.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the affair, was constituted as follows: Chairman, E. R. Jarvis; secretary, H. Clurton; W. C. R. Heathcott, E. S. Clarry, P. Campbell, R. E. Wood.

DELIVERY RIGS TO BE PHOTOGRAPHED

An Interesting Event Will Take Place on Monday.

On Monday morning an interesting event will take place in Peterborough. The delivery rigs of the different stores in town will form a procession.

It is expected that about 35 or 40 drivers will take part in the parade, which will form on Brock street, between Water and George streets, shortly after 11 o'clock. They will parade down George street and proceed to the market square, where Mr. Roy will photograph them.

This should prove very interesting, for there are a number of exceedingly well appointed delivery rigs in Peterborough, and the drivers take a pardonable pride in their equipment.

A VERY PRETTY HOPE WEDDING

Miss Gertrude Sampson Married to Mr. Henry McColl.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sampson, "Pleasant View," Hope township, on the 28th inst., when their second daughter, Miss Gertrude was united in holy wedlock to Mr. William Henry McColl, of Doure township, Peterborough.

The bride entered the parlour leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march which was beautifully rendered by Miss Charlotte Coyte. The bride looked charming in cream voile with lace trimmings, while her eldest sister, Miss Ada, of New York, acted as bridesmaid and was becomingly attired in pale blue. The groom was assisted by Mr. Wilbert McMillan, of Peterborough. After the ceremony which was performed by Rev. E. B. Lemeeley, of Port Hope, the numerous guests retired to the dining room where a most bountiful dinner was served.

The presents received were both costly and numerous showing the high esteem in which the bride was held by her friends.

The gift of the groom to the bride was a handsome gold watch and chain, and to the bridesmaid a gold brooch set with pearls.

The happy couple left on the 4.30 train for their future home in Peterborough amid the best wishes of their many friends.

LEMON GROWING MIDST CANADIAN SNOWS

The Successful Achievement of Mr Benjamin Cooney.

Mr. Benjamin Cooney, 218 Stewart street, has left at the Examiner office a wonder in a triple sense. It is a wonder that in this latitude, where the thermometer has frequent flirtations with zero, that lemons, grown under glass, of course, can be matured. The name of this lemon is the "American Wonder," and the third wonder is that the lemon in question weighs about a pound, and is about the size of a well developed Alexandra apple. Mr. Cooney can grow almost anything in the way of fruit and flowers, and one would not be surprised to hear of him growing pineapples or bananas.

A GOOD TEA AND PROGRAMME

In Connection with St. Andrew's Sunday School.

Senior Scholars Celebrate—Very Enjoyable Time Last Night.

Very successful in every particular was the tea and entertainment in connection with St. Andrew's Sunday school last evening. The tea was all that could be desired, and the programme was one of much interest to all present. There was a large turn out of the members of the school as well as the parents, and altogether a most happy time was spent.

Tea was served from 6 to 8 o'clock and at 8 o'clock the programme began, Rev. J. G. Potter being in the chair. Each number was an interesting one, and that all were appreciated was evidenced by the hearty applause and numerous encores which were responded to.

The following was the programme:

Chorus, "Emanuel"... ... ...School
Prayer... ... ...Rev. Mr. Potter
Chorus, "Unfurl the Banner"...School
Cantata, "Joy of the Xmas Morn"...
Girls and boys of the Primary and Kindergarten Departments.
Chorus..... ....School
Recitation, "Betty and I,"... Miss Grace Evans
Dialogue ... ...Members of Miss Anderson's class
Dialogue ... ...Members of Miss Currie's class
Solo... ... ...Miss May Potter
Recitation... ... ...Miss Aggie Hyde
Reading... ... ...Miss Eva Bartley
Recitation... ... ...Miss Mamie Menzies
Recitation... ... ...Miss Ada Stewart

Mr. Wilson, the church choir leader, gave imitations of the cornet, the bee, and of a female singer, which evoked much mirth and hearty applause.

At the close of the programme, the pastor, and Mr. William Stevens, superintendent, distributed the prizes. Special awards were made to Ernest Langford for his record, he obtaining 286 marks out of a possible 291. Miss May Laing was highest in the senior department with 276 marks. The other prize winners were: Maggie Reid, Roma Langford, Mamie Menzies, Zetta Harper, Etta Mathieson, Jessie Stevens, Ray Brand, Norman Laing, Helen Henry, Ethel Robson, Mabel Rae, Ethel Rae, Amy Jamieson, Dollie Evans, Annie Stevenson, Martha Stevenson, Robbie Langford, J. Anderson, Olive Kyle, Annie Reid, A. McWilliams, Louise Mather, Willie Gibson, Wilfrid Fortye.

The whole affair was very enjoyable and was one of the most successful in the history of the school.

LOCAL OPTION IN SMITH.

Successful Meeting in Gilmour Memorial Church.

Gilmour Memorial Church,
December 29th, 1904.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

The closing of the Local Option campaign is proving even more interesting than was the beginning. A rousing meeting was held here last evening with great interest and profit to us all. Rev. J. G. Whitelaw, of Omemee, was the chief speaker. Having had considerable experience in temperance work, he spoke with authority and deliberation. He spoke of the reasons why he supported Local Option, which we can only give briefly.

1, Wherever Local Option had been worked he saw a marked improvement in morals and general prosperity.

2. Boys will not learn to drink in dives and dark rooms. They learn over the bar and by the treating system. These would be banished.

3, Because of the scene at Bridgenorth the day the council was petitioned. On one side of the house were the clergymen who had the good of the people at heart and were the leaders in all reforms. On the other side of the house was only one paid agent, who had been imported, to support the traffic. It showed that something was wrong.

4. Because nearly all the people who opposed it "had a finger in the pie."

5, Because every church had pronounced against it.

6. Because a majority of leading citizens have said "it ought not to exist."

7, Because under present system we are partners in the business.

8. Because we are our brother's keeper.

9. Because of drunkards' wives and children. They are saying "Save us from the Curse."

10. Because of the crimes it breeds.

The speaker then referred to the action taken by both political parties to enforce Local Option laws and was certain it would work well here. He urged temperance men to get to work and pass it.

Selwyn.

MAKE EXTENSION OF GEORGE STREET

Ratepayer Points out the Desirability of Doing it now.

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir, — Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to say a word on what to my mind is a very important matter, namely, the extension of George street to the exhibition grounds. I would like to ask if the ratepayers of the town, which we are all so proud of, are going to allow our main street to be dubbed off and twisted around at Lake street. Why not secure the right-away now, when it can be had at so small a figure, instead of having to purchase and tear down buildings in the future at an enormous cost.

Those taking the initiative steps in this matter will, I am sure, have the hearty approval of the ratepayers.

Yours respectfully,
Ratepayer.

Peterborough, Dec. 29.

The matter referred to is one of vital importance. If it had been promptly attended to, George street might be now open to the Exhibition Grounds, and the street car track laid upon it. The longer the extension is delayed, the greater the cost. The sooner it is made the sooner will new buildings be erected, and the town be receiving in taxes enough additional to pay for the cost of extension and more.

PETERBORO' MAN IS SUCCESSFUL.

Mr. E. V. Moore Solves Problem of Condensed Peat Fuel.

Result of his Work in Formation of the Condensed Fuel Co. Organized by Peterborough Local Men.

Yesterday an old industry, under a new process, was launched here, when the organization meeting of the shareholders of the Condensed Peat Fuel Company, Limited, was held. Messrs. D. H. Moore, G. M. Roger, A. L. Davis, Ernest V. Moore, of town, and Mr. Walter A. Sadler, of Toronto, were chosen as directors, and at a subsequent meeting of the same, Mr. D. H. Moore was elected president, Mr. G. M. Roger, vice-President; Mr. A. L. Davis, secretary treasurer, and Mr. Ernest V. Moore, managing director.

The capital stock of the company is $40,000, of which over one quarter is already paid up, and the company owns an entirely new plant near the village of Victoria Road, situated on what is conceded to be one of the best deposits in Ontario. This plant has been fully tested during the past year and has demonstrated that when complete it will readily handle twenty tons per day.

The plant and process are the result of long and careful investigations, which have been carried on by Mr. E. V. Moore, who is a graduate of McGill University, and a Mining Engineer, for a period stretching over the last four years. While attending college Mr. Moore became interested in the question of peat fuel, and that time, and since, has taken careful note of all that has been done in this line. He had occasion to meet many of the men practically interested in what has already been done, all of whom emphatically discouraged the idea that the methods of treating peat in Europe, where many millions of tons are consumed annually, might be used advantageously here, the reasons given being that the fuel was not altogether satisfactory, and that labour conditions here made it impossible.

About a year ago Mr. Moore decided to devote his entire time to the solution of this problem, and for a time followed with some success along the lines already investigated. During his experiments, however, he accidentally stumbled on a very decided proof that our Canadian peat, which is found on examination to be formed from the same mosses as the continental material, produced a very superior fuel, hard, non-hydroscopic and of high calorific power, when treated similarly to that used in Europe. After exhaustive experiments he demonstrated that undoubtedly this fuel was much superior to any peat ed that undoubtedly this fuel was undoubtedly superior to any peat fuel yet produced here, and he determined to overcome the one and only difficulty which seemed to prohibit the successful production in Ontario of what is an old and proven satisfactory method now employed very extensively all over the continent, that is, the comparatively higher price paid to labour here. It was necessary in order to be successful to use machinery for a great deal of the work that is there done by hand, and that he has been successful is shown by the fact that he can perform with twelve men what in Russia takes from twenty seven to thirty.

It was not till near the end of the summer that Mr. Moore became satisfied with his efforts, at which time he made a very considerable quantity of fuel, a carload of which was brought to town and sold, giving great satisfaction where used. Since then he has devoted his entire time to putting what was of necessity an experimental plant, into working shape, and it will be quite ready for work as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring.

Mr. Moore has promised a full description of his plant in the near future, which will no doubt prove interesting.

(Mr. Moore is to be congratulated upon the happy outcome of his efforts, in the face of so many difficulties and discouragements, to develop an industry looking to the utilization of what seems to be an inexhaustible source of fuel supply.)

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Monday will be municipal election day, and qualified ratepayers, including lady freeholders, will have the privilege, and duty, of selecting from the nineteen candidates, twelve aldermen, to constitute with the Mayor-elect, the council for the year 1905. In addition, there will be a chance to vote on two money bylaws —one for $12,000 to raise money for the erection of bridges, and one one $20,000 for improvements to water works. The question of paying for sidewalks by a general tax rate, or by the present system of frontage tax, will also be a subject of vote. Here is some weighty matter for thought for the elector before marking his ballots. The election of twelve aldermen is in itself no trifling matter. We want a progressive council with business ability. We want a council which will give us value for the civic money expended. While we all shrink from the idea of paying taxes, the average ratepayer accepts the necessity philosophically, so long as the money he contributes is judiciously expended. As to the money bylaws, decision should be easier. It seems we must have the bridges, and it will be easier on the ratepayer to have them built with money raised by debentures, than by a levy on the tax roll for the year. Improvement of our water works, involving better fire protection, will lessen our insurance rates, and give better protection to our property. The mode of paying for walks by general tax is one that each ratepayer must settle for himself. There are so many sides to the question, so many things in favour, or against, the two methods, that it requires much more opportunity than has been given to arrive at the superior merit of either method.

FORMER PETEBORO' GENTLEMEN MARRIED

Mr. J. Frith Jeffries, B.A., Made a Benedict Yesterday.

A wedding, one of the principals of which is well known here, took place in Belleville on Wednesday, and is reported in the Ontario, as follows:

"A quiet wedding, and one of considerable local interest, took place D. H. Foster, Dundas street, when her eldest daughter, Mrs. Faustina J. Turner, was united in matrimony to Mr. J. Frith Jeffers, M. A., the principal of the Belleville Business College. The ceremony was a very quiet one and was attended by only th immediate friends of the bride and groom. Rev. A. H. Drumm, the pastor of the John street Presbyterian church, was the officiating clergymen. The bride wore a handsome brown travelling costume, and was attended by her daughter, Miss Turner, while Master Hudson Turner, assisted the groom. Among the many handsome and valuable presents was a beautiful cabinet from the pupils of the Belleville Business College. Mr. and Mrs. Jeffers left at noon on a honeymoon trip to Montreal and other points east. They are both well known in the city and district, and have many friends, who will join in every good wish for their future happiness and prosperity. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Jeffers, of Lindsay; Mr. Fred E. Foster, of Chicago, Mr. D. B. Foster, of Montreal; Mrs. F. A. Robinson, of Detroit; and Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Turner, of Hamilton.

AN ABSENT SON REMEMBERS PARENTS

Mr. Wm. H. Edmondson Sends Gifts From the Klondyke.

Mr. William H. Edmondson, son of Mr. H. Edmondson, town, who left here some seven years ago for the Klondyke, had evidently met with success in his search for the precious metal, if the specimens of gold which he has sent to his friends here may be taken as evidence. Recently he sent to his father, mother and sisters, as well as brother-in-law, many articles of jewelry made from the pure gold of the Klondyke region. Among the articles which were sent were a chain for his mother, rings and bracelets for his sisters, pins for his father, and a handsome ring for his brother-in-law, Mr. W. Cunningham.

The total value of his gifts would reach away up into the hundreds of dollars. His many friends here will learn with pleasure of the success with which he is meeting.

Not In the Wedding Party

By Euphemia Holden

Copyright, 1904, by Euphemia Holden

The best man wove his way in and out of the gay throng at the foot of the stairway. Bright colored confetti decorated the white shoulders of the women and the black coats of the men. The atmosphere vibrated with music and the rustle of gowns.

He walked across the deserted library and, drawing aside the curtains of a small den, stepped into semidarkness.

On the broad window seat a swirl of fluffy white stirred, and a startled head arose.

"Oh, I didn't expect to be found," said the maid of honor ungraciously. "I'm so tired. Are they nearly ready?"

She was rising slowly.

"Don't move," commanded the best man. "There is plenty of time."

Tucking the cushions behind her, he sat down in a chair at her side.

"I've done all I could for Ralph," he continued, "and I felt entitled to a breathing space."

"I tried to help Elsa, but there were so many. They are going south, aren't they?"

"In confidence, yes. Stoddard Allen wants to tie them up with white ribbons and signs. Ralph said if any one tried it he'd handle him without gloves."

"OH, I DIDN'T EXPECT TO BE FOUND," SAID THE MAID OF HONOR.

"I wouldn't blame him," she laughed, "though a bout in the station might be awkward."

"What a pace we've led the last few days!" he sighed wearily. "You girls seem able to stand it, but personally I'm so muddled I don't know whether it's Ralph's wedding or mine."

"I suppose circumstances also make that difficult to decide."

The best man felt his color rise. He could not see the girl's face distinctly, but he knew the mischievous look that gleamed in her eyes. Of course it was no secret that Elsa and he had been girl and boy lovers, but the thrust piqued him. In fact, their few days' acquaintance had been a series of drawn battles, without malice, but not without keenness.

"Yes," he replied, "though I find I'm glad it's Ralph's, because he is so much happier than I would have been under similar circumstances."

"Ah, the cynic again—woman, a delusion and a snare, and marriage a lottery. No! No! Such sentiments belong to the unintelligent."

"Have you ever been in love?" inquired the best man abruptly. It was the maid of honor's turn to blush. This was not the first time she had found it difficult to get ahead of the best man.

"I have thought I was," she said simply.

"Ex-actly," he went on with measured emphasis. "Then you've ceased thinking so. Later you've studied him calmly and said to yourself, 'A gentleman and eminently respectable, but why did I think I cared for him?' When you heard he was engaged to another girl you congratulated him heartily and honestly. Just the same, when they were married, you felt a trifle sad and a trifle lonely; not because you wanted anything changed, merely because it was another chapter closed forever."

"How do you know?" she cried, sitting up straight.

He laughed the low, pleased laugh of a flattered man.

"It's the way I feel about Elsa," he said.

"And the way I feel about Ralph," she gasped.

In the silence they could hear the talk and laughter of the wedding guests.

"And yet"— she began.

"And yet," he interrupted, "they are the happy ones. They have found each other."

"And they will be peaceful and contented because real love never analyzes."

"While the left overs—you and I—are sitting in the dark, tired, lonesome, theoretical, yet so hard hearted we wouldn't change."

"Oh, don't!" she said sadly. "Just think of the fairy kingdom that belongs to them, all full of romance and fun and companionship. Critical eyes will never see their treasure."

The best man was surprised to hear her catch her breath. He had not connected sentiment with the merry maid of honor, not having realized that a sharp tongue may give utterance to sympathy and gentleness. The discovery opened new vistas to him.

"But not a treasure we should be blind to if we forced our eyes open?"

She shook her head dubiously.

"There's no hope for the analytical. They may peep at a gentle intergrow. One needs to be very young and very rash to find what Elsa and Ralph have found."

"You think it's out of the question for us?"

"You've asked two personal questions. The third is forfeit. I merely meant to speculate. Come! We must go or we'll miss them."

"But if we stay," he said quickly, "we may find worlds. Think of the time we've wasted sparring, and now—the last night—we find mutual and human sympathies."

The maid of honor leaned back on the cushions smiling. The best man's enthusiasm was new and curious.

"It seems to me," he went on, with boyish eagerness, "that reason, honesty and unselfishness are the bases of an enduring marriage. That's why Ralph and Elsa will be happy."

"Oh, you're not a cynic!" exclaimed the maid of honor. "It was only a pose to cover what you try to be ashamed of."

He laughed, and his face flushed again.

"Do you know," she added softly, "nothing in the world is more alluring than the thought of some one who will stand by you year after year, who will put up with your foolishness, a lovable, loyal friend who will be your playmate forever and ever?"

"That's it!" he cried. "We're discoverers. Don't you see that you and I could quarrel and make up and be happy"—

A babel of voices, excited laughter and a scurry of feet interrupted him.

"Quick!" said the maid of honor, springing up. She opened the curtains and hurried out.

"They're gone," she pouted, coming slowly back."

"I'm so sorry," apologised the best man, skillfully drawing the curtains behind her. "I ought not to have"—

"Indeed you ought not," she averred severely.

"Forgive me. We would have caught only a glimpse of them, and these minutes in here have meant"—

"Oh, no, no!" she faltered. "They mean nothing. Weddings are contagious. These are symptoms."

"And the cure?" he laughed.

"Immediate separation."

"Twenty minutes too late!" he cried joyously. "Let's have another wedding!"

Rebuking a Judge.

A certain New York judge has a habit which sometimes annoys members of the bar who appear before him, particularly young men, of talking to his associates on the bench while the lawyers are delivering their speeches, but however exasperated they may be the lawyers have not, as a rule, the boldness to complain, for they recognise the power of the court. An eminent lawyer of New York, however, set them an example. He was about to make the closing speech in a highly important case. Forty minutes had been allotted him for the purpose. He had scarcely uttered a dozen words when the judge wheeled round in his chair and began a discussion with his associate on the bench. The lawyer ceased speaking immediately, folded his arms and gazed steadily at the judges. A hush fell upon the courtroom. The offending judge, noticing the stillness, turned and looked inquiringly at the silent advocate.

"Your honor," said the lawyer, "I have just forty minutes in which to make my final argument. I shall not only need every second of that time to do it justice, but I shall also need your undivided attention."

"And you shall have it," promptly responded the judge, at the same time acknowledging the justice of the rebuke by a faint flush on his cheeks. It was an exhibition of genuine courage, but one that was more fully appreciated by members of the profession than by the others who witnessed it.

Trunk Covers.

Trunk covers are useful even to the stay at homes who, for lack of wardrobe accommodations, resort to trunk room for storing clothes. A simple cover is a large oblong denim one. One seen recently was in red, the edges buttonholed all around in white long and short stitch and a large initial worked to come on the top of the trunk. This not only covers the trunk when closed, but is useful to throw over trays of the open trunk when one is interrupted in process of burrowing or packing.

Fruit-a-tives or Fruit Liver Tablets

Instead of Fruit.

Fruit is a splendid tonic for stomach and liver. The active principles give fruit its medicinal value. But they occur in such minute quantities, that when fruit is taken with other food, and goes through the process of digestion, their action is lost.

"Fruit-a-tives" are the active principles of apples, oranges, figs and prunes—extracted from fruit juices, combined by our own secret process, and compressed into tablets. They are the concentrated medicinal virtues of fruits and act much more effectively than any other known treatment in curing Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Torpid Liver, Biliousness and Kidney troubles. At all druggists. 50c. a box.

ADVICE TO A FOOL

If the world don't do exactly as you think
It ought to do,
Get mad!
If you meet with opposition, get a toothsome rag to chew—
Get mad!
Get as mad as hops, and show it;
Feed your anger, fan it, blow it;
Pout, and let the whole world know it—
Get mad!

If the joke you tried to spring upon the other fellow turns,
Get mad!
If you get the poker's portion that invariably burns,
Get mad!
Play the baby, whine and blubber,
Like the rankest sort of lubber
While the gamins guy and rubber—
Get mad!

If you step upon a 'nanner peel and stand upon your skull,
Get mad!
Never smile and make a joke of it, or folks will think you dull—
Get mad!
Turn and frown upon the spot
Where the pavement quickly shot
Up and gave you such a swat—
Get mad!

If you want to be a pleasure to the world you're living in,
Get mad!
If you'd keep the people's faces wrinkled always with a grin,
Get mad!
For there's nothing else so funny
On this mundane sphere, my honey,
As the man that's never sunny—
Get mad!

Recognizes Them by Neckties.

There is a ticket taker in one of the Broadway theaters who occasionally exploits his memory in a rather curious way. Generally he gives each man who goes out between the acts a return check, but occasionally he omits this and relies solely on his memory to recognise those who are entitled to reenter the theater. A man who saw him doing this the other night remarked that he must have a remarkable memory for faces.

"No," replied the ticket taker, "I have a very poor memory for faces. I do not rely on their faces at all. Indeed, I seldom look at the men's faces. What I go by is their neckties. If you will watch the neckties you will observe that no two are exactly alike. They differ much more than the men's faces do, and they are easier to remember. I might forget a man's face, but his necktie, never. I have followed the rule for years, and I have never made a mistake yet."—New York Press.

All the Year Round.

"I think you should be ashamed," said the lady reformer to the lady Igorrote, "to appear in such a lack of costume."

"Yes'm?" answered the lady Igorrote, who had picked up considerable English as well as much information. "But in the winter you wear a decollete dress, do you not?"

"Yes."

"And in summer a bathing suit?"

"Yes."

"Well, I have hit upon a happy combination of the two."—Chicago Tribune.

Her Blessed Power.

Alluding to the good influence exerted by a kind hearted woman of humble life and retiring disposition a great writer on moral and religious subjects says: "What was the secret of her power? What had she done? Absolutely nothing, but radiant smiles, beaming good humor, the tact of divining what every one wanted, told that she had got out of self and learned to think of others, so that at one time it showed itself by sweet words, at another by soothing a sobbing child. None but she saw those things. None but a loving heart could see them. That was the secret of her blessed power. The woman who, whatever her station in life may be, will be found in trial capable of great acts of love is ever the one who is always doing small ones."

Be Agreeable.

A woman in company to make herself agreeable must always seem pleased and contented. She must give the impression that she is really enjoying herself, whether that be the case or not.

The woman who wants to make herself liked by being agreeable must have one style for all. There must be no consideration of position of parties in this respect. The rule should be one style for rich and poor, no fawning on the one or haughtiness for the other. The woman who adopts this latter line of behavior ends by being disliked all round.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

No woman changes her mind any oftener than she wants to, no matter what any one says.

"Just because I want to," is enough of reason and reason enough.

When fools fall out wise men reap the aftermath.

Walking is only a pleasure to the man who does not have to walk.

No man is afraid of a woman unless he has offended her.

Some people play with words as recklessly as a child with dynamite and often with as dire result.

Made of Nicotine.

Dreams, pipe dreams, what should we do without 'em?
They come to soothe us when we're care beset.
Though cold, hard facts do oft essay to rout 'em,
Still they return and are with gladness met.

Ah, what so sweet as this delightful dreaming,
This half prevision of the things afar?
This dreamful rest from everlasting scheming,
This fire escape, when things caloric are?

Dream long—why shouldn't we be slaking
A thirst that burns as a consuming fire,
From which there's no escape when we are waking?
But in pipe dreams we get our heart's desire.

Not for the dreamer is the toil and trouble,
The smarting hands and blindly stumbling feet.
He dreams, and then do joy and gladness double,
Pain disappears and life becomes complete.

So, light the pipe, nor listen to the chatter
Of sordid souls that never knew the bliss
Of just escaping from the grip of matter
By sweet communion with a pipe like this.

His Deserts.

"Give me liberty or give me death!" frantically shouted the political spellbinder as though he imagined his audience was composed of deaf men.

"Not if I happen to be on the jury!" exclaimed a man in the back of the audience who had yawned through the speech.

"What jury?" asked a friend who was groping for the drift of the remark.

"A jury to try the speaker on the charge of being an orator, of course," returned the first speaker. "He isn't bad enough to deserve death, yet it would be a shame to set him at liberty. I think $10 and thirty days would be about right."

May She Stay.

Where is the jolly bloomer girl
Who once went round the track,
The girl who set our hearts awhirl?
We know not where she is, alack.
But hope she won't come back.

When Cash Looked Good.

"Do you believe in art for art's sake?"

"Yes, on the days in which I do not happen to be hungry."

"And yet you say you hope some day to be a millionaire."

Forced to Be Polite.

"I notice Chawley speaks to his tailor on the street."

Cheer Up.

What's the use of crying
When the skies are gray,
For you can't with sighing
Chase the clouds away.
Might as well be singing,
Though your verse is lame;
Care to windward flinging;
Price is just the same.

Though the day is hazy,
Dull the autumn sky,
There may be a daisy
Morning by and by.
Any way you guess it,
Crying does not pay;
Pay as well confess it;
May as well be gay.

Doesn't Match Name.

"He takes his whisky straight."

"You wouldn't think so if you saw him making crooked tracks for home."

Throwing Them In.

"Any germs in this milk?"

"Not that I know of. No extra charges if there are."

Double Up.

Julia was accustomed to hearing her sister, who studied her spelling lesson at home, say "double c" and "double s." So one day when the primary teacher asked her to read from the board the sentence, "Up, up the kite goes," Julia said confidently:

"Double up the kite goes."

A pretty trick may be shown by fashioning a little man or a pillar out of clayey mud mixed with sand. While the figure is still soft press into it seed of water cress which has been soaked for some hours in soft lukewarm water.

Bronchitis Grows Chronic

AND RETURNS YEAR AFTER YEAR OR DEVELOPS INTO ASTHMA OR CONSUMPTION. CURE IS

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Bronchitis is too serious a disease to trifle with.

Children are most likely to contract bronchitis, and, if neglected, it becomes chronic and returns year after year until it wears the patient out or develops into some deadly lung disease.

Chills and fever, nasal or throat catarrh, quick pulse, loss of appetite and feelings of fatigue and languor are among the first symptoms.

The cough is dry and harsh. There are pains in the chest which are aggravated by deep breathing and coughing. Expectoration is of a frothy nature, stringy, tenacious and sometimes streaked with blood.

Pains in the limbs or joints and extreme depression and weakness result from continuation of the disease.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is, we believe, the most effective treatment for bronchitis that money will buy.

It is the most effective treatment for bronchitis because it is so far-reaching in its effect on the whole system, not only loosening the hard, dry cough, but actually and thoroughly curing the disease so that it does not return.

Mrs. George Budden, Petrolia, Ont., says:—"I feel it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, as I had the asthma very bad; could get nothing to do me any good. A friend of mine persuaded me to try this remedy, as he had it and it proved successful. I tried it and it cured me. I am thankful to-day to say I am a well woman through the use of this remedy. I keep it in the house all the time and would not be without it."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 35 cents a bottle; family size, three times as much, 90 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.—12.

REASON No 2

WHY YOU SHOULD USE

Red Rose Tea

Because it is tested by skilled tea tasters.

Tea tasting can well be called one of the fine arts. A man who can taste several hundred cups of tea a day, and, by his keen senses, detect the slightest difference between them, and who, blindfolded, can tell where each and every tea was grown, not only the country, but the particular district, and often the very plantation —such a man is the professional tea taster.

The head man in my tea room, Mr. W. R. Miles, is a master in his profession. He learned the business in London, Eng., and is a tea taster by right of birth, as both his Father and Grandfather were tea tasters. It came natural to him and he is recognized as one of the best judges of tea in America.

He and his assistants do nothing but taste the teas, and superintend the blending.

RED ROSE TEA is the result.

WOULD SHE?

I'm the apple, swaying, bobbing,
That Priscilla tries to bite—
Hanging fine
On the line,
With her rosy cheeks hobnobbing.
Now the left, and now the right.

I'm a mighty lucky fellow
Looking straight into her face
Blue her eyes
As the skies,
And Priscilla's hair is yellow,
And she has a wondrous grace.

As I kiss her lips so lightly
Much I wonder what she'd do
If that man
Tried my plan.
Do you think that she would brightly,
Gayly try to bite him too?

WOMAN'S WORLD

EDNA DOW CHENEY.

A Massachusetts Woman Who Has Helped Make American History.

Among the galaxy of bright Massachusetts women who have helped to make the history of this country is Edna Dow Cheney, author, preacher and reformer and famous in days of yore as a journalist and a stirring agitator in women's movements. Edna Dow was born in Boston June 27, 1824. In 1853 she married Seth Willis Cheney, the artist. Early in life Edna Dow came under the influence of Margaret Fuller, Emerson, Alcott, Clarke and Parker. She aided in forming the Boston School of Design For Women, the Women's Medical college, the New England Hospital For Women and the Horticultural School For Women. During the civil war she was secretary of the Freedmen's Aid society.

She was president of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage association in 1870 and has long been identified with this reform. She is a vice president of the Free Religious association. Her literary work, which is considerable, is devoted largely to philosophic and religious subjects.

Hints on Success in Cakemaking.

Of course all eggs are washed before being used in order that the clean shells may be utilized for clearing soups and coffee. Eggs should never be beaten in a tin dish nor with a tin spoon, as the metal imparts an unpleasant flavor to the egg. When directed to be "slightly beaten" the yolk and white are not separated and only given about a dozen strokes with the whisp, but "well beaten" means until very light and of a pale yellow color. Eggs should be very cold to whip well and a narrow dish used when only one or two are required.

Cakes in which the yolks of eggs are used require less heat than cakes made with the whites, since the yolks are so rich they burn quickly. For most cakes it is not absolutely essential that eggs and each ingredient as added be beaten separately, but all materials can be put into a dish at once, and one long drawn out stirring will satisfactorily blend the whole.

Butter should be creamed for a cake before any sugar is added. In cold weather warm the bowl slightly or pour hot water in for a moment, then dry with a towel. When the butter is smooth, pliable and white on the edges add the sugar quickly, and the whole will be light.

Do all the beating before the baking powder is added and gently stir or fold the batter afterward only sufficiently to have the flour worked in smoothly. Water is quite as desirable as milk in mixing batters—indeed, in many instances cake is more delicate and tender if made with water rather than milk.

Gingerbread batter needs no beating, but should be stirred only sufficiently to mix the ingredients to insure the desirable dark, rich look. Gingerbread should never be cut, but broken, apart. A delicious crust is formed on sponge cake if the top is dusted over with powdered sugar just before the cake is put into the oven.

If the flavoring for a cake has been forgotten rub the stated amount of extract over the outside when the cake is lifted from the oven. If it is desired that a loaf cake rise slowly, cover with an inverted pan just fitting the cake tin until the cake has risen as high as possible, letting it remain until the cake is nearly cooked, then remove for browning.—Imogene St. John in Pilgrim.

When a Girl Is Engaged.

The wise girl needs no advice as to how she shall bear herself during the period of her engagement. There is no danger that she will not take it seriously. The risk in her case is that she will be so much burdened down with her new duties that she will lose sight of the lighter and more pleasurable side of it. A man may think it is very charming for awhile to see his fiancee take almost a religious view of the new relationship, but it will not be long before he will crave the everydayness that takes fun as well as solemnity into account.

Fewer girls of this type, however, are found than of the other. There are girls who consider all love affairs more or less as jokes, even those that lead to marriage. In certain sections it used to be the custom not to announce an engagement until a very brief period before the wedding cards were out. Under those circumstances a girl seemed to take a keen pleasure in concealing her new relationship from those about her. I have known of girls who would not hesitate to deny point blank the fact of their betrothal, even within a few weeks of their marriage. I once heard a girl say: "All my fun would be at an end if my engagement were announced. I shall have to live with one man for the rest of my natural life, and I mean to fly about a little before I settle down with him."

One would be tempted to condemn this sort of thing unreservedly were it not that those same flirtatious girls often become the most devoted wives and mothers. But, although there are instances of this kind, it is a decidedly unsafe rule to follow. More than this, it is unkind and unfair to all the parties concerned.—Christine Terhune Herrick in Success.

Drape Your Mirror.

If a woman wishes to see herself in the deception mirror as others see her with the eye or as nearly as possible she should keep the surface of her glass highly polished and have a plentiful supply of white—not cream—gauze or fine Indian lawn. Gather the material at the center of the top and let it fall on either side, framing the glass with soft folds of pure white.

When this is done to artistic satisfaction peep in and see what an improvement it makes to the general appearance. A draped mirror, says Woman's Life, always gives a more becoming reflection than one with a hard frame, and, besides, the white draped mirror and the lace covered toilet table make a dainty spot in a girl's room at all times.

For the Little Woman.

Her object is to look as big as she can, and she frequently succeeds in giving the impression that she is a great deal taller than she is by taking care of the lines of her figure. There is more in the way she holds herself than in the high heels that can be worn; she should hold her head up and her shoulders back. Then much depends upon her skirt. A skirt that is long in front increases her apparent height. Short women should not wear capes, and wide belts are to be avoided. A long waist gives height, and an actress who desired to increase her height managed it by building up the heels inside. Very flat hats should not be worn.

Burnt Match Receiver.

Burnt matches are a source of annoyance to every housewife, and a receptacle for them, placed near the gas, will prove a convenience. This pretty conceit is made from an ordinary fig basket. It is trimmed with green satin ribbon bows and ends and is also suspended by ribbons in the same shade. It is such a simple affair that it can easily be made by even a little girl. An attractive result would be achieved by the addition of a lining of silk harmonizing in color with the ribbons on the basket.

To Mend Glass and China.

To mend glass and china take half a pint of milk and mix with it an equal quantity of vinegar to coagulate the milk. Separate the curds from the whey and mix the latter with the whites of four or five eggs. After beating the mixture very thoroughly add quicklime which has passed through a sieve and make the whole into a thick paste of the consistency of putty. This mixture if carefully applied to broken china or glass or to fissures of any kind and dried properly resists fire or water.

The Kitchen Table Top.

If one cannot have a marble slab for the top of the kitchen table the best covering is zinc. It may be kept clean easier, and servants cannot harm it with the knife when cutting bread and meat. If only table oilcloth can be afforded the tan colored in small check will be found the most serviceable of any, for it will not show stains readily.

Rights and Privileges.

The girl of the future will be definitely obliged to choose between her ever present privileges and her rights. And I would advise her to hang on to her privileges and let her rights go. If you can't get your vote you can always get your votes, and you can influence him in his vote.—Josephine Dasham in Public Opinion.

Spilled Neck Lace.

Lace that has yellowed by contact with the neck—the most stubborn of stains to whiten—may be perfectly cleansed by putting it in lukewarm suds made with white soap, changing the water at least once a day and letting it soak for a week. This treatment will not hurt the most delicate web.

Are Contented Women Scarce?

The contented woman does exist, whatever cynics may say. She has to be hunted out, to be sure, because she does not belong to a large class. She is not numerous and not the least bit obtrusive, and if you find her at all it will be by accident.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A large hall when paneled produces a fine effect, but a small hall should have thoughtful treatment, for when it is paneled from floor to ceiling it has a boxed appearance.

Fat around and immediately below the waist is said to be more easily removed by walking than any other form of exercise.

A glass of warm or hot milk taken just before or immediately after arising will prove a flesh producer.

To keep milk sweet for several days add a teaspoonful of fine salt to each quart of new milk.

Good health requires plenty of fresh air in the sleeping apartments.

The World's Great Industries.

A painstaking German has prepared a table showing the percentages in the leading countries of the world of the persons employed in the three principal branches of activity—agriculture, manufacturing and mining, commerce and transportation. The table here given indicates facts somewhat at variance with the popular notion:

	Agriculture and forestry.	Manufactures and mining.	Commerce and transportation.
Germany	37.5	37.4	10.6
Austria	58.2	22.3	7.3
Hungary	58.6	12.6	3.3
Italy	59.4	24.5	7.4
Switzerland	37.4	40.7	10.7
France	44.3	32.6	9.4
Belgium	21.1	41.6	11.7
Netherlands	30.7	23.7	17.2
Denmark	48.0	21.6	11.8
Sweden	40.8	20.9	7.5
Norway	49.6	22.9	11.7
England and Wales	8.0	58.3	13.6
Scotland	12.0	60.4	12.4
Ireland	44.6	32.6	5.0
United States	35.9	24.1	16.3

By this showing Italy has a greater percentage of men engaged in manufacturing and mining than the United States, and that vast country is eleventh on the list in agriculture. Holland employs a greater percentage in commerce and transportation than either England or the United States, and Scotland leads the world in manufactures and mining. England is comparatively a cipher in agriculture, her soil being given over to hunting and gentlemen's estates. For a land of the highest culture and refinement France appears well among the patrons of farming.

A South Sea Romance.

Years ago there came to the British colonial Governor of Fiji a man in a tattered white suit, a typical "beach-comber." After a private interview of some duration the Governor was persuaded to put a sailing boat at his battered visitor's disposal to take him to an island which he had named. The man said he was by right of descent twentieth Baron Somerville, but he had settled down with a dusky bride in a Polynesian paradise, was perfectly happy and had no desire to take the status that belonged to him. The Governor was skeptical, if soft-hearted. The episode passed into the realm of the half forgotten. News came to this country recently that "Hugh Somerville," eldest son of Hugh, rightful twentieth Lord Somerville, had arrived in Cooktown, Queensland, from somewhere in the neighborhood of the Solomon Islands and was seeking means to enable him to come to England and claim the title. He is described as a young man of twenty-two, tall and handsome and with a complexion bronzed to the tint of copper, obviously of partly native descent, but well mannered and pleasant spoken and fairly well educated. No details of his claim are given.

An Improved Diary.

"This," explained the bookseller, "is our latest patent diary. We think it is the cleverest thing in that line ever devised."

The shopper turns the leaves idly.

"But I can't see where it is different from any other," she observes.

New Year's In France.

New Year's in France is a greater day for exchanging gifts than Christmas. The custom of New Year's calls, once so popular in this country, but now fallen almost into disuse, is still supreme in Paris. So crowded are the pavements on the boulevards that pedestrians sometimes have to take the middle of the street.

BLOOD POISON

On account of its terrible effects, blood disease is called the king of all diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted; so while it may not be a crime to have the disease, it is a crime to permit it to remain in the system. It may manifest itself in the form of Scrofula, Eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, itchiness of the skin, sorethroat or blotches, ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, falling out of hair, disordered stomach, and a general depression of the system. If you have any of these symptoms don't neglect yourself. You have no time to lose. Beware of "old form" treatment—dangers of mineral poisons—beware of Quacks and Fakirs. OUR NEW IMPROVED TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure this disease, never to return. Many Brands will protect you. Our treatment is not injurious in any way, but reaches the very root of the disease and eliminates all poisons from the system. The symptoms of disease gradually disappear. The blood becomes pure and enriched, the whole system is cleansed and purified, and the patient feels a contentment never for the asking and the pleasures of life. CROWD MELTED AWAY

After Old Man Told His Tale of Deer Around Galt.

One of the most interesting men on earth to talk to is the sportsman who has just returned from the hunting ground, especially if he has not managed to "bag" a great deal, for then there is more room for the imagination to play, says The Galt Reformer. But when a whole crowd of returned sportsmen get together and commence "remembering things"—well the result is as interesting as a good novel. It was such a gathering, composed of certain local sportsmen, that occurred the other day, and one of those present started the ball rolling by telling how it was that he happened to come home from Parry Sound district lately without any dead meat, although he had had a good rifle with him. He explained that he had brought down a noble buck with his trusty gun, and only for a mean trick that the animal perpetrated his family would now be having deer meat for dinner.

"I was lying in ambush near one of the well-known deer runs of the north country," the hunter went on, "and presently I espied a fine buck coming down the line. I put a well-aimed bullet right through the centre of his chest, and he dropped without going ten feet. However, while I was getting my knife ready to bleed him, the brute suddenly rose to his feet and ran away, and I saw him no more."

The other members of the crowd expressed their sincere sympathy with the hunter. One of them said: "It is necessary to be very careful to make sure of a deer after shooting him, because they are such eccentric animals. I myself, for instance, once shot a deer and had to follow him five miles before he dropped. When the animal was finally cut up, it was found that my bullet had gone right through his heart."

A couple of the older members of the party now had something to say with regard to the chase of earlier days. "The most peculiar experience I ever had with a deer," said a man whose hair was grey and who, therefore, could not be doubted, "was about 30 years ago. I formed one of a party hunting with hounds. We got on the scent of a deer, and, after two hours, caught sight of him. We then ran him to the edge of the river, and just at this point, the banks were very high and the water quite deep. Our game stopped when he reached the bank and seemed to decide that he would rather be pulled down by the dogs than jump in. There were four hounds and they rushed upon the animal triumphantly, all in a bunch. The deer did not make a move until the foremost dog was within five feet of him. Then he suddenly stepped aside and started 'cross country. Two of the dogs, being unable to stop in time, went head foremost into the stream, were swept away and drowned. The other two were so surprised that they made no move—and we were the same."

An uneasy movement was noticeable among the listeners when the speaker had ceased. None uttered a word, however, until presently another elderly gentleman remarked that he had had a still stranger experience than this in his day.

"It was on a Sunday," he said, "long, long ago, when I was quite young. In those days the deer were very thick in the neighborhood of Galt, as I will prove to you. My father had a farm about three miles west, and on the day in question, I was strolling through the cabbage patch, when suddenly I perceived a flock of wild turkeys at rest. I could not resist the temptation, although it was Sunday, so I went into the house and brought out my rifle. Just as I was about to shoot, the birds rose and started to run in their peculiar manner. I followed them in hot haste into some undergrowth. I was not looking where I was going and I stumbled into the midst of a herd of deer who were feeding. I was so surprised that I was rendered incapable of firing a shot. However, one of the animals, in rushing away knocked me down. This caused my rifle to go off, and luckily, the bullet killed one of the turkeys, which were some distance ahead. The whole thing took place in the twinkling of an eye. Oh, yes, deer were very plentiful then and they were surprisingly tame too."

The old man smoked his pipe meditatively. No one else had any more remarks to make. The crowd broke up quietly and melted away.

Why Do Women Worry

AND THEREBY EXHAUST THE NERVOUS SYSTEM AND RUIN HEALTH?

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The worry habit is an unmitigated evil.

Worry is by far the most frequent cause of nervous disease.

Because of the multitude of household and family cares, and because of the nature of their employment, women are especially liable to give way to worry and anxiety.

The result is wasted nerve force, weakness and disease.

It may be nervous headaches, sleeplessness, irritability, indigestion, discouragement and melancholy, or weakness and irregularities peculiarly feminine.

The only way to restore health and strength is by increasing the nerve force in the body, and this is best accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Make a test of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food by noting your increase in weight from week to week while using it.

Notice the improvement in your appetite, and how much better you rest and sleep.

The healthful appearance of women who have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the best proof of what it will do in the way of steadying and strengthening the nerves, rounding out the form and replacing weakness and disease with new strength and spirits.

Mrs. M. A. Sharp, 346 Dublin street, Peterborough, Ont., states: "For some years I was troubled with indigestion, which developed into nervous dyspepsia, and besides suffering from nervousness, strange dizzy spells would come over me. Hearing of the good results obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I decided to try it. After a pretty thorough test of this medicine, I can say that I never used anything that did me so much good. It seemed to be the very treatment that I needed, and as a result of the use I am quite restored to health."

Composition of Medicines.

Mr. George G. Nasmith, M. A., Ph.D., read an interesting paper on "Proprietary Medicines and Canned Goods, in Their Relation to the Public Health," before the Canadian Household Association in the Normal School at Toronto recently. He said that alcohol entered largely into the composition of patent medicines, and gave a list of each of the various remedies with the percentage of alcohol it contained. The houses handling these medicines often knew little of their effect on the human frame, but sold the stuff merely as a business proposition. Any person, before using them, ought to be able to diagnose his own case, he said. Canned goods were often dangerous, for the copper, zinc, and lead entering into the composition of the can sometimes formed compounds with the vegetable or fruit that were poisonous.

New Year's Day In Canada.

With the French-Canadian, New Year's day, or le jour de l'An, as he calls it, is very much like what Thanksgiving day is to his New England brother. It is par excellence the feast of the home, essentially a domestic holiday.

A Song For the New Year.

A song for the new year, its hopes and its fears,
And never a song that is saddened by tears;
A song that shall ring and shall sing to the years—
A song of a brighter tomorrow!

A song for the new year, forgetting the old,
Whose story in sunshine and shadow was told;
A song of the joys that love's dear arms shall hold—
A song of a brighter tomorrow!

A song of a green world and bluest of skies,
A song of a sun that in splendor shall rise;
The joy's in love's heart and the light's in love's eyes,
And the world sees a brighter tomorrow!

Shooting In the New Year

RACING, whirling, nerve wrecking as has become the recognised spirit of our times, yet in the remote districts lingers a serenity so unshaken we can but marvel over the dual nature of this thing we call American. Customs of the fatherland have become so grafted upon the newer land one feels the richness of the past over mellowing the crudeness of the present.

One of the most lovable of these old customs, redolent with the air of feudalism, is that of shooting in the new year. We first hear of it among the early German settlers of Pennsylvania, where it has long since become obsolete, but about 1750 there was a general migration from Pennsylvania down to the hill country of the Carolinas. In rumbly old wagons these pioneers journeyed, laden with feather beds and delftware, sprigs of fruit trees and sturdy babies.

As the life history is but a repetition of the race history, there came with their first strange new year a burst of heimweh. Getting themselves together, they celebrated as best they could in memory of older days, and not once through all the years that have followed have these greetings been omitted.

Then tenantry and poorer people of the neighborhood gather at some appointed place about 9 o'clock in the evening, and the march begins. From one "big house" to another they tramp, dolorously intoning their doggerel, firing fierce salutes and feasting at the hands of the gentry.

Though North Carolina could never boast as many stately mansions as could some of her sister states, yet for homely comfort and lavish old time hospitality she has never been surpassed. Each of the dear old places has its own name, still lingering there—Swan Ponds, Pleasant Gardens, Mount Welcome, Ingleside. The sentiment of all was voiced on one stone gatepost, which proudly bore the inscription:

Welcome all
To Buncombe Hall.

Tradition tells us that the owner of this estate, Colonel Buncombe (of course he was a colonel), lived in the "low" country, and when he was entertaining guests whom he particularly enjoyed he had the bridge, the only means of escape, taken up and hidden in the swamps. Most of these jovial hosts are sleeping now, each in his narrow bed forever laid, but the new year has a way of returning, and the shooters return with it.

On the last night of the year, as you sit over the hickory fire, there comes a tramping in the front yard, and a deep voice outside begins the so called New Year's sermon with a forcing of the rhyme worthy of Walt Whitman.

THE NEW YEAR SHOOTERS.

A loud report being the thing desired, heavy wads are put on the powder and the gun muzzle held close to the ground. After the shooting comes the hint:

If you are a man of grace,
Come to the door and show your face.

The door is then thrown wide, and the company enter, awkward, grinning and shivering with cold. Some of them have come from a distance of eight or ten miles, as the country is sparsely settled, and must necessarily be tired, but they consider it more deferential to stand, or if one is finally persuaded to take a chair he sits on the edge uneasily.

The ruddy, Santa Claus-like old men exchange laconic remarks on the price of cotton; the youngsters refer to the possum hunt of the previous night. Some one goes to the piano and strums away in a frantic attempt to furnish amusement. They are stolid until she strikes up "Dixie." The effect is magical. The callers mark time with muddy boots and remark slyly:

"That's the stuff!"

Apples and oranges, cakes and coffee, are now brought out. At some places the black bottle is passed around. Then the shooters with a relieved sigh pile out of the door. The society manner is a fearful strain.—New York Post.

Dictations Over Wires.

A Cleveland man has started a business which promises to be a great success. He has hired an office, a large number of expert stenographers and a number of telephones. Business men call up by telephone, dictate their letters over the wire to a stenographer, and the letters are later sent back by messenger boys to be signed.

AUTHOR OF "BEN-HUR"

GEN. LEW WALLACE WROTE FAMOUS WORK UNDER A BEECH TREE.

Home of the Soldier, Novelist and Diplomat in Crawfordsville, Indiana — His Library and Studio—Elaborate and Artistically Furnished Literary Workshop —Took Several Years of Planning—How He Came to Write "Ben-Hur."

Crawfordsville, Ind., the home of General Lew Wallace, the world famous author of "Ben-Hur," is a city of about 10,000 inhabitants and is forty-four miles from Indianapolis. Near the centre of the town is a grove of venerable beeches and elms. In this beautiful grove is the home associated for many years past with the labors of the distinguished soldier, novelist, diplomat and poet. Under one of the most stately of these old trees the greater part of "Ben-Hur" was written.

The grounds of the Wallace estate comprise about seven acres, and a romance is connected with the story of the location of the author's home in this romantic spot. In 1852, when he was twenty-five years of age, General Wallace married Miss Susan Arnold Elston, daughter of one of Crawfordsville's leading citizens, Major Elston, whose home was in the centre of a park of forty to fifty acres of forest trees. Major Elston had several daughters, and one of them married Colonel Henry S. Lane, United States Senator from Indiana during the war. As the children left the parental roof they established their individual homes in different parts of the large grove. For years it was the custom of the daughters to call every morning at the old home on the mother, a lady of strong and beautiful character.

Some years ago General Wallace erected on his estate the building which constitutes its most noteworthy feature, his library and studio. It is one of the most elaborate and artistically furnished literary workshops in the United States, and the general was seven years in planning and erecting it. Casual passersby might mistake it for either a church or a museum. It partakes of the character of library, studio, museum, art gallery and workshop. Its portico is pure Greek, the main portion of the structure is Byzantine, and the tower is Romanesque. The interior is one large room, flooded with light from the glass dome. The bookshelves surrounding the apartment contain a library of much value, and above them the walls are hung with paintings and engravings, while statuary and oriental relics increase the artistic appearance of the scene. Here are many of the souvenirs and objects of virtu acquired by the author in the course of his career.

GENERAL LEW WALLACE.

Not only have General Wallace's books been money makers for author and publisher, but their dramatization has been a source of revenue quite exceptional in the case of a literary man. General Wallace was averse to the idea when the proposition of putting "Ben-Hur" on the stage was first broached to him. He was afraid introducing sacred scenes before the footlights would border on irreverence, if not indeed cross the bounds. This fear has not been realized. The dramatization of the famous novel has been one of the most pronounced of recent stage successes. It was estimated not long ago that the royalties of the author brought him at least $30,000 a year from this play.

It was a conversation with Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll that induced General Wallace to write the story of Christ and his times, which gave him his greatest fame and which has been published in many different languages and sold in all parts of the world. The conversation with Ingersoll, so far from making the author a confirmed skeptic, set him to thinking on religious subjects. He had not given them deep study before, but his research and reflection turned him from a doubter to a firm believer in God and Christ. He had already begun a short story based on the meeting of the wise men and the birth of Christ. He determined to remodel this story and make it an elaborate work. The research he made in connection with the subject, together with the actual composition of the story, consumed five years.

It was "Ben-Hur" which made General Wallace minister to Turkey. When President Garfield appointed him to this post he told him to take enough time from his duties as minister to write another book dealing with the orient. The result was "The Prince of India," which, though not such a remarkable success as "Ben-Hur," has had a very large sale.

Spring Purity

To brew good ale pure, hard water is an absolute necessity.

The solvent powers of water are so great that few springs produce water pure enough for brewing.

Carling's springs were discovered after many years of searching and the brewery established only when Government analysts deposed that the water never tested less than 99.08 degrees pure.

Hops used in Carling's Ale are grown in Oregon, and certain favored parts of Southern Europe, particularly Bavaria—no cheap hops are used as in common ales.

Ask for Carling's Ale—accept no other, because no other is quite so good.

"I have never met the real thing in man form before. Think of it! There's Charley Mason, at home, who will talk to a girl by the hour about how he was obliged to call Delaney out for insulting Richmond girls, and if Delaney hadn't humbly apologized shots might have been exchanged, with the accent on the 'might.' That's the fashionable, bouquet courage. The real thing is where a man acts like this Buckley did last night and then gets as mad as the dev—as mad as the very dickens when it is mentioned in his presence. Mrs. Cranston, I believe you have been trying to keep God from doing a beautiful piece of work so that you can do an ugly one—hideous except to the sight of narrow, squint eyed people. I may be getting crooked mentally for not espousing the governor's cause, but after what I've seen this morning, after seeing that couple together and reading their throbbing hearts, I can see it only one way."

"The son of a convict!" groaned Mrs. Cranston. "Never, never! Lydia will not do it. She respects our feelings too much. You say she doesn't yet realise that she's in love with him?"

"Not yet, but she's a light sleeper, Mrs. Cranston. Somebody will throw cold water in her face, and she'll open her eyes. I fancy if you and the major were to begin to urge her marriage to Governor Telfare that she'd rub her eyes and wonder if she had a nightmare. She wouldn't talk driving home. I took her hand. It was as cold as ice, but her face was on fire. I had spent the whole morning sneering at everything we came to—the little law offices and stores and the clerks coming to wait on us without their coats—and as we approached the warehouse I laughed at its dingy appearance and told her I didn't see how she could stand to live in such a town. On the way home she looked up at me and said: 'You may as well quit running Darley down, Kitty. I have found more real worth and nobility of character here than in any city I ever visited.' There you are, Mrs. Cranston! The first thing a woman begins to do in falling in love is to justify her choice, and your daughter can justify hers like a judge on the bench."

"There is one thing that will make her hesitate," said Mrs. Cranston, looking up with a steely stare. "Her father's heart is set on her marrying Governor Telfare, and the major's health is failing. I really believe if she should not obey his wishes—if she were to do such a dastardly thing as to marry this Buckley, it would kill him."

"That situation may influence her," admitted the Virginia girl. "A woman will often marry a man she doesn't love to gratify those she does. But if Lydia does marry Governor Telfare, she'll carry an ideal of another man into his home and down to her grave, even if she lives to give her husband grandchildren. But, oh, Mrs. Cranston, I wish it could be otherwise. I wish, with all my heart, that I could walk down this minute and call that man out and tell him I'd come to give Lydia to him, to have and to hold forever. And when the divine fire blazed up in his manly face I'd like to kiss him and assure him I was not a spy working against him, but his friend. The dear fellow thought he had made himself ridiculous before us this morning, when he had simply tangled himself up in our heartstrings and left them bleeding in his favor."

"Don't, don't!" Mrs. Cranston rose and stood frowning. "I see I can't count on you, Kitty; but, at least, you will not—you know what I mean?"

"No. I shall have nothing to do with it either way," said Kitty, with a smile. "I can promise you that—at least, I think I can."

CHAPTER XX.

ONE morning shortly after this Mrs. Hillyer met Jim Kenner on the main street of the village near the warehouse and paused to chat with him. "I'm still workin' on yore case," she told him. "The only trouble is that you are too backward to help. I serve you up with different gravy at every meal an' keep you on the sideboard to eat cold 'twixt meals, but ef you don't come up some time an' take a hand she'll want a change o' diet."

Kenner's honest face reddened. "I'm afeard I'm gittin' too old, Mrs. Hillyer," he laughed in high pleasure. "I give you my word, I worry all the time about my age."

"Worry?" she laughed. "What does age amount to? The older a man gits in this life the younger he is in the next, an', from all accounts, the next is better an' keeps a body at a standstill. Lord, you don't look like a feller that worries about anything unless it's fer the lack o' some devilment. Mr. Hillyer's told me how you love to gag old Hanks. I reckon since Bob's done the way he has you'll have it in fer the old man, or, rather, he'll have it in fer you all, beca'se Mr. Hillyer says Hanks predicted from the first that Bob ud come to no good. I hain't seed Mr. Hillyer since Mrs. Dugan told me about it, but it'll worry 'im like ripe, fer, you know, jest day before yesterday he let Bob have another two thousand to enlarge his business on. Encourage, I say. A boy o' that age ort to be spanked fer what he's done—jest when folks was braggin' on 'im, an'"—

"Why, Mrs. Hillyer"—Kenner's eyes were wide open in astonishment—"what are you talkin' about?"

"Talkin' about? Jim Kenner, do you mean to tell me that you, the biggest man gossiper in Darley, don't know what Bob Hanks has gone and done?"

"I'm at the fust of it, Mrs. Hillyer."

"Well, he simply got that little orphan gal, Dora May, some'n' or other, from Louisville, out o' Mrs. Styles' boardin' school last night an' driv 'er in a buggy to Springtown an' got a country preacher to marry 'em."

"Good Lord, Mrs. Hillyer!"

"That's what he done," went on Mrs. Hillyer. "They spent the night at the preacher's house, tuck breakfast, an' driv back to Darley. They've put up permanent at the Johnston House. Mrs. Dugan went up and seed what Bob had registered 'R. O. Hanks and Lady,' bless you! An' that chit of a gal in short dresses hardly below the knee!

"I can see it only one way."

Mrs. Dugan says while she was thar a-lookin' old Hanks come in as yallar as a squash an' axed if they had riz yet. The clerk told 'im no—that the bridegroom had told 'im to say that he was not at home to any callers, an' ef it was about business they wanted to see 'im to refer 'em to his head salesman at the store. Did you ever? Is it any wonder his daddy wouldn't set 'im up in business? The wust big head on earth is the sort that young boys has when they think they can start in to raisin' a family. Bob couldn't stand prosperity, I reckon. Mrs. Dugan says Mrs. Styles has dismissed school fer the rest o' the week an' is walkin' about the campus on her hands with 'er feet in the air. It seems that the gal was put in Mrs. Styles' care by some kin o' her'n, an' the old lady don't know what she's to do about it. Thar's some secret about who an' what the gal is anyway. Mrs. Styles is afeard it will bust up the institution. Mrs. Dugan says it will help the school—that folks will send the'r scrub gals thar to git 'em married off. Hain't they heard it at the warehouse?"

"They hadn't when I left abont twenty minutes ago, Mrs. Hillyer."

"Well, I won't stop you. I see Mrs. Stillman leanin' over the fence without a bonnet or shawl in this wind. I'll go an' ease 'er up. I know yo're eechin' to tell it to yore gang."

A few minutes after Kenner had exploded his information at the office old Hanks came in. He was pale, and his skin looked as dry as old parchment, but he was eating roasted peanuts, breaking the husks with steady, prong-like finger nails. He sat down without a word and dropped a handful of hulls into the stove.

"Jim," he said suddenly to Kenner, "what did you ever do about that account Bill Haskill was a-owin' you?"

"I got it yet," said Kenner, throwing a knowing smile around the room.

"Well, ef you'll discount it enough to make it interesting, I'll buy it. I've got 'im tied up with a piece o' land o' his'n, an' I want the land."

"I reckon we kin make a deal," said the cotton buyer as he wiped a smile from his facile mouth with his long hand. "I reckon you heard that Bob had taken to himself a helpmeet?"

The group hung on the old man's reply. Hanks crushed another peanut in his hand and raised the best part of it to his lips.

"I don't care what he does," he said. "I told you all you'd make a fool of 'im, an' now I reckon you see I was right." He was staring accusingly at Hillyer. "Yon started it," he blurted out. "Thar ain't one boy in forty million that kin keep from gittin' the big head with sech responsibilities put on 'im all of a sudden, but I hain't a-carin.' I reckon you know how to git yore money back."

"Oh, I don't know that this means absolute ruin," said Hillyer in his own defense. "Somehow I've got faith in Bob yet. A boy full o' puppy love will sometimes act reckless, but it may end all right."

At this juncture Bob Hanks himself came in. He wore his best clothes, and his boots had been freshly polished. His glance, a rather frank one, Kenner thought, rested dubiously on his father's face.

"They told me at the hotel that you wanted to see me, father," he said. "If I'd known you"—

"Yes, I called an' left my cyard," answered Hanks, with a sneer, "but I wasn't in no hurry. I jest called on a little matter o' business. You sorter got me to promise a week ago that I'd he'p you put in that stock o' dry goods, but I find out that my present intentions won't permit of it. When I thought favorably of it, you was a unmarried man, with jest yoreself to look after an' yore board paid by another party, but now you've tuck the best quarters at the hotel an' got a high priced dressmaker runnin' round to out hems on yore wife's skirts to kiver up yore folly, an' it's different. No; I won't put a cent in that business o' yore'n, an', moreover, I want to say right now that as soon as Mr. Trabue gits back from the country he'll stick a clause in my private papers that'll keep you an' that schoolgal from benefittin' by my death."

"Oh, I knew all this would come," Bob said in a regretful tone to George, who was eying him in slow wonder, "but I hain't the fool I look, George. Make Jake go out o' the office, an' I'll tell you folks all about it."

The negro did not have to be informed that he was not wanted, and with a sly laugh, half of apology, he hurried out into the warehouse.

"You could be a big enough fool fer any use an' not be as big a one as you look," said old Hanks, with a sneer.

"Look y' here, young man," demanded Kenner, "didn't you tell me t'other day that you was goin' to let up on that racket?"

"I remember tellin' you I wasn't goin' to steal the girl out fer any more buggy rides," said Bob, with a smile. "There will be no need of that in the future, I hope."

"So that's what yon meant?" laughed Kenner.

"Yes; that's what I meant."

Bob drew one of the high revolving stools up near the stove and got up on it, his heels resting on one of the rungs. His new broadcloth trousers glistened in the light from the window.

"I see I'll have to tell you all about it from the first," he began in a strangely confident tone. "I don't ask anybody any odds, an' wouldn't bother to explain to most folks, but I'll acknowledge I want you fellows down here to think well of me, for you are all business men and I'm a business man."

"That you are," snarled Hanks. "Thar's business men o' yore grade in every pore house an' asylum in America."

"Now, you keep quiet if you want me to tell about this thing," said Bob. "I am a business man. I know how to make money. Everything I've put my hand to since I got a start has turned out a fair profit. If I couldn't make money faster than you, father, I'd take in my sign. You've always been afraid of big deals. 'Go slow' has been your motto, an' it's hunting you to your grave. Now, this is the way the whole blamed thing come up. I'm old enough to marry, and that girl"—

"Old enough the devil!" broke in Hanks. "You look like you are with that fuss on yore lip."

"I reckon a man ought to be his own judge as to whether he is old enough for a step o' that kind," Bob said, with sudden dignity. "It begun this way. There was three sophomores at Mrs. Styles' school and they all seemed bent on seeing which one could make me like 'em the most. They was all pretty enough an' sharp enough, an' I reckon it was just human nature for me to carry on with 'em a little. I don't know as I liked one better than another at first. It was just the fun of seeing 'em wrangle," Bob laughed out impulsively. "They pretended to be as thick as molasses in the winter, but they hated one another like snakes. Then they got to telling lies on each other. I knew they were lies because I caught up with 'em. Finally I saw that Dora May"—

"Do you mean Mrs. Hanks?" asked Kenner, with mock solemnity.

"Yes, my wife," replied Bob. "As I say, I finally saw she was just the girl I was looking for, and I made up my mind to get married and be done with it. Thinking about her and trying to see her took up too much time. I told her my folks would object to it, but she advised me to go ahead. She's as independent as a hog on ice, an' she can afford to be." Bob paused for a moment, twirling his fingers between his knees, and then he went on: "I reckon I'll have to tell you all something. I don't know as I'd tell it now, but father is raisin' such a row over my marryin' that it puts me in a bad light and hurts my business. My credit won't be worth shucks if it gets out that my daddy has gone clean back on me—that is, until they know about my wife's connections. The truth is, Dora May's got plenty of money."

"Money?" echoed Kenner and Hillyer in a breath.

"That's what I said," answered Bob calmly.

"Then you married her fer that," said Kenner sternly.

"No, I didn't," replied Bob. "The truth is, I liked her before I knew about it. She suits me tiptop, and I can't help it if she is well off. She's what would be called big rich in this part of the country. Her father left her several blocks of business houses in Louisville. The rent on one batch alone is something over five thousand a year and will all come to her when she's of age. Her guardian didn't think it would be best for it to get out down here before she was done school, an' so he got Mrs. Styles not to mention it an' made Dora May promise not to tell it. But, of course, when me an' her got engaged, and"—

"You let a gal in short frocks tell you a cock an' bull story like that," broke in Hanks, his sallow face working visibly, "an' you swallowed it, like the sucker you are."

"I had no reason to doubt it," retorted Bob, with a flash. "But I found out afterward that it was all true. I know a tobacco drummer from up that way. He gets all my trade in that line. Me an' him are pretty friendly, an' I confided in him. He told me he knew all about the family and substantiated everything Dora May had said an' added a lots more about investments of hers that she didn't even know about."

BAD STOMACH MAKES BAD BLOOD.

You can't make sweet butter in a foul churn. Every farmer's wife knows this. Your stomach churns and digests the food you eat, and if foul, torpid or out of order, your whole system suffers from blood poisoning. You will have foul breath, coated tongue, bad taste, poor appetite and a whole train of disagreeable symptoms. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is not a beverage composed of whisky or alcohol, being entirely free from intoxicants, is a great regulator and invigorator of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

"About a year ago I was ill with blood poisoning," writes Miss Evelina Lentz, of 69 Walker Street, Buffalo, N. Y. "I had what seemed to be a small cold sore on my lip. It became very angry in appearance and began to spread until it nearly covered my face. My whole system broke out and could not go outside for fear of the appearance of my appearance. I used a great many medicines which did not give me any relief. Then I began to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I was greatly encouraged with the first bottle and after taking the second bottle was completely cured. The erysipelatous eruption disappeared and my blood was cleansed. My complexion is clear and fresh and I have felt better this year than I did for some time before. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is certainly a most remarkable medicine."

Don't accept a substitute for a medicine which performs such cures and which has a uniformly successful record of nearly forty years to its credit. It's an insult to your intelligence for a dealer to try by over-persuasion to palm off upon you in its stead some inferior article with no record to back it up. You know what you want; it is his business to meet that want.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS

Owing to the special nature of our business, which is largely one of trust and confidence in the ability, judgment and honor of the salesman, it is utterly impossible for us to fill our store with salespeople who know nothing about the watch or jewellery business, or of the quality of the goods they are selling. We wish, as a very special favor, to ask the many friends and customers of "Diamond Hall," who wish to look over our stock or make selections for Christmas, to be kind enough to come as early as possible.

JUNIORS PLAYED A CLOSE GAME.

Port Hope Defeated Locals by 2--1 Last Night.

Opening Game of the Junior Season—Locals Put up a Good Game.

The Junior O.H.A. team made its first public appearance this season last night, when an exhibition game was played with the fast bunch of Port Hope Juniors, losing to the latter by the skim score of 2—1, in a game in which at times there was some brilliant playing, but which as a whole showed lack of seasoning on the part of both teams. The Port Hope septette is a dangerous junior aggregation, and is a fairly well balanced team. The defence is heavy and does effective work, while the forward line is light but fast, and the youngsters are all-good stick handlers. As a whole they exhibited better combination work than did the members of the home team, which doubtless won the game for them, for, while the local forwards were equally fast individually, considerable of their efforts was wasted because of the lack of combination playing.

This defect, however, will doubtless be remedied later in the season, when the players have benefitted by their further practices, and it would not be surprising if before the season is very old, the local junior team should display an ability which is perhaps, unlooked for on the most part now.

The shooting of both teams was somewhat erratic, although the visitors were slightly superior in this branch, and Fitzpatrick had a number of shots to stop. He got away with the majority of them, however, and looks able to make good in that position. The visitors were the first to score, and at half time it was 2—0 in their favour, but in the second half the locals apparently had the better of the play, and scored one goal to a blank for the visitors.

The game, though marked by close checking, was comparatively clean, very few being penalised by the referee, Mr. W. Cavanah, the home team were the most frequent offenders, slashing being the favourite infraction.

In the first half, Rowden, for the visitors scored the first goal, followed later by one from Mercer, the fast little centre of the team.

During the second half the visitors were outplayed and the only score made was by the home team, McFarlane doing the trick from a mix-up in front of the goal.

After this the locals put more life into their playing, but time was called before the net could be located again, the game ending 2—1.

The teams were :

HARRIER CLUB S ANNUAL DINNER

Was Enjoyed Last Night at Home of Mrs. Richardson.

A Delightful Evening was Spent—Clever After-dinner Speeches

For a number of years a modest but very fraternal organization has been in existence in the form of the Harriers Basketball Club of the Y. M. C. A. While being a club for the gratification of the element of recreation and physical improvement, it is something else, even greater, perhaps; that is, the promotion of fellowship and brotherly love.

It has been the habit of their club to have an annual dinner each year since its existence at Mr. Wm. Richardson's.

For another time they met last night at the accustomed place. Games were played, stories and jokes were told, Mr. Best being there the stories and jokes were necessarily numerous and of the (Best.)

After this part of the programme had been duly enjoyed, everybody repaired to the dinning-room, where a splendid table met their longing gaze. It was a feast indeed, and one that did Mrs. and the Misses Richardson credit.

After everybody had become distended to his utmost capacity, toasts became the order. Mr. Horace Ayres, formerly of Peterborough, proposed a toast to the representative of the Y.M. C. A. Training School at Springfield, Mass., Mr. Holmes, who responded accordingly. Mr. Ayers responded very ably and feelingly to the toast proposed to the Harriers. He spoke of the very strong mutual bonds existing between the fellows. How they had passed through the intermediate stage in the physical department of the Y.M.C.A. to that of Senior without dissolution. How they had been mutually helpful to the different members in times of trouble or difficulty, and how their Captain, Mr. W. D. Campbell, had arisen to the honoured position of treasurer of the Y.M.C.A. He also spoke of the benefit he himself had received from such a body of splendid young men.

Mr. Campbell also spoke very feelingly of Mr. Ayers and of his influence upon the club. He also gave a short account of its history.

Mr. T. H. Hutchinson very ably responded to the toast of the ladies, and expressed his appreciation of the kindness of the hostess, Mrs. Richardson.

Mr. Best in his accustomed sober and thoughtful manner also spoke of the ladies and how absolutely essential they are to man's comfort.

Neat and impressive addresses were made by Mr. Wm. Richardson, Mr. John Laing and Mr. Fred. Richardson.

Mr. Percy Campbell, of Toronto Varsity, expressed his delight in again being among the Harriers, and made a favourable comparison between the fraternal feeling existing in the societies of the college and of that existing between the members of the Harriers. He showed a keen business instinct by finishing up with an invitation to purchase tickets for the Varsity Glee Club concert, which will be held here during January next.

The speeches were concluded by Miss Richardson, who very nicely responded to the Varsity toast on behalf of the hostess. She said that if it had been a pleasure for the gentlemen to have been there, it was still an equal pleasure to have had them there, and that she wished they would be together to enjoy many more such occasions.

The table everybody retired to the piano there to sing college songs. The festivities were concluded by singing "Blest be the Ties that Bind."

The Harriers Club consists of W. D. Campbell (Capt.), Wm. Richardson, Stanley Caniff, Ross Dobbin, Mr. Percy Campbell, Mr. T. H. Hutchinson, Mr. E. W. Best, Mr. Geo. McDonald, Mr. Horace Ayers, Mr. John Laing and Mr. F. K. Holmes, were also present.

"HIGH GRADES" WON FROM THE "BEDELIAS"

Interesting Hockey Game at the Rink Last Night.

HOCKEY

Grafton's "High Grades" won a victory from Barrie's "Bedelias" at the Brock street rink Thursday night. The score when the smoke had vanished hung 6-3. It was a noble struggle, replete with all things characteristic of hockey of the A1 calibre. The game was fast and comparatively clean, rendering the referee's duties not arduous. The line-up was :—

"High Life's"		"Bedelias"
Howland	Goal.	Carey
McDonough	Point.	Weatbrook
Conway	Cover Point.	A. Seymour
Main	Centre.	McCormach
Hughes	Rover.	Gorham
McIntyre	Right Wing.	Vanderwater

Referee, B. Hutchinson; goal umpires, J. Devins and Hickey.

McDonough was injured early in the struggle and Seymour replaced him and scored four of the five goals.

The "Bedelias" were minus two of their regular line-up and expect to turn the tables in the return game.

"NEVER WASE'S" COULDN'T WIN.

"Has Beens" Played Them a Tie Game Last Night.

A Re-union of the Team of 1897—An Interesting Game of Hockey.

The "Has-Beens" demonstrated last night at the Brock street rink that they are by no means eligible to be classed with the back numbers, for they played a tie game with the "Never-Was's," and declare that if a little more time had been allowed they would have made the latter look like the proverbial thirty cents.

This Christmas a number of the members of the hockey team of 1897 accidentally met here to spend the holidays, among them being Dr. Lionel King, Detroit; Walter Phelan, Pittsburg, and Roger Davidson, Brandon, Man. Someone conceived the idea of gathering together all the available members of the team of that year and playing a game with the younger players. This was agreed upon, and the game of last night, after the junior contest, was the result. The teams were constituted as follows :

"Has Beens."		'Never Was's."
	Goal.
Wasson...		Fitzpatrick
	Point.
Hollingshead...		...Parker
	Cover point.
Crowley...		... Meagher
	Rover.
Davidson...		...Cavanah
	Centre.
Dr. L. King...		..Parnell
	Left wing.
Graham...		..Morgan
	Right wing.

H. King... ... ...:McWilliams

The game was fast and furious, but during the whole progress of the game only one man was ruled off, and it was a significant fact that he was one of the "Never Was's."

The younsters started out well, securing two goals in succession, and things looked bad for the "Has Beens," but the fact that two goals had been secured against them only served to make them redouble their efforts, and in a short time Graham, by a nice shot, scored the first for his team. It was followed by another in a short time, this time the work of Davidson, who, after a great rush down the ice through the whole opposing team, scored, making it a tie.

Not content with tieing the score, however, they soon located the nets a third time, Graham doing the trick, and the old boys were in the lead, and it looked like a win for them. But it was not to be, for just before time was called Cavanah tied the score, and no further goals were put in, making the tally three all.

Some of the old players surprised their opponents and the spectators, by their speed and agility, Dr. King's work being one of the chief surprises. He made a splendid rover, and showed that he could still play the game. Hollingshead, too, was conspicuous at all stages of the game, and it was no doubt due to his effective work on the defence that the score against his team was not larger.

Walter Phelan refereed the game, giving entire satisfaction, and showing that he still knows the game. It was a disappointment to his many friends that Walter was not on the line up of the "Has Beens," and it is freely remarked that had he had in the game the "Has-Beens" would have had a win to their credit, instead of a tie game.

LOCAL OPTION IN SMITH.

As to Mr. L. Fobert's Interest in Chemong Park Hotel.

Mr. Irwin Denies the Statements Made—The Facts of the Case.

To the Editor of the Examiner :

There are so many false statements being made throughout the township re Local Option that I feel it my duty to expose one in order that the electors may be on their guard as to the others.

Much is being said about compensating Mr. Fobert who is said to have his all invested in Chemong Park hotel. No doubt they hope to awaken sympathy for Mr. Fobert and prejudice the electors against the by-law. Now the fact of the matter is this : Mr. Fobert has no interest in that hotel since by the deed of said property, dated October 23rd, 1904, it was conveyed to Mr. William Irwin and registered at Registery Office October 29th, 1904.

If such false and contemptible statements are made to maintain the liquor business, is it not sure proof that it ought not to exist? Is it not enough to arouse the electors to kill the monster that "burns men, consumes women, destroys life, curses God and debases Heaven. That degrades the citizen, debases the legislator, dishonours the patriot. That brings shame, not honour; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness; and with the malevolence of a fiend, calmly surveys its frightful desolation. It murders the soul. It is the sum of all villonies, the father of all crime, the mother of all abomination, the devil's best friend.

Citizens of Smith, let your hands, dictated by a true conscience, mark your ballot for the by-law on Monday next.

(Signed) ELLWOOD BOWERMAN,

Selwyn, Dec. 30, 1904.

In connection with the above Mr. Wm. Irwin was seen and says the statement made is absolutely incorrect, and that Mr. Fobert is largely interested in the property. It is true that a transfer of the property was made to Mr. Irwin, but it was not made on a Sunday, which 23rd of October, 1904, was, and the transfer was made in lieu of money advanced, and not as a purchase, and as a matter of fact there is an agreement existing at the present time by which the property is to be taken over again by Mr. Fobert as soon as the money advanced against it has been returned to Mr. Irwin. These agreements are in the hands of the solicitors of the respective parties, and to-day, Mr. Semple, a prominent temperance worker in Smith, read this agreement, and was so impressed with the injustice done to Mr. Fobert by the publication of the false statement, that he stated his intention of seeing the different clergymen to ask them to state in the pulpits to-morrow the facts of the case, and show that Mr. Fobert is interested in the property. It is not an uncommon thing when money is advanced for an agreement to be made providing that when the money has been returned the property will be released to the former owner without the expense of foreclosure or litigation.

PORT ARTHUR HAS FALLEN

Japanese Army Entered the Surrendered Fortress To-day.

ACCEPTED JAPANESE TERMS

Stoessel Would not Surrender, and When the Generals Said the Men Were so Exhausted That They Could not Move, He Exclaimed, Clenching His Fists "Then You Generals Fight."

Tokio, Jan. 3.—General Nogi reports as follows yesterday: "At 5 in the afternoon, January 1, the enemy's bearer of a flag of truce came into the first line of our position south of Shuishiying, and handed a letter to our officers. The same reached me at 9 o'clock at night. The letter is as follows:

"'Judging by the general condition of the whole line of hostile positions held by you, I find further resistance at Port Arthur useless, and for the purpose of preventing needless sacrifice of lives I propose to hold negotiations with reference to capitulation. Should you consent to the same you will please appoint commissioners for discussing the order and conditions regarding capitulation, and also appoint a place for such commissioners to meet the same appointed by me.

"'I take this opportunity to convey to Your Excellency assurances of my respect.

"'(Signed) Stoessel.'"

Nogi Answers Stoessel.

The following is General Nogi's answer to General Stoessel:

"Shortly after dawn to-day I will despatch our bearer of a flag of truce with the following reply addressed to Stoessel:

"I have the honor to reply to your proposal to hold negotiations regarding the conditions, and order of capitulation. For this purpose I have appointed as commissioners Major-General Itichi, chief of staff of our army. He will be accompanied by some staff officers and civil officials. They will meet your commissioners January 2, at noon, at Shuishiying. The commissioners of both parties will be empowered to sign a convention for the capitulation without waiting for ratification and cause the same to take immediate effect. Authorization for such plenary powers shall be signed by the highest officer of both the negotiating parties and the same shall be exchanged by the respective commissioners.

"I avail myself of this opportunity to convey to Your Excellency assurances of my respect.

"(Signed) Nogi."

Mikado Honors Stoessel.

Marshal Yamagata, chief of general staff, under orders from the Emperor, has despatched the following cablegram to General Nogi: "When I respectfully informed His Majesty of General Stoessel's proposal for capitulation His Majesty was pleased to state that General Stoessel had rendered commendable service to his country in the midst of difficulties, and it is His Majesty's wish that military honors be shown to him."

CAPITULATION SIGNED.

Japanese Army to Enter Port Arthur Fortress To-Day.

Tokio, Jan. 3.—The text of Gen. Nogi's telegram yesterday announcing the capitulation of the Russian forces at Port Arthur is as follows:

The Plenipotentiaries of both parties concluded their negotiations today at 4.30 o'clock.

"The Russian Commissioners accepted on the whole the conditions stipulated by us and consented to capitulate.

"The document has been prepared and signatures are now being affixed.

"Simultaneously with the conclusion of negotiations both armies suspended hostilities.

"It is expected that the Japanese army will enter the city of Port Arthur to-morrow."

STOESSEL STUBBORN.

Port Arthur Fell By Exhaustion of Ammunition and Men.

Che Foo, Jan. 3.—Commander Kartzow of the Russian torpedo boat destroyer Vlastni, in an interview last night, said:

"Port Arthur falls of exhaustion—exhaustion not only of ammunition but of men.

"The remnant of the garrison left had been doing the work of heroes for five days and five nights, but yet they reached the limit of human endurance.

"In the casemates of the forts one saw everywhere faces black with starvation, exhaustion and nerve strain. You spoke to them, but they did not give answer, only staring dumbly.

"The Russians sat in the casemates firing not more than once to the 200 shots sent by the Japanese. When the assault came they repulsed the enemy with bayonets. But the men themselves having existed for three months on reduced rations were so worn that it is marvelous they stood the final strain so long.

Stoessel Would Not Yield.

"Yesterday, General Stoessel would still fight. His wound, which was received early in the siege had been

"'But we cannot fight,' said his generals. 'Our men cannot move. They sleep standing. They cannot see the bayonets at their breasts. We can order but they cannot obey.'

"'Then you generals fight,' said Stoessel, clenching his fists.

"He seemed fanatical on the subject, but finally he was brought to see reason by the insistence of his subordinates, Admirals Lochinsky and Wiren, Generals Smyrnoff and Fock and many others, who some times with broken voices urged the step which all dreaded so long.

"I am sure Port Arthur would have sought terms a month ago had it not been for General Stoessel, who, with bulldog tenacity, steadily refused to permit such action to be taken. He had told his Emperor that he would never surrender, and he meant to keep his word.

Greatest Loss Suffered.

"The greatest loss suffered by Port Arthur occurred a fortnight ago when Major-General Kondrachenko was killed. Officers and men alike regarded him as the brightest star in Port Arthur. When his death became known the fall in the spirits of the soldiers was plainly visible.

LIEUT.-GENERAL STOESSEL.
Famous Defender of Port Arthur.

"General Kondrachenko was seated in the casemate of a certain fort discussing with seven other officers the best way of countermining against the Japanese when an 11-inch shell burst, killing everybody in the casemate.

General Nogi has taken Port Arthur with his artillery and his tunnels. His rifle bullets were seldom found to be of any use.

"We constantly endured a bombardment fiercer than anything in history. The Japanese periodically assaulted, and then, if repulsed, they calmly resumed their bombardment."

What Stoessel Asks.

Che Foo, Jan. 3.—A Russian officer, who left Port Arthur on one of the torpedo boat destroyers, says that though the terms of capitulation are not known, still the impression is that Stoessel has proposed that the army shall go free and that he alone be made a prisoner.

"Even that concession seemed to wrench out the sturdy old man's heart."

JAPANESE TO OFFER PEACE.

Russian Public Kept in Ignorance of the Russian Disaster.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 3.—While there is no longer any doubt in official circles here that the fall of Port Arthur has been decided and General Stoessel's long and gallant defence ended, news of the surrender has not reached the public. Foreign telegrams regarding the matter have been withheld from the newspapers, pending the official announcement here. The public so far is entirely unprepared for the news, which must prove a serious blow when it comes. Possibly some of the hesitation of the authorities is due to threats and rumors of radical demonstrations, coupled with the absence of the Emperor.

A Peace Offer.

In diplomatic circles last night it was stated that the fall of Port Arthur will be promptly followed by an offer of peace from Japan. A strong effort will be made to have it come through President Roosevelt. It is suggested that the terms might include an arrangement which would give Russia an outlet through the Persian Gulf.

Last Offensive Movements.

Tokio, Jan. 3.—A despatch from the Japanese army before Port Arthur, received at noon yesterday, says:

"The enemy's forces occupying Kekwan Mountain, and "Q" Fort, following an explosion at 12.30 o'clock yesterday morning, opened a sudden afterwards found the enemy evacuating these places. Our forces immediately occupied these two forts and also the heights known as "M" and "N," south of the forts. This morning almost all the enemy's ships, large and small, were blown up in the entrance and inside the harbor. Our offensive movements have been suspended, pending the negotiations."

ONLY SHERMAN'S WORD.

Stoessel Had Killed An Army, But the Fighting Became More Ferocious, So the Flag Went Up.

Che Foo, Jan. 3.—The Russian officers who arrived here yesterday from Port Arthur on the torpedo boat destroyers which escaped from that place have a single word for what the fortress has been for the past five days, during which the Japanese have bombarded and assaulted it ceaselessly night and day. They use that word unprofanely and convincingly, declaring that the horrors witnessed were beyond any description. There was not a single spot in the town which was safe from shrapnel. Many of the hospitals were hit, and the wounded refused to stay in them. Some lay in the streets on heaps of debris, exposed to the bitterly cold weather, and some staggered back to the front, hurling stones and defying the Japanese till taken prisoners or death came mercifully to end their sufferings. There were five days and nights of this state of affairs. The stock of ammunition which had been carefully husbanded for months was almost gone, and it was all too evident that Japan was about to grasp the prize which had cost her an army of men and countless treasure. The capture of 203 Metre Hill by the Japanese was the garrison's first vital wound. Then came the capture of Rihlung, Sungshu and Panlung Mountain. General Stoessel had announced that he would fight till the last.

"His plight Sunday night," said Capt. Karlow, commander of the torpedo boat destroyer Viastni, "looked like the last.

"There was no stopping the Japanese, who died in droves, fighting with the last instinctive twitch of the nerves, with eyes fixed on Liaio Mountains. General Stoessel has killed a Japanese army and exhausted his ammunition. But," said Capt. Karlaw, "the attacks became more furious, ferocious and fateful than ever.

"So the white flag went up."

Battleships Burning.

Che Foo, Jan. 3.—Advices reaching Che Foo say that the Russian battleships Retvizan and Poltava and the protected cruiser Pallada caught fire Monday morning and are still burning and that in the afternoon the Russians blew up the battleship Sevastopol.

Report From Stoessel.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 3.—General Stoessel in a despatch to Emperor Nicholas, confirms the previous reports that Major-General Kondrachenko (commander of the Seventh East Siberian Rifle Brigade), was killed Dec. 15. In addition to confirming the reports of the death of General Kondrachenko, General Stoessel in the despatches filed at Che Foo yesterday, also reported the deaths of Major-General Fock (commander of the Fourth East Siberian Rifle Brigade), and, Lieut.-General Smirnoff (commander of the Port Arthur fortress).

Will Disarm Russian Destroyers.

Che Foo, Jan. 3.—The Japanese protected cruiser Akitsushima and the torpedo boat destroyers Asashio, Yugiri and Shirakumo were guarding the harbor last night. It is now believed that there will be no trouble as the Russians are seemingly sincere in the disarmament of their destroyers.

Besides the vessels mentioned, it was learned later in the day, the torpedo boat destroyers Smirni and Bolki, and a transport [illegible] Arthur Sunday night, the latter carrying 800 wounded soldiers, and according to the despatch from Taingtau, succeeded in reaching that port. The destroyers, the transport and the launch crept out of the harbor between 10 and 11 o'clock Sunday night without encountering the Japanese.

It was determined to disarm the four destroyers, which lashed themselves together. In the absence of a Chinese warship the commissioner of customs took charge of the Russian craft. The latter ordered the crews of the torpedo boat destroyers and a number of invalid Russian soldiers who were on board of them to go to the Chinese forts, where quarters for them were available. Last night the customs men detailed from the guardship were preventing foreigners from going on board the Russian vessels.

Recall Rejestvensky.

London, Jan. 3.—Baron Suyematsu, son-in-law of Marquis Ito, and formerly Japanese Minister of the Interior, said: "Now that we have again got Port Arthur we will not allow any other power to hold it after we have beaten Russia, and I am now more than ever confident that Japan will be victorious. I do not expect the fall of Port Arthur will make much difference with the progress of the war, though Japan will undoubtedly be in a better position."

In British naval circles the prevailing opinion is that the recall of the Russian second Pacific squadron has now become an absolute necessity.

A special meeting of the Men's Guild is called for to-night at eight o'clock at the Club Room, 127 Hunter street.

The annual Christmas entertainment and distribution of prizes of St. Luke's Sunday School will take place on Thursday at 3 o'clock. Tea will be served to the children only at 5.45.

THE PROVINCIAL CONTEST.

These be the days of the marking of many editorials. The Liberal press is doing its share but the Conservative press is prolific beyond measure. Yet one may read these columns upon columns in vain if he be seeking to find out what Mr. Whitney and his colleagues propose to do. All he will find is a "knock," "knock," "knocking" against the Ross Government. If not satisfied with the editorials, he reads the speeches of Mr. Whitney and his followers—reverend and otherwise—he will find only the same "knocking." In short the Conservatives hope to come to power by a persistent "knocking" in season and out of season at the Ross Government.

This "knocking" game is not a new one. A couple of months ago in the United States the Democrats tried it. Judge Parker, the Democratic nominee for President had very little to say about what he proposed to do—but he had a great deal of "knocking" at the Republicans. The result was that President Roosevelt was returned to power with a plurality more than double that ever received by any other President. About the same time the Conservative party in the Dominion tried this game. Those who heard Mr. Borden speak here must have realized that he said mighty little about what he would do, that he spent practically the whole of his speech "knocking" the Laurier Government. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was returned to power with as complete a victory as that of President Roosevelt.

Now the Conservatives of Ontario are playing the same game. They will find to their deep chagrin and keen disappointment that in no game, least of all in politics, is the victory won by "knocking" the other fellow. The people of Ontario are level headed enough to vote for the Government that does things, not for a would-be one that only "knocks."

SCHOOL CLOSING AT FRASERVILLE

Miss B. Fair Presented with Manicure and Toilet Silk.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Fraserville, Dec. 23rd.—Before the close of school on Thursday, Dec. 22nd, quite a number of the parents and friends came to the school. A short but pleasing programme was given by the pupils and just before the close, they presented their teacher Miss B. Fair, with a nice manicure and toilet set, accompanied by the following address:—

Miss B. Fair,

Dear Teacher,—We, the pupils of Fraserville school, feel that this, your last day of teaching here, should not be allowed to pass without expressing our regret.

It is with sorrowful hearts we bid you good-bye, for in your departure, we all realize we are losing a true and sympathetic friend, a kind and ever obliging teacher.

During the three years you have been with us, you have, by your cheerful manner and natural kindness of disposition won for you a place in our hearts which will be hard indeed, to fill.

In all matters that have pertained to the advancement and benefit of us as pupils, you have ever been found in the forward ranks of those most active in securing the needed help.

Not that we can ever repay you for what you have done, not that we wish to lessen our debt of gratitude towards you, but as a slight token of the respect and esteem in which you are held by friends and pupils, we ask you to accept these presents.

While we all regret very much your departure, still we are not selfish enough to wish to stand in the way, or in any way hinder you in the course you deem to do best; and we know that our loss will be your gain.

With these few words we hope that you may be long spared, and we wish you God speed, also a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Signed on behalf of the school,

SOPHIA MONCRIEF,
CHARLIE HOGG,
MAGGIE WHITFIELD.

Miss Fair made a suitable reply thanking the pupils for the nice presents and kind address.

SILVER LAKE.

On Thursday evening, Dec. 22nd, the closing exercises of School Section No. 1, Galway and Sommerville, took place. The parents, friends and pupils of the school were present, in goodly numbers, and the entertainment was enjoyed by all.

Hon. Mr. Stratton had sent each child attending school "A Christmas Box," and the children's delight and surprise cannot be expressed in words. Pupils, parents and teacher all join in thanking Mr. Stratton for his encouraging gifts to the children.

Valorous, But Discreet.

Belgrade, Dec. 27.—The newspaper Oppositia came out yesterday with an editorial vigorously demanding that the regicides of King Alexander and Queen Draga be executed, as were the murderers of Prince Michael in 1868. The paper was promptly confiscated. Its editor writes articles from the safe vantage point of Zemlin, Hungary.

Always Remember the Full Name

GOOD MEETING IN THE NORTH.

R. F. McWilliams Campaign Progressing Favourably.

Harvey Electors Hear the Record of the Government—The Speakers

Mr. R. F. McWilliams, the Liberal candidate in West Peterborough, returned on Friday night from a trip through Harvey township, where he held a most successful series of meetings. Four meetings in all were held. Those on Thursday were in North Harvey, the afternoon meeting being in Simpson's school house, on the Galway road, and the evening one at Nogie's Creek. The inability of Hon. J. R. Stratton to be present was a great disappointment; and much regret was expressed at the news of his illness. His place was very ably taken at these meetings by Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, K. C., of Lindsay, well known as one of the ablest and most convincing speakers of the district.

The afternoon meeting was presided over by Mr. Alex. Irwin, and the evening one by Mr. W. C. Moore, and both were, under the condition of the weather and the roads, exceedingly well attended.

Mr. McWilliams devoted his attention to the more personal parts of the campaign, to those questions on which the individual views of the candidates are of more particular importance. He dealt frankly and fully with the charges of corruption made against the Government and the Liberal party, and gave expression in unqualified terms to his own strong condemnation of such practices, no matter by whom done. It is of first importance to the success of our democratic institutions that there should be an absolutely fair field for all parties; that there should be an honest count of ballots; and an honest, unbiassed voting by those properly entitled to vote. While he had no excuse for the wrong doing done on the Liberal side, he had also none for that on the Conservative side, and he showed the hypocrisy of Conservative newspapers and speakers in making loud charges against the Government and ignoring the equal wrong-doing on their own side.

Mr. McWilliams submitted that the question before the electors in this contest was whether the Ross Government, had, during the past five years, continued the splendid record of Sir Oliver Mowat, and shown themselves equal to the needs of this growing time. If they have, then there should be no question about their being returned to power by a substantial majority. If they have not, it is for the Opposition to show it, and to show their own fitness for the place. The honesty and efficiency of the administration of the business of the province, is a matter of dollars and cents to every elector and taxpayer, just as truly as the administration of township or county business; and the manner in which the revenue of this province has been collected, and the expenditures made, has meant a saving of thousands of dollars in taxes to every municipality in the province.

Upon the temperance question, Mr. McWilliams stated his position clearly and frankly and without regard to the particular opinions which might prevail in any section of the riding. As himself a total abstainer and using his influence at all times in that direction, he was naturally favourable to all measures of temperance reform, and would be prepared to support all such measures as had a reasonable guarantee that they would be effectively enforced. He believed in having in this matter, and in all others, a policy of progressive reform, and he outlined the course of improvement there had been under Liberal Administration in this province and the policy of continued reform now laid down by the Government and the Liberal party.

The policy of the Liberal party, when brought into effect, would mean an end to the evils of intemperance in those parts of the country where licenses do not now exist, and the amendments to the Local Option Act would give the people of each municipality a free hand to do as they thought best. Proposals to stiffen the penalties upon those who disregard the law would be a salutary measure in the interests, not only of the temperance people, but equally of the better class of license holders, who did have regard to the law and to the conditions on which the licenses were granted.

In conclusion Mr. McWilliams asked for the votes and the hearty support of the electors of the township, and promised, if elected, that he would aim to emulate the splendid service given to the riding by their late representative.

Mr. McLaughlin's addresses carried great weight by reason of the clearness of logic and the practical wisdom which characterized them. As an outsider he could speak to the people of the riding in a way that no resident could, and could tell them of the view which persons outside of West Peterborough were taking of the contest here.

In Mr. McWilliams the electors of this riding had obviously a candidate of whom at least two things could be said: that he was a young man of marked ability, who would be heard from in the Legislative Assembly, and that he was a gentleman in every way in the conduct of his campaign. It was a pleasure to turn from a campaign of personal abuse, such as he had recently been engaged in, to one conducted in the manner this was being carried on by Mr. McWilliams. He had known their candidate from his boyhood, and had watched his career as a student and his rise in public life, and he felt satisfied that if they elected him to the Legislature, the standing and influence which this riding had gained in the country by reason of the ability of the late representative would be maintained. It was the part of practical wisdom to send to the Legislature, as they had done 20 years ago, a young man of ability, energy and ambition, who, in making his own mark, would be rendering the best possible service to his constituency. Upon the issues of the day they had to choose between a Government which had given this them a single important item of public policy and whose whole campaign was one of slander against the Government. There is not a riding or even a township in this province but has had good reason to feel satisfied with the manner in which the interests of the province have been cared for and the local municipalities assisted by the Liberal Administration and no township has had better cause to be well satisfied than Harvey. He did not believe the people of this province were prepared to entrust the management of their immensely important affairs to a set of men who had shown themselves incapable of even framing a policy upon questions of public importance upon which to ask the suffrages of the electors while with all carping criticism which characterized them, they had not ventured even to question as much as one per cent. of the expenditure made by the Government.

The electors of West Peterborough should realise the obligation which lay on them to show their approval of the work that had been done in their riding by the Liberal Government and the importance of giving their verdict by giving to Mr. McWilliams the same majority they had given to Mr. Stratton.

AT TAYLOR'S SCHOOL HOUSE.

The Friday afternoon meeting at Taylor's school house on the Buckhorn Road was very well attended and Mr. McWilliams took the opportunity to have a full and open discussion with the electors present of the issues both local and general involved in this campaign. The chair was taken by Mr. John Spence and the township of Cavandish as well as that of Harvey was well represented in the meeting. There is every reason to believe that election day will show as substantial a majority for Mr. McWilliams in East Harvey as in previous elections it has shown for the Liberal candidate.

AT LAKEHURST.

The townhall at Lakehurst was crowded in every part to hear the speeches delivered there last night by the candidate and Mr. Daniel O'Connell. The meeting was presided over by Mr. John Smith and was enlivened by occasional speeches by the veteran of the hide-bound Conservatives which served mainly to make the meeting more interesting and more successful. Mr. McWilliams spoke upon similar lines to those upon which he had spoken in North Harvey impressing particularly on the electors the importance to every ratepayer of an honest, efficient administration of the business of the province and the confidence with which he appealed to them in support of a Government whose administrative record was so clear that the opposition had not even questioned the equivalent of the expenditure of one day in a year.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell made his first speech in Harvey and most favourably impressed his audience with the clearness and grace with which he discussed the issues of the day.

He pointed out that the riding had practically the same choice to make in this election as it had had 18 years before for it was again a choice between a man past the prime of life and one just entering into the years when he could be of most service to the constituency and when he had in the highest degree the energy and ambition which was the strongest spur to constant and successful work on behalf of the constituency. Mr. McWilliams was a young man of marked ability, of broad education who had been trained in the study of politics and was particularly fitted for the sphere of public life into which he had now entered.

It was important that the electors should realise the real greatness of the affairs with which the Provincial Legislature has to deal, and as to the direction of which they were now called upon to decide. It is the Province which makes and administers almost all the laws under which we live and hold our property, which creates and directs our whole system of municipal government, which guides and supports our educational system, which is the pride of the province, and which takes under its care the thousands who have been afflicted by one or other of the forms of physical or mental infirmity. Every one of these services would have had to have been met by the local municipalities and paid for by direct taxation had they not been undertaken by the province, and thus the people had gained without taxation all the advantage of the services to a degree that would have been impossible had they been left to the care of the separate municipalities.

The Government had by its honesty and far-sighted administration of natural resources of the province, especially of our forest wealth, and by imposing upon the wealthy corporations of special taxes gathered in for the use of the province an annual revenue which now amounts with other income to more than $4,000,000 per year and in the period of the Liberal administration to $123,000,000. Of this total more than three-quarters has been directly returned to the people of the province in aid or in place of what in other provinces is done by the municipalities done at all.

In the administration of justice, in the maintainance of asylums and charities, in aid to education, and to agriculture and in opening out of new parts of the country by railways and colonization roads the Liberal Governments have spent over $90,000,000 and this county like every other county had abundant evidence of the value and wisdom of this policy. Vast as are these sums of money, they have been handled by the Governments, have been passed item by item through the House, and again item by item through the Public Accounts Committee and not one per cent. of all these expenditures has even been questioned by that violent Opposition which would now have us believe that the Government was the worst set of boodlers ever known in this country.

The people of this riding and of the province should realise the sacred duty that lays upon them of seriously and earnestly considering the questions now before them for decision. He felt satisfied that if they did give them the careful consideration which their importance demanded and laid aside party predilections they would on the 25th of January give a hearty, handsome verdict for the Government and for the candidate who stood in support of that Government.

MOUNT PLEASANT LOSES TEACHER

Mr. A. Mills, Public School Teacher, Goes to Reaboro—Other News.

Mount Pleasant, Dec. 28th.—Mrs. John McLean, a former resident of this place, is now spending some time with her relatives here, recruiting her health, after spending a long sister of Peterborough, were visiting their mother and other friends in the village.

Mrs. Mark Shield of Dakota, in response to the wish of her brother, Mr. Walter Graham, who has been ill for some time past, has arrived at the parental home of Mr. W. S. Graham in the township of Emily.

Mr. A. Mills, public school teacher, who has been here for about eight years, and who has been a very successful teacher, has been compelled to leave this section on account of the very low salary offered him by the trustees, viz., the sum of $350.00 for one year's service. It is impossible for any teacher to keep a wife and family on such a salary. Some effort should be made to protect qualified teachers, so as to have good teachers paid a salary sufficient to keep body and soul together. It should not be expected that they can work for nothing and board themselves. It takes many years of hard labour to prepare for teaching and surely some adequate recompense should be made to them for the time and money spent in acquiring that knowledge necessary to obtain a certificate. In the removal of Mr. and Mrs. Mills we lose good citizens. Mrs. Mills' voice in the Presbyterian church choir will be missed. She was ready and willing to help in the choir when it was possible for her to do so. Our best wishes go with them to their new home in Reaboro.

TO FIND HUSBANDS.

Some Quaint Customs Among the Young Women of Russia.

Russian girls frequently amuse themselves by attempting to discover what sort of husbands will eventually lead them to the altar. A favorite manner of doing this is by so-called divination.

The girl who is tired of a single life sits in the mystic hours of the night between two large mirrors. On each side she places a candle and then eagerly watches until she can see twelve reflected lights. If the fates are propitious she ought also to discern the husband she desires portrayed in the glass before her.

Another method of divination is to have supper laid for two. If the young lady is in luck the apparition of the future husband will come and sit down beside her, but in order to secure success the girl must not divulge to any one her intention of thus attempting to dive into futurity.

There is a story told to the effect that the daughter of a rich farmer was in love with a young lieutenant, and he, suspecting that she would probably have supper laid for two, climbed the wall of the garden and, sitting down by her side, partook of the prepared banquet, the girl being under the impression that it was his apparition and not the real simon pure.

On leaving the room the officer forgot his sword, which he had unbuckled before he sat down to supper. The girl, finding the weapon after his departure, hid it in the cupboard as a memento of the visitor.

Eventually she married another suitor, and he, fancying that there was some rival who supplanted him in his wife's affection and one day discovering the sword, was confirmed in his suspicions and killed her in a fit of passion.

Sometimes the inquisitive husband seeker will take a candle, and, melting the wax, pour it on the snow, after which she strives to discern in the hardened substance the likeness of him she seeks.

A very favorite amusement when several girls are congregated under the same roof is to divine by the aid of a cock. Each girl, taking some corn, makes a small heap on the floor and there conceals a ring. The chanticleer is then introduced and is let loose beside the corn. Presently he begins to peck at the heaps of grain. At last one of the rings is exposed to view, when its owner, according to the popular belief, will outstrip her companions in the race for matrimony.—Cassell's Journal.

Will Command Home Fleet.

Vice-Admiral Sir Arthur Knyvet Wilson, who continues to command the Home Fleet, was born in the same year as Admiral Domville—seven months earlier—and joined the navy a year before him. He fought the Russians in the Crimea while a midshipman of the Algiers, and a year later was taking part in the Chinese war, landing with the naval brigade in the attack on Canton. His hardest fighting, however, was in

SIR A. K. WILSON.

Egypt in 1882, and in the Soudan in 1884. It was in the Soudan at the battle of El Teb that Sir Arthur Wilson won his Victoria Cross for an act which General Buller has described as one of the most courageous that he has ever witnessed. There was a gap in the square, and five or six of the enemy, seeing it, rushed forward, attempting to pierce the ranks. Then Captain Wilson advanced to meet them alone, and, breaking his sword in his effort to cut one of them down, would not retire a step, but held his ground, knocking them down with his fists. As the result, perhaps, of the surprising nature of his attack, he escaped with a few wounds, and the square, closing up, rescued him. For this he was not only mentioned in despatches and received the V.C., but was also presented with a sword by the torpedo officers of the Vernon in admiration of his gallantry at the battle of El Teb. Sir Arthur Wilson was created K.C.B. in 1902 and K. C.V.O. last year.

Choice of Municipal Electors for Mayors in Ontario.

MANY BYLAWS VOTED ON

Exhibition and $700 Exemption Bylaws Carried in Toronto—Perth Defeats Free Library and Carnegie Bylaws—Guelph Will Extend Street Railway and St. Thomas Votes For Municipal Gas.

Toronto, Jan. 3.—The municipal elections held throughout the Province yesterday resulted in many public improvements receiving the endorsation of the ratepayers in many town and cities. The spirit of public ownership shows signs of vigorous growth in several instances. St. Thomas, among the cities, takes a progressive stand for it has decided to take in the gas plant owned by a private corporation, and run it as a civic enterprise.

In Toronto the exhibition bylaw, the fire protection bylaw and the $700 exemption bylaw were carried by large majorities.

At St. Mary's a bylaw to guarantee the bonds of the St. Mary's Quarry Co. for $80,000 was defeated.

At Guelph the bylaw for $30,000 to extend and improve the street railway and buy a park carried. The bylaw for $28,000 to enlarge the Collegiate Institute was defeated. The bylaw for $7,000 to put in a new filter and improve the waterworks carried.

At Lindsay the bylaw to raise $20,000 to instal a water filtering plant was defeated 504 to 105, in favor of the alternative plan of sinking artesian wells.

Carnegie Bumped.

At Perth the bylaw for a free library was defeated by 9 majority. The Carnegie library bylaw was defeated by 43 majority.

At Seaforth a bylaw to loan the Canada Furniture Manufactory $20,000 for 20 years carried.

At the Village of Caledonia the bylaw to bonus a canning factory was defeated.

At Tilsonburg the bylaw to bonus the Wind Motor Co. was carried.

At Thorold the waterworks bylaw was carried.

At Picton a bylaw to exempt the Picton Business College from taxation for 10 years was carried.

At Kincardine bylaws for a free library and for the extension of the high school were carried.

Cornwall Goes Ahead.

At Cornwall two bylaws were carried. One was to grant $8,000 for high school improvements and the other $5,000 for waterworks extensions.

At Berlin the ratepayers carried a bylaw to raise $65,000 to pay certain damage claims and to extend the sewage disposal plant.

At Chatham a bylaw to aid the Defiance Iron Works carried, as did also a bylaw to build a new market building to cost $41,000.

At Stratford bylaws to provide $50,000 for waterworks, $700 for sewage disposal and $3,000 for a mortuary chapel carried.

Ottawa's Movement.

At Ottawa the street railway bylaw was defeated.

At Petrolea the bylaw to establish a gas plant was defeated.

Belleville a bylaw to borrow $,000 to improve the waterworks carried.

At St. Thomas the bylaw for the city to purchase the gas plant was carried.

Local option played no inconsiderable part in the elections in at least five municipalities. Local option bylaws carried in Clarke township, Durham County; in Hullett township, Huron County, and Smith township, Peterboro County. Clinton defeated the local option bylaw and the town elections in Blenheim were run on a local option basis, resulting in the defeat of the temperance candidates all along the line.

A Mine Worth Finding.

A romance of Ontario's new mining district in the Temiskaming region was revealed in a statement made recently by Mr. T. W. Gibson, Director of the Bureau of Mines. The owners of the silver mines near Haileybury, he said, were beginning to get returns from their work. They recently shipped four carloads of ore to New York, and the prices realized were satisfactory. One carload of silver cobalt ore shipped by Mr. W. G. Trethewey, consisting of about 20 tons, realized $87,500, or about one dollar a pound. Mr. Trethewey, who found the vein from which this ore was taken in June last, has been recouped five times over for his outlay upon the mine, and reports that there is nearly a quarter of million dollars' worth of ore in sight, and probably a good deal more. He had only prospected in the district for two days when he struck the mine, having gone up to "try his luck," as he expressed it, after having seen the samples of New Ontario ores in the month mentioned in the Bureau of Mines office.

SAVED SKATING COMRADE

Miss Gray, However, Had a Terrible Experience in Burlington Bay After Her Companion Had Gone to His Watery Grave—Walter Fillman Exhausted in Finishing Fletcher's Good Work.

Hamilton, Jan. 3.—Thomas Arthur Fletcher, 161 Elgin street, a clerk in Balfour & Co.'s office, gave his life Saturday to save his companion, Miss Jessie Gray, 16 South Wellington street, a bookkeeper, employed by the Wright Hat Company. They started out in the afternoon to skate across the bay to the Brant House. About a mile from the hotel they skated on a piece of rotten ice and both went through. Fletcher helped Miss Gray out and then sank, never coming to the surface again until his body was recovered at noon on New Year's day.

Miss Gray had a terrible experience before she got to the shore. She fell into another hole while trying to make her way to the shore. Walter Filman, who saw the mishap, ran from the shore, and after great difficulty rescued her. Both were so exhausted that they became unconscious, and had to be helped to land by Filman's father.

Fletcher was a color-sergeant in F Co., 13th Regiment, and president of the Sergeants' Mess. He was 22 years of age. P. C. Walsh and Hilliard Walsh of the fire department are half brothers. He will be buried with military honors to-morrow.

Killed By a Train.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 3.—Louis Pacaud of St. Henri, who went to River Beaudette to pay a New Year's visit to his daughter, was killed by being run over by a Grand Trunk train.

Kills His Brother.

Marmora, Jan. 3.—Saturday afternoon two brothers named Duvall were out hunting. The elder brother walked ahead with a rifle on his shoulder full cocked. It struck against the limb of a tree and was discharged. The bullet struck the younger brother in the forehead killing him instantly.

G.T.R. Cleaner Killed.

Niagara Falls, Jan. 3.—William Pippard, a G.T.R. cleaner, was instantly killed Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, his head being crushed between the vestibule of two passenger coaches that were being pulled out of the steam track.

Donald McTaggart Takes His Life.

Toronto, Jan. 3.—Almost at the completion of a trip for his health and seemingly cured of the nervous disease which afflicted him, Donald McTaggart of London, committed suicide by poisoning Saturday evening. A fit of melancholy, as a result of nervous prostration, is given as a reason for the deed. Mr. McTaggart is a man of about 50 years of age and is widely known and well related in London. He took carbolic acid at 185 Jarvis street in this city, during the absence of his son.

Mr. Fielding in Rome.

Rome, Jan. 3.—Canadian Finance Minister Fielding assisted yesterday at the beautification in St. Peter's, and was impressed by the Pope's presence in the procession. Mr. Fielding leaves Rome shortly for Vienna, whence he will go to London. He expects to be back in Canada this month.

Animals That Never Die.

At the very bottom of the scale of nature lies a vast class of organisms so simple in form that naturalists hesitate whether the vegetable or the animal kingdom has the more right to number them among its subjects. These animals may be said never to die. Their constitution is so simple and so easily adaptable that they never suffer from disease, and the laws of their being forbid them to grow old. Sexless, they propagate themselves by fission, separating into two or more segments, each of which is perfectly alive and independent.

A Bee's Sting.

The sting is a bee's only weapon. It is not the single spear that it appears to the naked eye, but consists of three prongs, each beautifully grooved into the others, thus forming a sort of tube, through which flows the poison from the sac, to which the sting is attached. As soon as the point of the sting enters the flesh two of the prongs, which are barbed, begin to work forward alternately. When one has been thrust forward its barbs catch in the flesh and hold while the other is being thrust forward, and this motion, which also pumps the poison from the poison sac, is continued until the sting has penetrated to its full length. The sting, accompanied by its appendages, is almost invariably torn from the bee and remains in the flesh of the unfortunate victim—unfortunate bee, too, as the loss of its sting is eventually followed by death. Hence it can be said that a bee literally defends its home with its life.

To Control Earthquakes.

Earthquakes are ugly events to think about, even though they rarely make a call in this country, and it is pleasing to know that somebody is working out a plan to prevent them. The theory is that earthquakes are due to violent subterranean electric storms and that the range and force of the storms might be lessened by a system of conductors that would facilitate the movement of the more powerful electrical current and prevent violent explosions. In view of the wonders of wireless telegraphy above ground this suggestion appears reasonable.

REASON No 3

WHY YOU SHOULD USE

Red Rose Tea

Because of its Flavor.

Why do you buy certain varieties of fruit and vegetables? Is it not because you like the flavor of some better than others?

Flavor is the special quality which stamps one brand of food product as superior to another, and is the quality that always commands the highest price.

The delicate, fragrant flavor of Red Rose Tea is the result of scientific study and methods on the tea plantations, and in the tea testing and blending rooms.

It has what might be called a fruity taste—a rich, ripe flavor that is very pleasing to the palate—a taste you won't forget.

The Blue Label is recommended.

THE TOWN'S MUNICIPAL LEGISLATURE FOR 1905

How Nineteen Candidates Divided the Popular Vote on Monday.

SIX OLD AND SIX NEW MEMBERS

The People Took Kindly to all the By-laws—Carried by Substantial Majorities.

The net results of the elections yesterday was that six of the seven members of last year's council who presented themselves for endorsation, were re-elected by good majorities and that six new members, three of these the endorsed representatives of the Trades and Labour council, were also elected.

An entirely new man, Mr. Tovey, divided with Alderman Batten the honour of heading the poll.

The whole three by-laws submitted were carried. The fifth ward was the only ward to "turn down" the waterworks by-law.

The Municipal Council of the Town of Peterborough will be composed as follows, given in order of their numerical standing of the several at the polls:—

Mayor—Henry Best, by acclamation.

Aldermen—G. J. Tovey, 966; Jos. Batten (re-elected) 966; Frank Adams (re-elected) 908; E. F. Mason (re-elected) 793; Robt. Hicks (re-elected) 778; W. J. Johnston (re-elected) 768; Adam Hall, 750; W. Scott (re-elected) 745; R. H. Leary, 687; Jos. Crowe, 616; A. McIntyre, 615; Thos. J. Begley, 609.

The feature of the Council for 1905 is that six of the members are entirely new, all of them with the exception of Mr. Hall, without previous experience in municipal affairs; and another noticeable feature is that of the new council there are only two members who have had more than one year's continuous service in the Town Council. It is to be also noted that the three labour candidates, that is, those endorsed by the Trades and Labour Council—Messrs. Begley, Crowe and Johnson, are among the elected. A scrutiny of the figures also shows that in regard to the old members elected the popular favour must have been pretty evenly bunched. Taken in the order of numerical strength, they follow almost in unbroken succession from Mr. Batten to Mr. Scott, the only break in this continuity being the figures of Mr. Adam Hall who from previous experience in the council may reasonably be considered an old member. Mr. G. J. Tovey devides with Mr. Batten the honour of heading the poll, thus entering public municipal life under very encouraging auspices, a condition that will put him upon his mettle to justify the confidence the electors have reposed in him.

The weather conditions were perfect yesterday and there seemed to be a great deal of interest in the elections. The day being a holiday it would have been thought a very large vote would be polled, yet the vote fell short of the vote of last year, the highest vote polled yesterday being 117 short of the highest polled last year, and the lowest vote polled necessary to elect a candidate, was 63 short of the corresponding vote last year.

It is hoped that the new Council will enter upon the harmonious discharge of their duties with a full sense of the greater responsibility that comes upon every successive Council in view of the yearly growing importance and advance of the town.

A CORRECTION.

Mr. J. Succee of Bridgenorth, Objects to, Being Misrepresented.

Mr. Joseph Succee, of Bridgenorth, called at the Examiner office to-day to ask a correction of a statement made in the Examiner on Saturday in reference to statements made by Mr. Wm. Irwin in reference to Mr. L. Fobert's interest in the Chemong Park Hotel property. Mr. Succee admits that, as Mr. Irwin states, he read the agreement mentioned, but he denies that he undertook or made any agreement to "see the different clergymen, to ask them to state in the pulpits to-morrow the facts of the case." The Examiner willingly gives space to Mr. Succee's explanation of his position. He certainly is entitled to protest against what he asserts is misrepresentation.

TWO "NEW YEARS" CONTRASTED

Way Below Zero Weather This Day Last Year.

As a contrast to the mild weather we have had lately, it is worthy of note that a year ago this day we were shivering with the thermometer 22 degress below zero. In case some may have forgotten the severe cold of last winter, we give the figures for the first few days of the year of 1904, as a sample of the conditions that prevailed during the winter:—Jan. 1st, 2 below; 2nd, 10 below; 3rd, 22 below; 4th, 22 below; 5th, 28 below; 6th, 5 below. During Jan. we had 19 days with temperature below zero. On the 19th of the month it was 30 degrees below, the coldest day of the winter, and in fact for many years.

ACCIDENT ON G.T.R. NEAR MILLBROOK

Axle of Tender Broke and Delay was Caused Yesterday Afternoon.

An accident occurred on the Grand Trunk line about two miles north of Millbrook yesterday afternoon. The train due to arrive in Peterborough at 5.40 had left Millbrook and while moving along at a fair rate of speed the head axle on the tender broke, placing the engine in a helpless condition. Word was telegraphed to Lindsay and an engine was despatched to the scene of the accident and the passenger cars were taken around to Omemee and the passengers reached Peterborough on the regular 9 o'clock Lindsay train.

The Belleville train was sent back to Fraserville to convey the passengers from that place to Peterborough and the Lakefield train was sent to Lindsay where another train was made up and dispatched to Toronto so that no connections were lost.

The auxiliary train from Lindsay was on the scene of the accident shortly after 9 o'clock and the track was soon cleared.

ENTERTAINMENT A GREAT SUCCESS

In Connection With Mark St. Sunday School Last Evening.

Christmas Tree and Fine Programme —Address and Presentation to Miss Speer.

The annual Christmas tea and intertainment in connection with Mark Street Sunday School was held in the town hall, Ward 5, Thursday evening and proved quite interesting and successful. There was a good attendance and all seemed well pleased with the evening's entertainment. The little folks were much in evidence, the aim being to give them as good a time as possible, and they apparently appreciated their opportunity.

A tree nicely laden with gifts was on one end of the platform, and its fruit was distributed by Santa Claus and his assistants at the close of the programme, after which each child of the school received a bag of candies and nuts.

During the evening prizes donated by Mrs. (Rev.) Campbell and by Mr. W. C. Harnett were given to the boys and girls who had brought out the largest number of new pupils.

Amongst the girls Miss Maggie Record was first and Misses Nora Davey and Violet Jewell were equal for second place. For the boys, Hunter Lewis was first and Bertie Cook stood second. The presentation was made by Mr. Harnett as the successful pupils came forward.

Prizes were given by the school to the members who had been most regular in attendance during the year. Three had been present 51 Sundays out of the 52, and each received a handsome book. The recipients were, Mrs. R. Record, Pearl Britbin and Cecil White.

A pleasing feature was the presentation of a handsome hand satchel and purse accompanied by an address to Miss Mary Speer, organist of the school. The address was read by the secretary-treasurer, Mr. O. S. Matchett, and the presentation was made by Miss Lillie Chrowe, Miss Speer replied suitably, expressing her thanks. A copy of the address appears below.

The chair was occupied by the Superintendent, Mr. M. W. Matchett, and the programme was as follows:—

Hymn, All Hail the Power of Jesus' name.
Prayer, ...Rev. J. G. Lewis, B. A.
Chairman's address.
Chorus .... Shepherds Awake
Recitation ....Clarence Miller
Recitation ... ...Dewart Lewis
Recitation ....Burton Lewis
Song, ...Georgie Long
The Lambs of the Flocks, ...Mrs. (Rev.) Lewis' class.
Recitation, ...Harry Smith
Song, "Fridays of His Birth" Miss Speer's class.
Recitation ....Myrtle Mealey
Reading .... Nora Davey
Rainbow drill.
Presentation of prizes.
Recitation ....., ...Hunter Lewis
Chorus ... ... Through the Starlit Air
Doll drill.
Recitation, ...Ada Norris
Christmas carol, solo part by Miss Courtney.
Recitation, ... Miss Barrie
Chorus, ...Ring Out the Tidings
Distribution of gifts.

The music was new, appropriate and brightly rendered. The recitations were without exception well rendered. In the infant class exercises the tiny tots went through the recitations and motion songs in a way to do credit to their teachers.

The doll drill by a class of little girls was very pretty, and both songs and recitations were executed to the delight of all.

The Rainbow drill by sixteen young ladies was perhaps the crowning feature of the evening. The beautiful colour scheme and the perfect time and graceful motions of the performers, culminating in a striking tableau, made an impression not to be easily forgotten.

The address to Miss Speer was as follows:—

Peterborough, Dec. 29, 1904.

Miss Mary Speer,
Organist Mark Street Sunday School.

Dear Miss Speer,—We have gathered here to-night for our annual Christmas entertainment and cannot let this occasion pass without expressing to you as our organist the deep feeling of love which we cherish for you.

Your regularity in attendance from Sabbath to Sabbath, has been a noble example to all. But crowning all is the sweet sisterly love, the utter forgetfulness of self, which has characterised you in all your relations with church and Sunday School work, and proven to all who witnessed your life that you have so fully consecrated to Him will be crowned with the blessings of God.

In closing we would ask that you accept this gift as a slight token of the high esteem in which you are held by us.

Signed on behalf of the school,
M. W. MATCHETT,
Superintendent.
O. S. MATCHETT,
Secretary-Treasurer.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

A Daring Act of Spoil on Hunter Street This Morning.

If the new council elected yesterday do their duty, we shall hold our property more securely. This morning, shortly after nine o'clock, a daring highway robbery was committed on Hunter street, within a hundred yards of George street. A huge dog, which seemed to have in him many mingled strains of blood, and very little butchers' meat, in passing Bell's grocery store, No. 161 Hunter street, espied a salted codfish, about two feet in length, exposed in the doorway. He seized the fish by the waist, so to speak, and the door of the shop opening at the same moment, the canine made a hasty retreat with his spoil, and paid not the slightest attention to the calls of the shop salesman, but sailed up Hunter street, with the codfish projecting from each side of his jaws like the scythes on the axles of an ancient war chariot, and disappeared in the vacant lot west of Bellegheem's furniture warerooms. The salesman remarked that it was a cash—c.o.d.—transaction, though there wasn't much money in it, except for the cur.

TEACHER GIVEN A CARVING SET

Mr. S. R. Armstrong's Sunday School Class Honours Him.

On Saturday afternoon the members of Mr. S. R. Armstrong's Bible class in the George street Methodist Sunday School, presented him with a valuable stag horn handled carving set of five pieces. Mr. Armstrong's popularity among the members of his large class was given evidence to on Sunday when there was a very large attendance, and the expression of appreciation of his services were many. The presentation was made by a member of the class on behalf of the latter, and Mr. Armstrong acknowledged the gift in a few words, in which he spoke of the pleasure his association with the class had given him.

ADDRESS WAS MUCH ENJOYED

Rev. Father Kelly Spoke on "Dream of Equality"

At Opera House Last Evening to a Fair Sized Audience—A Good Speaker.

Rev. Father Kelly of the American Lyceum Union, lectured before a large audience in the opera house last evening, in aid of St. Joseph's Hospital and the House of Providence. The reverend gentleman more than delighted his audience with his masterly address on "The Dream of Equality." He is a speaker of magnetism and power, with a pleasing manner, and a thorough command of language. His descriptive powers were remarkable, and he held the rapt attention of his audience for two hours on his subject, which was one of much interest. Rev. Father Kelly will be welcomed back to Peterborough at any time.

The chairman of the evening was Mr. L. M. Hayes, who introduced the speaker. Previous to the address Mr. R. N. Jolliffe sang "My Bonny Barque," and as an encore gave "Good Night, Little Girl." Miss Ruth Dawson was in splendid voice, and sang, "Magnetic Waltz," in a manner eliciting hearty applause. For an encore, she sang "In May."

The speaker in opening his remarks went back to the conditions prevailing in the nations in ancient years, and giving the nature of the dream of equality of conditions, which was the dream in former years, and there were many causes for that dream. It was the dream of a certain group, and though these had been distributed as time went on, there had, nevertheless, been an effect produced.

The answer to a question of whether there was such a thing as a law of equality, or whether it was only a dream, was found in two big fights under two great leaders — the King and the revolutionists. These leaders were different in many ways but they both in different ways tried to do the same thing.

The speaker went on to point out the difference between anarchists of theory and anarchists of practice. The former declares that the millennium is here, and he paints a Heaven on earth. The anarchist of practice is not a blood-thirsty man, he does not kill because he loves to do so, but performs his murderous acts simply to draw attention to his theories and anarchy will be studied when it is drawn attention to and when it is studied it will gain many converts. There is no theory, however damnable but what will have some followers.

The modern theory of the dream of equality was well known. The educational institutions were slowly but surely working out the problem and as instruction grows, the dream will become better known. Education was spreading and in face of this it will show that we are nearer the equality of condition. We were no nearer the realization of the dream of equality, and instruction would not give the realization of the dream, but there was hope because of the life of that one man who worked, suffered and died in the cause of humanity. His mission was an educative one for He said, "Go ye in all the world and teach." Therefore education must be the basis of the realization of the dream and not instruction. There was a vast difference between the terms, education and instruction. There was a tendency to lose sight of the essentials of education in this age, and to forget that education was discipline. Equality demanded love for our fellowman and a striving to help those who needed our assistance; it was impossible to make laws to bring about this and the only law to effect it was the law of God. A man must be made spiritual before he will live up to this standard. In this age there was too much theorising and not enough practicing because people were not educated properly.

There was a great danger of pride in these days among individuals and army nations. If the United States or if Canada ever died, it would not be because of annexation, or bad government, or gold and silver, but because of ignorance.

The hope of the future was in man becoming intolerant. This might sound like a strange statement but it was true, man should be tolerant not in the sense of being bigotted but in the sense of being true. God was the most intolerant of all beings by His very nature and He is our example.

At the close of the lecture Miss Dawson sang "The First Christmas Morn." Mrs. W. J. Morrow played the accompaniments in a most artistic manner.

The entertainment was under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus.

DIED IN KINGSTON

Late Mrs. M. Thornton was Mother of Mrs. Rev J. G. Potter

Mrs. M. Thornton, mother of Mrs. (Rev.) J. G. Potter, died in Kingston on Sunday night at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Thornton was 77 years of age, and until seven years ago had enjoyed excellent health. An attack of pneumonia brought feebleness, and during the past few years she has been quite infirm, although she did not suffer in any way.

She leaves a family of four sons and six daughters; of these Mr. Louis Thornton, until recently of the Trent Valley Canal staff, and Mrs. Potter, were summoned last Friday and were there at the time of death. Rev. Mr. Potter left this morning for Kingston to attend the funeral, which took place this afternoon.

BANQUET WAS PLEASANT AFFAIR

Mr. E. G. Patterson Entertained Heads of Departments and Foremen.

Of the Canadian General Electric Works Last Evening at Long's Palm Parlours.

Long's palm parlours were the scene of a very interesting event last evening, Mr. E. G. Patterson, general superintendent of the Canadian General Electric Company, entertained the heads of the various departments, and the foremen, to a delightful banquet. There were about sixty present, and the event was one providing much enjoyment for all present. The guests included Messrs. E. H. D. Hall, solicitor, D. Hughes-Charles, banker, and Dr. Young, physician.

After partaking of a bountiful and delicious repast, which was certainly a credit to Mr. Long, a short toast list was run off, Mr. Patterson as host, acting as chairman.

The toast to "The King" was proposed by Mr. Patterson, and honoured in the usual manner.

Mr. R. E. Layfield proposed the toast to "The Company," and Mr. Patterson responded.

The toast to "The Financial Interests of the Town," was proposed by Mr. R. E. Harding, and responded to by Mr. D. Hughes-Charles.

Mr. W. S. Robinson proposed the toast to "The Town of Peterborough," to which Mr. E. H. D. Hall, town solicitor, and Alderman-elect Tovey replied.

Mr. R. Dovey proposed the health of the "Ladies," and Mr. H. Cluxton responded.

Mr. Charles proposed the health of "Our Host," which was heartily drunk. Mr. Patterson responded.

During the evening music was supplied by Halpanny's orchestra in a very acceptable manner. Songs were sung by Messrs. Cluxton, Hallpany and Charles.

The parlour was very tastefully decorated for the occasion, which was a delightful one for all present.

HAGUE PEACE PALACE.

Details of Plans for Andrew Carnegie's Gift to the World—Replica of Brussels' Palace of Justice.

Final decision has at last been reached concerning the Carnegie peace palace at The Hague. The announcement was made the other day that the Dutch Government had purchased a plot of land situated at the eastern end of The Hague, behind the Botanical Gardens, to be given to the Carnegie committee. Following that it was officially announced that the future palace of arbitration would be built on the plan of the Brussels Palace of Justice, of which it will be an exact copy on a smaller scale.

The estimated cost of the peace palace is $1,640,000, or about one-fifth the amount expended on the Brussels Palace of Justice. Mr. Carnegie's original offer on April 22, 1903, was $1,500,000. Doubtless he will supply the rest. The general appearance of the palace now about to be erected will be that of a capitol. The style of the building will be classical, or Greco-Roman, as it is called here.

The edifice will consist of a main building, flanked at each end by a forepart and with a spacious central portico as the principal entrance. A double row of columns will rise to the right and left of this portico and behind them a large monumental staircase leading to the principal audience room, where the court of arbitration will hold its sittings. This audience chamber is to cover 12,000 square feet, being 270 feet long by 120 feet wide, with enormous pilasters of white marble. Beyond this main chamber will be the principal committee room, modeled after the court of assizes of the Brussels Palace, with facings of variegated marbles. At each end of this committee room will be subcommittee rooms.

Above, on the second floor, will be two spacious rooms, one reserved for the president and the other for the secretary of the permanent court of arbitration. The first of these rooms is to be ornamented with marbles of various colors. The second will have pillars of pink stucco, with pedestals of gilded bronze.

The dome which will surmount the palace and will, it is expected, give a majestic aspect to the structure will be supported by two superposed galleries, the lower being square shaped, the other round, flanked by enormous bronze statues of Clemency, Justice, Law and Strength.

A Russian Statesman.

Prince Peter Sviatopolk-Mirsky, who succeeded M. de Plehve as Russian Minister of the Interior, is a statesman of liberal tendencies and has already won a victory over the reactionary elements, including the bureaucracy, which, under the lead of the Procurator of the Holy Synod, have striven to overthrow him. Prince Peter is comparatively young, being but forty-seven. He belongs to one of the oldest families of Russia, tracing his descent to Rurik, the reputed founder of the Russian monarchy, who died in 879. The family has long been settled in Poland, but belongs to the Orthodox faith. Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky has been successively Governor of Penza, Marshal of the Nobility of the Province of Kharkov and Assistant Minister of the Interior under M. Sipiaguine, who, like M. de Plehve, was assassinated. He began his career as a soldier, but later entered the civil service.

PRINCE PETER SVIATOPOLK-MIRSKY.

A Quaint Christmas Custom.

The burning of the ashen fagot is a curious custom observed in Devon and Somerset on Christmas eve. The fagot consists of green ash sticks cut lengthways and neatly fastened into a bundle with withy bands. At 8 o'clock in the evening this is placed on the fire with much ceremony, when the family and invited guests are gathered round the hearth. The flames lick round the bundle, and, when the first green withe holding the fagots bursts, glasses are raised and emptied to "A Merry Christmas!" The breaking of each bond is the signal for a fresh toast. Legend accounts for this custom by the story that a fire of ash wood warmed the stable at Bethlehem, while local tradition tells of a greenwood fire kindled by Alfred the Great during his lonely wanderings in Somerset.

Russia's Belated Christmas.

There are two Christmases at the Russian embassy, but the real celebration comes on Jan. 6. The fact that the joyous festival is, by reason of the use of the Russian calendar, somewhat belated does not, however, affect the enthusiasm with which the celebration is carried out. At a time when most of her American friends are removing the Christmas greens from their homes Countess Marguerite Cassini, the mistress of the Russian embassy, is superintending the decoration of a monster Christmas tree, generously laden with presents, and the distribution of these remembrances is followed by a grand dinner which is thoroughly Russian in its menu and appointments and as protracted as some of the celebrated all night feasts in the land of the czar.—Washington Times.

SYLVESTER EVENING.

How the Germans Celebrate the Conversion of Constantine.

The evening of Dec. 31 is known in Germany as Sylvester evening. In European calendars, excepting that of England, the days of the year have names, and Dec. 31 bears the name of Sylvester, who was bishop of Rome in the time of the Emperor Constantine and was obliged to hide himself in the mountains to escape persecution. Then it happened that Constantine was smitten with leprosy, for which horrible disease the physicians could propose no other remedy than a bath in the blood of young children. For this purpose 3,000 children were gathered, but Constantine, moved to pity by the despair of the mothers, refused to avail himself of such a sacrifice. In the night he was advised in a dream to recall Sylvester and to accept the Christian religion, which he did.

This evening is everywhere in Germany a time of great rejoicing. Parties and balls are given, and friends gather to spend the last hours of the old year in merriment—games and dancing and, most important of all, auguries and divinations. Though these tricks are as old as the hills, they never lose their charm. Hot lead is poured into cold water contained in a basin, and in solidifying it forms itself into all kinds of shapes and figures, in which many meanings can be read by the initiated.

Empty walnut shells, in each of which burns a tiny wax taper, are put together in a basin of water to swim in opposite directions. If they meet two loving hearts will be united in that year, but if they separate the love affair of those represented by the shells will come to naught. Young girls throw slippers over their heads. If the points of the slippers face the door the owners will be married that year; if the slippers miss the wished for direction the girls have to remain at home. Sealed cards on which words of good omen, of good advice or wishes have been written are passed around, read aloud and considered as indications of the future.—New York Tribune.

NEW YEAR'S BREAKFAST.

In Japan It Is a Religious Rite and a Serious Matter.

To a devout Japanese breakfast on New Year's day is a religious rite rather than a vulgar satisfaction of the appetite. No ordinary dishes are consumed at this meal. The tea must be made with water drawn from the well when the first ray of sun strikes it, a potpourri of materials specified by law forms the staple dish, while at the finish a measure of special sake from a red lacquer cup must be drained by whosoever desires happiness during the coming year.

In the room is placed an "elysian stand," or red lacquer tray, covered with evergreen leaves and bearing a rice dumpling, a lobster, oranges, persimmons, chestnuts, dried sardines and herring roe. All these dishes have a special signification. The names of some are homonymous with words of happy omen; the others have an allegorical meaning. The lobster's curved back and long claws typify life prolonged till the frame is bent and the beard is long; the sardines, which always swim in pairs, express conjugal bliss; the herring is symbolical of a fruitful progeny.

These dishes are not intended for consumption, although in most cases the appetite is fairly keen. The orthodox Japanese not only sees the old year out; he rises at 4 to welcome the newcomer and performs many ceremonies before he breaks his fast.—London Chronicle.

WHITE HOUSE GIFTS.

How Santa Claus Comes to the President's Family.

Wagon loads of gifts are received at the White House at Christmas time. They come from all parts of the country, the majority of them from persons unknown to the president and his wife. These miscellaneous articles are the private property of the recipients, and the numerous parcels are placed in one of the family rooms for examination. They generally contain the names of the donors, and to all these notes of thanks are sent.

On Christmas eve all the employees of the house—the clerical staff, the ushers and the domestic servants—are given, through the established munificence of the president, a fine fat turkey. Fifty fowls, selected from the best in the market, are purchased for this event, so that everybody about the famous mansion has reason for rejoicing.

No one expresses his happiness with a more beaming countenance than does Jerry Smith, the old colored man who has been a member of the presidential household since the beginning of Grant's first term. Jerry was President Grant's cook, but in these days he dusts the offices of the White House and keeps things tidy there as the traditional pin.

The presidents and their advisers are usually men of advanced years, and it is to be second generation from them that the White House looks for the frolics of childhood on Christmas day.—Woman's Home Companion.

HUMOR

THIS MERRY WORLD.

Assorted Smiles as a Sure Cure For the Blues.

"Yes," remarked the fair lady, "the marriage knot is exactly like my shoe lace. When there is an eligible man around it simply won't stay tied."

And for still another trip she consulted the time table to South Dakota.

When Lips Meet Lips.

A sweet hippopotamus miss
Allowed to her lover a kiss.
From the size of the twain
It is certainly plain
There couldn't have been bigger bliss.

A Cheap Funeral.

David had just flung the pebble at Goliath.

"Anyway," remarked the giant, "my funeral will be cheap. I have a nice stone at my head already."

With this cheerful view of the matter he thereupon expired.

The Way of It.

'Tis love that makes the world go round
For me and for my neighbor,
And when he strikes we fill his place
With Mammon's unskilled labor.

Architecture Versus Music.

Knicker—Somebody says architecture is frozen music.

Bocker—Great Scott, think of a Wagner flat!

Sounds.

Though from its native element
It may long have been free,
The shell will hold within its depths
The murmur of the sea.

The shell game has its music, too,
However far away.
It still will hold for one to hear
The murmur of the jay.

—New York Press.

He Collapsed.

A somewhat elderly gentleman, with a merry twinkle in his eye, went into a hairdresser's the other day to have his hair cut.

"Excuse me, sir," said the hairdresser as he began operations, "but your hair is very coarse."

"Of course!" ejaculated the gentleman.

The hairdresser looked rather puzzled and said, "I mean it won't lie straight, sir."

"No. You see, it can't lie straight or even tell the truth, because it can't talk," smiled the gentleman.

The hairdresser, who began to suspect that he was being played with, felt mad and said abruptly, "Bear's grease?"

"Oh, yes," exclaimed the gentleman. "It bears grease or oil or fat of any description. In fact, I should say it would bear anything or it wouldn't have borne your remarks about it."—London Tit-Bits.

CLIMBING PLANTS.

The Five Different Classes, With Their Peculiarities.

Climbing plants may be divided into five classes—hook climbers, root climbers, twiners, leaf climbers and tendril bearers.

Hook climbers are equipped with hooks, which are caught up in the surrounding vegetation.

Root climbers, like ivy, throw out fibers along their stems and ascend slowly, insinuating themselves by means of rootlets, which grow away from the light and become glued to the stems of trees or to harder surfaces.

Twiners, like the scarlet runner, hop, convolvulus and bryony, twine themselves around the upright stems of their neighbors. Some, like the convolvulus, bend toward the left; others, like the hop, twine to the right.

The climbing habit, however, is most perfectly exhibited by plants with sensitive prehensile organs, either leaves or tendrils.

In the tendril bearers we find here and there along the stem sensitive, twining, whiplike structures, which curve to what they touch and eventually link themselves round it. Of this sort are the passion flower, sweet pea, grapevine and Virginia creeper.—Pearson's.

Our Surplus Products.

Whether it is cattle, or wheat, or meat, Canada dumps most of her surplus produce into the markets of Great Britain. The extent of this is marvelous. The produce of Canada which went to Britain in 1899 was worth $58,000,000; in 1900 it was $70,000,000; in 1901 it slipped down to $65,000,000; in 1902, however, it has risen to $79,000,000; last year (1903) the agricultural produce sent from Canada to Great Brirain was worth $95,761,001.—John Foster Fraser.

Japanese Names for Babes.

According to The Levant Herald, happy mothers in England and the United States are following the fashion of giving their children Japanese names, such as Kuroki, Kamimura, Togo, Oku, etc. After remorselessly condemning this fashion The Herald opines that "this sort of outrage almost excuses parricide."

A CANADIAN SUCCEEDS

Sir John Fisher As Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth.

Sir Archibald Lucius Douglas, K. C.B., who succeeds Sir John Fisher as Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, is a Canadian, the second son of Mr. George Mellis Douglas of Quebec, where he was born in 1842. As a boy of fourteen he joined the Boscawen when she was the flagship on the North America and West Indies Station in 1856, and he returned to the same station two years ago as its Commander-in-Chief. Sir Archibald served as midshipman and lieutenant in the Arrogant, and was present at all the engagements of her boats and naval brigade up the Rivers Congo and Gambia during her commission on the coast of Africa in 1860. While gunnery lieutenant of the Aurora he commanded a gunboat on the lakes of Canada during the Fenian invasion in 1866. After acting as instructor in the use of Harvey's torpedo to the Channel and Reserve fleets in 1872 he was selected by the Admiralty to proceed to Japan as commander of the Naval Mission to instruct the Japanese navy. He served as Director of the Imperial Japanese Naval College in Yedo for two years, receiving the thanks of the Emperor of Japan and approval of his services from the Admiralty. He was captain of the Serapis during the naval and military operations in the Soudan in 1884, and in later years was successively a member and then Vice-President of the Ordnance Committee. His first command as flag officer was in the East Indies. Coming home in 1899, he was appointed a Lord of the Admiralty, leaving in June of 1902 for Halifax, to take over the command of the ships in North American and West Indian waters.

SIR A. L. DOUGLAS, K.C.B.

Mistletoe.

The eastern mistletoe is parasitic on deciduous trees as far north as New Jersey. It grows in great bunches from one to three feet across and soon disfigures a tree. The people of Atlanta, Ga., have free mistletoe. The city authorities cut it out of the shade trees that line the streets, and any one may take it away by the wagon load. The plant is in no danger of extermination, as we are satisfied with a comparatively small amount, despite its unique associations, which ought to make it in universal demand. The trade is supposed to handle about 10,000 pounds.—Country Life In America.

Are Your Nerves on Edge?

ARE YOU SENSITIVE TO LIGHT, SOUND AND MOTION? YOU NEED

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Twitching of the nerves, sudden starting, tenderness of the scalp or spine, headache at top or back of head, noises in the ears, sparks before the eyes, sleeplessness, dyspepsia, pains and cramps, neuralgia, timidity, irritability, melancholy, physical weakness and general debility are among the symptoms of nervous exhaustion.

You may look well enough and still be a victim of nervous prostration, but can do little with either mind or body without becoming greatly fatigued.

Good food, pure air, suitable rest, and the regular and persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will thoroughly overcome the most extreme case of nervous exhaustion and prostration.

We need only to refer you to such extreme cases as those of Mrs. James Miles, Sr., of South Woodslee, Ont.; Mrs. R. W. Edwards, 35 Murray street, Brantford, Ont., or Mr. S. Cloutier at 110 Laguchetiere street, Montreal, cases in which regular physicians were entirely unable to render assistance.

Use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly, and it will not be long before the wasting process will be overcome and the work of reconstruction begun. Note your increase in weight as strength and vigour are being restored.

Mrs. J. Hatcher, 224 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., and whose husband is a moulder at the Hamilton Foundry, states:—"I had an attack of inflammatory rheumatism which left me in a very run down state of health, and in fact my whole nervous system seemed exhausted and worn out. I could not sleep, and at times the pains in my head were almost unbearable. As a result of these symptoms I was unable to attend to my housework, and I felt miserable most of the time. On the advice of a friend I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that it has proved of very great benefit to me. I am able to do my own work now, and feel healthier and stronger than I have for years. I can truthfully state that this is due to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which I consider a great health builder."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box. 19

The Substitute

By WILL N. HARBEN,

Author of "Abner Daniel," "The Land of the Changing Sun," "The North Walk Mystery," etc.

Copyright, 1903, by HARPER & BROS.

"But why were you in such a hurry?" asked Kenner, who seemed to be the only one in the group capable of ready expression.

"Well," Bob hesitated, and a frank flush spread over his face, "there are some boys in this town that would run after a rich girl, and Dora May would have been entirely too popular to do her any good. Oh, you needn't worry about me an' her! I tell you we know what we are doing. She's business from head to foot an' knows I can manage her affairs all right. There ain't a bit of harm in a fellow marrying money if he loves his wife and has the ability to make some himself. I believe I'm a born money maker. I reckon I got it from father. I believe if he'd 'a' had a fair chance and not been afraid he'd 'a' been the richest man in this state. He married a poor woman and had no start, and yet he's done well—that is, pretty well—for his chances."

"If he ever is about to starve you mought give 'im a job collectin' Dora May's rent," said Kenner, who was bubbling over with enjoyment.

Then silence fell. They were all waiting for Hanks to speak, but he had nothing to say. He rose and went outdoors, his scrawny hands in the pockets of his trousers.

"The Lord only knows what he'll do," said Bob. "But the die is cast, an' I feel sorter independent of him. Look here, Mr. Kenner," turning back from the door, "you must get the idea out of your head that I did this thing just because Dora May was well fixed. I tell you she's just what I was looking for. She's pretty, not a bit lazy and thinks that what I don't know ain't worth learning. She's been so much interested lately in my business that she wasn't studying good at school anyway. She's give me a great many pointers, I tell you. She helped me write all them ads. that folks said was so good, especially them with the poetry in 'em. I'm a bad speller, and she corrected all of 'em before they was printed."

"Did you ever?" Kenner said when Bob had gone. "I'll swear I don't know whether to kick or congratulate 'im."

As George was going home to dinner he saw old Hanks leaning on the fence of a vacant lot waiting for him. George paused. "That ground ud make good turnips," said Hanks, spitting over the fence. "I believe I'll make Trotter an offer for it. I could pasture my cow on it in the spring."

George said nothing. He knew the old man had waited for him to speak of Bob's marriage.

"Went up thar to see Mrs. Styles." Hanks nodded in the direction of the schoolhouse.

"Oh, you did?"

"Yes. Found 'er with 'er head all tied up in rags an' smellin' like a drug store. At fust she kept up sech a screechin' she wouldn't let me say a word, but she quieted down after awhile, an' me 'n' her sorter come to a understandin'."

"An understanding? That's good," said George.

"Yes. We both sorter come to the conclusion that if she'd write to that guardeen that Bob was an only child an' could naturally expect something at my demise that, maybe, he would not raise a row."

"Then the girl really is rich," said George.

The old man spat over the fence again. He avoided George's glance. "Yes, she's pretty well heeled," he said, "an' not a fool by a long shot. She was up at Mrs. Styles' this mornin', the old lady said, with a long dress on. She talked pretty straight—didn't intend to have nobody meddlin' with her affairs—ef anybody had anything to say agin Bob Hanks to send 'em to her, an' so on. Blamed ef I hain't sorter curis to see 'er. Somehow I always wanted a gal in the family, an' one with plenty o' scads is about as acceptable as any other sort—safer in the long run."

"When Mrs. Hillyer was told at the dinner table that day of the outcome of Bob's marriage, she said: "Well, I don't know as Bob Hanks is sech a hard case after all. The highest in the land is a-doin' jest what he done—marryin' with the'r eyes open. The only difference is Bob don't make no bones over it. He admits he's struck a good thing an' has too much business pride to underrate his investment."

"Nevertheless, Martha," said Hillyer over his poised coffee cup, "I'd a little rather see Bob make more over the girl than he does."

"Oh, I don't know why the boy should go about 'fore that gang down thar with his feelin's on exhibition, an' even of it's jest a cut an' dried business deal on his part it will end a sight better, I bound you, than a lots o' slobberin' love affairs that run dry a month after the knot's tried. But I don't somehow think Bob an' his gal will end up bad. Thar's a sunny, cheerful way o' lookin' out fer yourself, an' them two young uns may jest laugh the'r way into happiness an' tote it with 'em through a long, successful life. I hope so, I don't begrudge 'em anything they've got or may accumulate. I met that gal once at the school exhibition an' tuck a likin' to her. She looks like she's been well raised. I dropped my handkerchief, and she scrambled to pick it up, an' when I said, 'Thank you,' she said, 'You're welcome, ma'am,' an' didn't giggle like some do when they say anything unusual."

CHAPTER XXI.

GEORGE was now Hillyer's partner in business. The winter passed, and a bright spring dawned. The Cranstons had spent the Christmas holidays in Virginia visiting relatives and were back again at Darley that the major might superintend the planting on his farms in the vicinity and recuperate his failing health.

It was the first Sunday morning after their return. Hillyer was having a confidential talk with his wife in the sitting room; George was smoking on the veranda.

"Yes, I seed he was bothered," the old man was saying, "an' havin' heard the governor was expected on the 6 o'clock train this evenin', an' knowin' George had an engagement to call on Miss Lydia tonight, I put two an' two together an' got at what ailed 'im. Me an' him talks pretty confidential sometimes, an' I axed 'im ef that wasn't what he was thinkin' about, an' he admitted that it was an' openly axed my advice as to what he ort to do under the circumstances. I told 'im I'd study over it an' let 'im know later."

"Why, tell the boy to go on, governor or no governor," said Mrs. Hillyer. "He's got as much right to call tonight as any night. Huh, I say!"

"That's about the way I put it up," said the merchant in a tone expressive of considerable relief, and he went out to George.

"I look at it this a-way, George," he began, leaning on the banisters and crossing his fat feet. "Thar rally hain't but one way a gentleman could act under them circumstances. You see, she hain't never released you from yore engagement, an' fer you to presume that you was out of the game jest beca'se you'd heard from Mrs. Dugan an' her kind that another feller was due would make you seem sorter green. No; as long as Miss Lydia hain't axed you to excuse 'er thar hain't but one thing fer you to do, an' that is to go, an' when you git thar don't you let Telfare root you out, nother. Ef he is the governor, I'd have my rights."

"Oh, I had decided to go," George returned quietly, "but I feel that it may be unpleasant. I met him once since I was introduced to him, and he looked mad enough to bite my head off. I happened to be leaving the major's just as he was coming in, and we passed on the walk. He scarcely nodded."

"Well, you bet I'd go," said Hillyer, and he went to his room to prepare for church.

The following evening was a pleasant one, and as George entered the gate at the Cranstons' and started up the walk he saw Governor Telfare walking to and fro on the grass near the house smoking a cigar. Hearing the latch of the gate click as George closed it, Telfare paused, stared at George for an instant and then came toward him, meeting him when he was half way between the gate and the steps of the veranda.

"I want to speak to you, Buckley," he said coldly. "Let's walk over to that summer house."

"Very well," and George and he moved across the grass and entered the nearest compartment of the vine grown building. The governor seated himself on one of the benches and nervously puffed at his cigar, round flashes of red light showing intermittent glimpses of his dark, cruel face. George read it intuitively and was prepared for what was coming. His young blood was already at a boiling point. Indeed, the governor's insolent manner of addressing him had been in itself an insult.

"I simply want to say to you, Buckley," Telfare said, with a sneer, "that you and I cannot visit under the same roof."

"Ah, that's bad!" retorted the younger man, his fierce stare bearing down defiantly on his antagonist through the half darkness. "I'm sure I shall miss you. Going abroad?"

Telfare looked at him in astonishment. It was as if he had not dreamed that Buckley would dare to make anything but the most civil, even a humble, reply, considering his power and what he intended to propose.

"You know what I mean," said the governor, waxing more angry. "You know well enough why I will not sit as an equal in the same drawing room with you. You know what you are."

"My knowledge also extends to some most contemptible creatures, Governor Telfare—to an occasional meeting, at least, with one man, whom I certainly would consider beneath notice if I did not meet him under the roof of most respectable, if blind, people."

Telfare smothered an oath and stood up, his short figure appearing dwarfed beside the athletic young giant.

"You say this to me?" he gasped. "To me?"

"Oh, no; I didn't intend it for you," said George. "How could I say such a thing to his excellency the governor of Georgia?"

In the deep silence that followed George could distinctly hear Telfare's violent panting.

"I've got a proposition to make to you," the governor gasped in a final effort at calmness, as he sank to his seat. "I'm in the position to do you a favor—to grant something that any man, situated as you are, would be glad to accept. But we have begun wrong. Perhaps I ought not to have been so outspoken, but seeing you here suddenly provoked me. Sit down a minute and let's plainly understand each other."

"I think, myself, that we have begun wrong," said Buckley, who remained standing. He placed one of his feet on the bench beside the governor and leaned over him. "At any rate, I am wrong now, for I ought to slap your face. And I want to say to you I would do it but for the respect I have for the people you are visiting; that's all that saves you, sir. I've met contemptible, cowardly curs before, but you—"

Telfare panted. "I shall not resent it. Men of my class do not fight men of yours. You can't insult me, Buckley. What you say does not affect me in the slightest. Men of honor"—

"You have no honor to lean on," burst from Buckley's lips. "No man has honor who deliberately insults a man who is as helpless to resent it as I am in this case. You would strike a woman. You are a cur, Telfare!"

Telfare was panting again, but his eyes fell beneath George's fierce stare. It looked as if he were actually afraid Buckley might suddenly strike him in the face.

"You have not heard what I intend to propose," he faltered. "I have it in my power to pardon your father, who is now at the coal mines. I can do this simply by signing my name to a paper, and if you"—

"That is what you want to propose?" George shrank back in bewilderment. The awful significance of the proposal stunned him, drove his rage momentarily from his brain, set him quivering from head to foot. He sat down on the bench opposite Telfare and lowered his face to his hands. His father's liberty was within his reach.

Telfare chuckled contemptuously. "Ah, I see I hit you between the eyes! I reckon you are sorry now that you didn't wait till I had finished before you dared to—but that may pass. I simply will not degrade myself, Buckley, by visiting a lady who is receiving a man of your standing—even if she is led only by her sympathies, and if you will give up all claim to her and agree never to approach her on an equal footing again, I will liberate your father. Of course, you understand, I'd want some sort of petition to come to me—only a few names of his neighbors will do—but"—

"And your object?" George asked, looking up.

"Well, that's a private matter," answered Telfare, "but I may as well admit that my object is to marry Miss Cranston, and, as she evidently is actuated by a sort of pity, admirable in a woman, for you in your misfortune, I simply want to remove you from further contact with her without having openly to request the step of her or her parents. God knows I'm not jealous of you! It is not that. It is only the idea of our visiting here as social equals."

George stood up. He had something to say, and it rang in Telfare's ears long after the words were spoken.

"My father, Telfare," he began, "was convicted for stealing, and no doubt justly, but he was an unlettered, ignorant man. He was a thief, but you, Telfare, are lower than he, for, with your opportunities for knowing right from wrong, you degrade your office—the office given in trust to you by the state—to advance your own personal interests. You are more unpardonable than my father. As for my having any 'claim' on the lady you mention, I have none, and it would be dishonorable for me to trade in a commodity I don't possess. But hold on; I am not through. I want to add that if my accepting your proposition meant that I lent the weight of a straw toward making Miss Cranston your wife, I'd refuse with my dying breath. I could not live knowing that the purest and noblest woman God ever made was through an act of mine living with a loathsome reptile like you. If my father stood on the gallows condemned to death and I could save him by allowing you to touch Miss Cranston's hand in lawful wedlock I should let him die."

"You mean to refuse your father's freedom?" gasped Telfare.

"Yes, I refuse. I am trying, Telfare, to show the world by my life that I have not inherited my parent's weakness. I shall not depart from that rule by entering into a dishonorable compact with a man as base as you are, regardless of what it means to me."

"You'd better think this over, Buckley," said the governor. "You are mad now."

"I have nothing else to say," replied Buckley, "and, to show you how little regard I have for your wishes, I shall keep my engagement with Miss Cranston this evening." And, turning, he walked ahead of Telfare to the house and into the lighted parlor. A servant took his hat and told him Miss Cranston had gone into the garden, but would return in a moment. While he was waiting the governor entered the room and sat down. He was pale, nervous and had a desperate glare in his eyes. Then Lydia came in. She was slightly flushed and had a tuberose in her hand.

"I'm so glad you came," she said to George. Telfare had risen and stood trying to appear at ease, but she did not notice him.

"Do you like tuberoses?" she asked Buckley.

"Very much," he replied.

"Then you shall wear this," she said, her voice quite unsteady. She glanced at Telfare and finished: "It's the only one I have. Governor Telfare, if you'd like one you may ring and the girl will supply you." She leaned forward and with her white, deft fingers pinned the flower on the lapel of Buckley's coat.

"Mr.—er—ah—Buckley is to be congratulated on getting his tuberose," the governor said, with a white sneer. "He seems to be something of a favorite, Miss Lydia—at least for the moment."

The girl laughed harshly. George had never seen her so excited. Her eyes shone like diamonds in the light of the chandelier.

"Mr. Buckley and I are true friends," she said. "I respect him more than any one alive, unless it is my father."

"Ah, you do!" Telfare bit at his short, black mustache which he turned inward with his trembling fingers. "The gentleman—I mean Mr. Buckley—is quite fortunate," he said. "I see your father is smoking on the veranda. With your permission I'll join him."

"Yes, do, Governor Telfare," the girl said coldly. "I'm quite anxious to speak to Mr. Buckley alone for a few moments."

The governor stood up, his dark face stamped with fury.

"Your manner has changed within the last half hour," he said significantly. "At the supper table you were quite another little girl, but we shall talk that over later."

BOOZE OR MEDICINE?

Which will you have? If a woman suffering from one of the delicate ailments peculiar to your sex it will be well for you to know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the only remedy advertised for such maladies which is absolutely free from intoxicating liquors and all other harmful agents. The good you feel from its use is not the delusive exhilaration from a tippling beverage, from which the system reacts into a worse condition than before. It may be a little slower in manifesting its bracing and invigorating action, but its benefits are none the less positive and, best of all, they are lasting. It's an honest medicine—not a beverage.

"I have been taking your medicine for the last three weeks and can say I am gaining strength," writes Mrs. Seneth Kinny, of 68 East Madison Street, Mount Pleasant, Iowa. "I have been having very poor health all winter. I doctored with our family doctor but was relieved only while taking the medicine. I took Dr. Pierce's medicine several years ago. I knew it was good for any one suffering with female trouble. Have taken only one bottle and am gaining strength very fast. I could not eat nor sleep when I began taking the 'Favorite Prescription.' Heart troubled me and I had cold and numb spells till my heart would almost stop beating. Now I can eat and sleep first taking your medicine. I will continue with your treatment as positive I will be cured."

Every suffering woman in this land should write to Dr. Pierce and learn how certainly he can help her to health and strength. NEW YEAR'S DAY RED LETTER DAY.

Reception at Y.M.C.A. Yesterday Afternoon and Evening.

Large Attendance of Young Men—Most Enjoyable Time was Spent.

New Year's is always a red-letter day at the Y.M.C.A. the world over. Yesterday the building was thronged with young men all day—the attendance probably exceeding former years, owing to the unfavourable weather—ruling out counter outside attractions.

Under the direction of the Social Committee of which Mr. L. Johnston is the capable and energetic chairman, the reception room of the building was very tastefully decorated with red, white and blue and evergreens.

The parlours and game rooms were well supplied with social attractions which were made good use of.

In the calendar exhibit in the main reception room many new and beautiful designs were presented.

In the reading room, the exhibit of the drawings and paintings by the pupils of Miss Amy K. Bennet were very much admired, the work certainly reflects great credit on her as a teacher, as well as on the ability of her pupils.

In the parlour during the greater part of the afternoon a group of musicians surrounded the piano and renderd a splendid informal programme.

Mr. Geo. Schneider is never so happy as when he is at the piano and directing such a good line of music.

Mr. Homer Herd, the popular musical director of the Association, had charge of this part of the enjoyable afternoon.

The programme in the gymnasium in the afternoon and evening under the leadership of the Physical Director demonstrated his excellence in that department and showed the remarkable progress the classes had made during the short time he has been in charge of the same.

The gymnasium part of the programme of the New Year's reception, was enjoyed by many of the fathers and others, and the younger people as well. The work in the afternoon was confined entirely to the boys. The idea was to give the parents, and all of those present, an idea of some of the work done by the boys on their regular class days. The physical director would be pleased to have the fathers and mothers come in at any time to see the work. The gallery is always open and seats are provided.

The programme started at 4.15 with a mass drill formed of all the boys. Secondly, came special German horse work by the junior school boys' leaders' corps, which consists of Ed. Mann, Murray Nicoll, Hugh McGuire, Max Fife, Max Dobbin and Savigne Laing.

Then came the relay race by two senior boys' teams, Bert Miller and Cecil Arnott acting as captains; Bert Miller's team won.

An obstacle race was run between junior school boys leaders' corps and the junior intermediates. The race was won by the school boys.

Special parallel bar work by senior boys leaders corps, composed of Stanley Fife, Cecil Arnott and Bert Miller. The programme terminated by a lively basket ball game between the junior school boys and the junior intermediate teams. The game was won by the school boys by a score of 18—9.

Piano selections were rendered by Miss Winnifred Dobbin during the programme.

EVENING PROGRAMME.

The Physical Department had planned to have a basket ball game between Belleville and a picked town team. Through some inability on the part of Belleville the game had to be cancelled. Notwithstanding this a very pleasing and interesting programme was put on.

The first item on the programme was a drill by 12 small girls entitled "Dutch Flirtations." Mr. Mat. Swaine and A. McGuire, then contributed a comic song entitled "If I were Only Mr. Morgan". He was encored and sang "It was the Dutch." The next was a Turkey drill by nine boys, which was certainly good and which was a laugh from the start, Mr. A. McGuire then sang a song "The Soldier Boy". This ended the first part of the programme when the three teachers were made presents by the scholars, and a number of very valuable books presented by Dr. Bolderoft to the pupils who came highest throughout the year in their lessons, thus winning prizes, were as follows:—Miss Stella Armstrong, Master N. Campbell, Master W. Rose, Master G. Barlow, Miss Gladys Riley.

Mr. Tandy was asked when the teachers were presented, to reply for them, which he did in some very witty remarks with a drill by 12 girls, called the Indian Hunters, which was excellent all the girls being dressed in Indian costume, Mr. Mat. Swaine then sang again a comic song entitled the Pippecanoe which was good and was encored. A violin solo by Mr. W. Culligan followed and was a treat. The last and best of all was a drill by six girls and six boys entitled Spring Garlands. The boys were dressed in Louis VII. costumes and the girls to match. They went through the lancers which was part of the drill excellently. The posing was very striking, the body of the hall lights being out and different coloured lights were thrown on the stage. Mr. D. Somerville in this sang "Under the Village Tree" An excellent feature was the playing of the five-piece orchestra, which filled in between curtains. The amount realized from the concert amounted to about one hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Mr. D. L. Somerville, principal, left for his home in Pontypool, on Friday. Miss Weir left for Lakefield the same day and Miss Braund for Port Hope, her home, the day after.

Mr. and Mrs. S. O'Hara spent Christmas with friends in Bagenville.

Mr. John Forman, Jr., is spending the holidays at her parents' home in Smith's Falls.

Miss Annie Mathieson, who is attending the Ottawa Ladies' College is spending Christmas at home.

Mr. T. Mills (who was unfortunate enough some time ago to have his leg broken is able to be out and left to spend the holiday at his home in Smith's Falls.

Mr. H. Kindred and wife from Toronto is the guest of her mother, Mrs. J. Waller.

New Year's

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS

Owing to the special nature of our business, which is largely one of trust and confidence in the ability, judgment and honor of the salesman, it is utterly impossible for us to fill our store with salespeople who know nothing about the watch or jewellery business, or of the quality of the goods they are selling. We wish, as a very special favor, to ask the many friends and customers of "Diamond Hall," who wish to look over our stock or make selections for Christmas, to be kind enough to come as early as possible.

We are giving a special discount on all of our lovely New Goods.

BOTH TEAMS MET DEFEAT

But Played Creditable Hockey Out of Town Yesterday.

Juniors Lost a Close Game in Belleville While Smith Falls Beat Seniors.

Both O.H.A. hockey teams were out of town yesterday, and met defeat, but neither team is at all downcast over the result. The intermediates went to Smith's Falls, and played a hard game with the senior O.H.A. team, and were defeated by 14—4. The juniors played an O.H.A. match in Belleville, and lost by 7—5, after a fine game.

AT SMITH'S FALLS.

The seniors took a fairly strong team to Smith's Falls, and put up a much better game than is indicated by the score. They were pitted against a strong team, but after the first half the locals more than held their own. The ice was in good shape, but the light was not of the best, and bothered the visiting defence materially. The play was quite strenuous at times, and several of the players decorated the boards. The Peterboroughs were strengthened on the forward line by the presence of Whitcroft, who showed up in his old-time form. The match was a very interesting one from the spectator's standpoint.

The local team was: Goal, Comstock; point, Meagher; cover-point, Cavanagh; rover, Whiteroft; centre, Morgan; left wing, Graham; right wing, Parnell.

In the first half the Smith Falls' team had the better of the play, scoring ten goals, while the Peterboroughs failed to score. Things were different in the second period, the losers having the better of the play, though they could not outscore their opponents, and each team notched four points.

JUNIORS AT BELLEVILLE.

The juniors went to Belleville and made a splendid showing against the speedy Bay City septette. Like the seniors, they did not get going until the second half, when the score stood 5—0 against them. The boys then got their combination working in capital style in the second half, and outclassed the Bellevillians by 5—2, having all the better of the play. The local team is much stronger than last year, and should make a fine showing in this district. The forwards played splendidly last night, and when the defence got settled they were very hard to pass. McWilliams, the new man, showed fine form, and will greatly strengthen the team. McFarlane is playing a strong game at centre, while both Hall and Smith shine on the wings and outplayed their checks in the second half. Long and Moore did well on the defence, while Fitzpatrick did considerable work between the flags. All the forwards took a turn in the scoring, McWilliams notching two points. The boys are confident of turning the tables on the return game here in a couple of weeks. The team lined up:

Peterborough:—Goal, Fitzpatrick; point, Moore; cover point, Long; rover, McWilliams; centre, McFarlane; right wing, Smith; left wing, Hall, capt.

FINE CONCERT IN HAVELOCK

Annual School Entertainment was a Great Success.

Many Visitors for the Holiday—Funeral of Mr. Thos. Smith.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Havelock, Dec. 27.—A very sad event took place by the death of Mr. Thomas Smith last Thursday in the Peterborough hospital from the effects of the shock and blood poisoning from having his leg badly crushed in the yards at this point some time ago. The funeral took place from his father's home here on Saturday, when he was laid at rest in the Maple Grove Cemetery. Thomas will be sadly missed by his numerous friends in town. He leaves a mother, father, sister and brother to mourn his loss and they have our heartfelt sympathy in their sad bereavement.

The event of the season in the concert line came off on Thursday evening the 31st. inst., when the long looked for school concert was held. The hall was literally packed, all the floor space being taken up.

The concert opened by a chorus of all the pupils taking part in "Canada My Home". Short addresses by Rev. W. R. Tandy, M. A., and Mr. Wm. Matheson, chairman of the school board, followed. Mr. Tandy, in his speech, dwelt on what should be and his advice was good in regard to the school grounds and kindergarten's work. The next item on the programme was a drill by 12 small girls entitled "Dutch Flirtations." Mr. Mat. Swaine and A. McGuire, then contributed a comic song entitled "If I were Only Mr. Morgan". He was encored and sang "It was the Dutch." The next was a Turkey drill by nine boys, which was certainly good and which was a laugh from the start, Mr. A. McGuire then sang a song "The Soldier Boy". This ended the first part of the programme when the three teachers were made presents by the scholars, and a number of very valuable books presented by Dr. Bolderoft to the pupils who came highest throughout the year in their lessons, thus winning prizes, were as follows:—Miss Stella Armstrong, Master N. Campbell, Master W. Rose, Master G. Barlow, Miss Gladys Riley.

Mr. Tandy was asked when the teachers were presented, to reply for them, which he did in some very witty re-

Card of Thanks

To the Electors of the Town of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Please accept my sincere thanks for the enthusiastic support which you accorded me yesterday at the polls and which vote not only re-elected me one of your Aldermen for 1905, but placed me at the head of the poll among the long list of candidates.

Such a flattering expression of your confidence after three years' service for the town is very gratifying to me, especially as this vote represented all classes of the electors in the five wards.

Your obedient servant,

JOS. H. BATTEN

January 3rd, 1905.

THANKS TO ELECTORS

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I have very great pleasure in expressing my thanks to all who assisted in my election as Alderman for 1905.

I have special reason to appreciate this kind expression of your confidence, because every vote I received was purely voluntary and personal, as I neither solicited or canvassed a voter, nor drove an elector to the polls in my own behalf. Such an independent expression of your good will places me under a strong obligation to do my best to merit the honour you have done me.

Yours truly,

FATALLY SHOT AT CORDOVA

Young Duval Killed by Shot From Brother's Gun

Evidence Points to Accidental Deat but Inquest Will be Held

Dr. Gray, County Coroner, will go to Cordova to-morrow to conduct an inquest into the death of the boy, Duval, who was shot on Saturday.

The facts of the case as learned so far seem to point to accidental death. It appears that on Saturday last, the boy, who is about nine years old, was accompanying his elder brother, about sixteen years of age, on a shooting expedition. Their home is near the Ledyard mine, about half a mile from Cordova, and just as they were starting out the mother called to the younger boy, saying that she did not want him to go. He turned around to obey his mother, and in some way the gun, which his elder brother was carrying, and which was loaded with a .38 cartridge, was discharged, and the bullet entered his younger brother's head from behind, and emerged above the eye, killing the boy almost instantly. He was buried on Monday.

In order to ascertain the true facts of the case the County Coroner will hold an inquest.

The 57th Band will be at the Brock street Rink to-night.

TERMS OF PORT ARTHUR'S SURRENDER

Warships, Batteries and Forts to be Given Up to Victorious Japanese.

FATE OF OFFICERS AND MEN.

Officers Will be Released on Parole and Return Home, but the Soldiers Will Remain Prisoners—Nothing Further is to be Destroyed by the Russians—Blew up all the Valuables.

Tokio, Jan. 4.—The text of the articles of capitulation of Port Arthur garrison signed by the commissioners representing General Stoessel and General Nogi has been made public. All Russian soldiers, marines and civil officials of the garrison and harbor are made prisoners; all forts, batteries, vessels, munitions, etc., are transferred to the Japanese in the condition in which they existed at noon of Jan. 3, violation of this clause to operate as an annulment of negotiations, giving the Japanese army warrant to take free action.

The Russian military and naval authorities are to furnish to the Japanese army an exhibit of all fortifications, underground and submarine mines, a list of military officers, of ships and the numbers of their crews, and of civilians of both sexes, with their race and occupations, and all public property as buildings, munitions of war, etc., to be left in the present positions pending arrangement for their transference.

Officers of the army and navy are permitted to retain their swords and such of their personal property as is directly necessary for the maintenance of life, and with one servant, each may, upon signing their parole not to take arms during the continuance of the war, return to Russia. Non-commissioned officers and privates will be held as prisoners of war.

For the benefit of the sick and wounded Russians, the sanitary corps and the accountants belonging to the Russian army and navy will be required to serve under the Japanese sanitary corps and accountants for such period of time as may be deemed necessary.

It is expected that the Diet will now take a recess and hold a special session for the purpose of passing a vote of thanks to General Nogi and the men of the third army. A great lantern procession in celebration of the surrender of Port Arthur was held last night, and the city was splendidly illuminated. Thousands of men carrying flags and lanterns marched the streets, and visited and cheered the various departments of the Government.

TERMS OF THE SURRENDER.

General Nogi Sends the Text of the Articles to Tokio.

Tokio, Jan. 4.—A telegram from Gen. Nogi, giving the text of the capitulation convention, was received last evening. It is as follows:

Article 1—All Russian soldiers, marines, volunteers, also Government officials at the garrison and harbor of Port Arthur are taken prisoners.

Article 2—All forts, batteries, war ships, others ships and boats, arms, ammunition, horses, all materials for hostile use, Government buildings, and all objects belonging to the Russian Government shall be transferred to the Japanese army in their existing condition.

Article 3—On the preceding two conditions being assented to, as a guarantee for the fulfilment thereof, the men garrisoning the forts and batteries on Etse Mountain, Sunahu Mountain, Antse Mountain and the line of eminences southeast therefrom shall be removed by noon of Jan. 3, and the same shall be transferred to the Japanese army.

The Penal Clause.

Article 4—Should Russian military or naval men be deemed to have destroyed objects named in article 2, or to have caused alteration in any way in their condition at the existing time, the signing of this compact and the negotiations shall be annulled and the Japanese army will take free action.

Article 5—The Russian military and naval authorities shall prepare and transfer to the Japanese army a table showing the fortifications of Port Arthur, and their respective positions, and maps showing the location of mines, underground and submarine, and all other dangerous objects; also a table showing the composition and system of the army and naval services at Port Arthur; a list of army and navy officers, with names, rank and duties of said officers; a list of army steamers, warships and other ships, with the number of their respective crews; a list of civilians, showing the number of men and women, their race and occupations.

Article 6—Arms, including those carried on the person, ammunition, war material; Government buildings, objects owned by the Government, including their contents, excepting private property, shall be left in their present positions and the commissioners of the Russian and Japanese armies shall decide upon the method of their transference.

Russ Officers Paroled.

Article 7—The Japanese army, considering the gallant resistance offered by the Russian army as being honorable, will permit the officers of the Russian army and navy, as well as officials belonging thereto to carry swords and to take with them private property directly necessary for the maintenance of life. The previously mentioned officers, officials and volunteers who will sign a written parole, pledging that they will not take up arms, and in no wise take action contrary to the interests of the Japanese army until the close of the war, will receive the consent of the Japanese army to return to their country. Each army and navy officer will be allowed one servant, and such servant will be specially released on signing the parole.

Article 8—Non-commissioned officers and privates of both army and navy, and volunteers, shall wear their uniforms, and, taking portable tents, and necessary private property, and commanded by their respective officers, shall assemble at such places as may be indicated by the Japanese army. The Japanese commissioners will indicate the necessary details therefor.

The Sanitary Corps.

Article 9—The sanitary corps and the accountants belonging to the Russian army and navy shall be retained by the Japanese, while their services are deemed necessary for the caring for sick and wounded prisoners. During such time such corps shall be required to render service under the direction of the sanitary corps and accountants of the Japanese army.

Article 10—The treatment to be accorded to the residents, the transfer of books and documents relating to municipal administration and finance, and also detailed files necessary for the enforcement of this compact will be embodied in a supplementary compact. The supplementary compact shall have the same force as this compact.

Article 11—One copy each of this compact shall be prepared for the Japanese and Russian armies, and it shall have immediate effect upon signature thereof.

KUROPATKIN'S HANDS FULL.

Could Not Find Time to Lend Aid to General Stoessel.

Che Foo, Jan. 4.—On Dec. 16 General Stoessel sent despatches to the Czar and to Kuropatkin. He asked the latter when relief might be expected. Gen. Kuropatkin answered to the effect that that he had his hands full, and was not able to promise early relief. The reply was entrusted to a messenger who departed six days ago, and it reached Port Arthur. He took tidings to Stoessel which weighed materially with him when he acquiesced in the wishes of his generals, when they proposed the surrender of the fortress. The Russians here claim to see a blessing in disguise in the fall of Port Arthur. They say that the Russian second Pacific squadron can wait until it is overwhelmingly reinforced, and that Gen. Kuropatkin will be able to manage his campaign with a single eye to his own success, without making any false steps animated by a desire to relieve General Stoessel.

Prepared the Public Mind.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 4.—The people of St. Petersburg have received with composure the news known to the rest of the world a day earlier of the fate of Port Arthur. The event had been anticipated, and under official direction the minds of the populace were prepared to receive with resignation the announcement of the fact by the publication of despatches forwarded last week by General Stoessel describing the straits to which the garrison has been reduced. The speculation in some quarters that the surrender of the fortress would be followed at the capital by anti-war demonstrations has not been realized. So far as there has been any expression of feeling, it has been for carrying on the war with all the vigor possible.

Chatham Men Detained.

Detroit, Jan. 4.—Williams Woods from Chatham, and Book, from Detroit, both wanted in the latter city on a charge of burglary. Albert Owens, also of Chatham, is held on suspicion. All three are still in Detroit.

Your Money Back for any Cause.

If after buying a Semi-ready garment you are dissatisfied—we would prefer that you should have your money back rather than keep the garment.

There are two reasons for this: First, the ordinary business reason, that we do not want your money unless you are satisfied; Second, if your returning the garment will show us any point of our careful handling that can be improved—it is then money well spent.

The general prejudice against clothing even when only manufactured up to the trying on stage—necessitates these garments being much better in workmanship and finish than the average tailor garment.

Like every other innovation we have met with prejudice. If it were completely worn down there would not be half the tailors in Canada there are to-day.

We think that even a call at our wardrobe will convince you, and that does not mean you need to buy.

VERY ESTIMABLE YOUNG LADY

Funeral of Late Miss Edith Pearce Largely Attended

Many Evidences of the Esteem in which She was Held—Buried in Little Lake Cemetery

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of one of the most talented and brightest young ladies of Peterborough took place, when the remains of the late Miss Edith Pearce, daughter of the late Edgcombe Pearce, for about 25 years County Clerk, and Treasurer of Peterborough, were laid in the tomb.

The late Miss Pearce, as was mentioned in the Examiner, died in Kansas City, Mo., in which city she had made her home for the last ten years, and where she was very highly respected. The deceased young lady was very talented, particularly along musical lines, being a violinist of exceptional ability, and during the time of her residence in Kansas City she has taught music with great success.

Prior to her death, the sister of the late Miss Pearce, Mrs. Sherwood, went to Kansas City, hoping to find her recovering, but she had died before her arrival there and she accompanied her sister's body to Peterborough, where it was brought for burial.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, 366 Rubidge street, to St. John's church, where service was held, conducted by the Rector, Rev. J. O. Davidson, who referred to the many excellent qualities of the deceased. The pall-bearers were, Messrs. Arthur Hammond, L. M. Hayes, F. Clement, H. Clurton, E. M. Poussette and W. F. Johnston. The mourners were, her mother, Mrs. Edgcombe Pearce, two sisters, Mrs. Sherwood and Miss Lillian Pearce and one brother, Mr. T. E. Pearce, of Newport News, Va.

A very large number of beautiful floral offerings were sent by the numerous friends of the deceased from Kansas City.

She was buried in Little Lake Cemetery.

Electricity For Tunnel.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—The Grand Trunk Railway Company are seriously considering the installation of electric motors in the Sarnia Tunnel. The proposed change will necessitate an outlay of between $300,000 and $400,000. There will be required a power plant, storage system, third rail and four electric motors.

Will Not Join Squadron.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—Hon. Raymond Prefontaine has received a letter from Admiral Bossanquet, commanding the West Indian Squadron, that he cannot avail himself of the services of the cruiser Canada this year, but may next year.

DOURO.

Entertainment and Present to Teacher.

Miss O'Neill from Utica, has taught school in Douro, at No. 12 school house. She was well liked by the trustees and the ratepayers, as well as by her pupils, and an effort was made to re-engage her for the coming year, but without success. Miss O'Neill was counted one of the best teachers in the county. A grand concert was given in the school before her departure, and was one of the finest ever held in Douro. Over two hundred attended it. The late teacher was presented with a handsome ladies' companion, and besides many other gifts. Much regret was expressed at Miss O'Neill's departure, but all are living in hopes that she may make us a return visit.

The municipal elections held on Monday gave the following results: Reeve, J. Thompson, elected over H. Joyce.

Owing to the departure of Mr. A. J. Murphy from the C.P.R. at this point, a number of his friends arranged a banquet in his honour, which took place in the Oddfellows' committee rooms in Jeffs' block, on Monday evening. After the speech making a very handsome gold locket and a chain was presented to him, with the following address, which was read by Wm. Wright, the presentation being made by H. R. Nickerson.

"E. J. Murphy, Esq.,

"Dear Sir, — Owing to the necessity of your departure from amongst us in the near future, we deem it our duty as fellow workmen, in presenting you with this slight token, to show the esteem which we all hold for you. While regretting your departure we are all pleased to congratulate you on your promotion. Trusting that your relations with your fellow employees in the future will be as pleasant and harmonious as they have been here, we remain, yours, on behalf of the employees.

"John Wright,
"Alex. Herron."

Mr. Murphy replied as follows: — "Gentlemen and Fellow Workers, I must say that this is a complete surprise to me. When I was asked to come up to this hall this evening I understood it was to be a social gathering given in my honour on the occasion of my departure for Toronto Junction, and I was more than surprised when the handsome gold chain and locket were handed to me. I can hardly find words to express my thanks. I am sure that I appreciate very much the gift, and it will always remind me of my stay in Havelock. It was not my wish to leave, and I certainly would not have left, only that I am gaining promotion, but as we are all looking for the same end, I naturally accepted the offer. Hoping that the man who takes my place may have as little trouble as I have had, and be held in the same esteem, when he leaves, is my wish. I will now conclude by wishing you one and all the compliments of the season. I am no great speaker; only when work is not done to my satisfaction then you all hear from me. Even now I have said twice what I intended to." Mr. Murphy's address was loudly applauded.

After this all sat down to a sumptuous repast and a pleasant evening was spent. At the conclusion all sang "For he's a jolly good fellow." Mr. Murphy will be succeeded by Mr. J. Montgomery, of Toronto Junction.

PRESENTATION TO MISS COURTNEY

Pupils of Fourth Line School Honour Teacher—Annual Entertainment.

Special to the Examiner

Smith, Dec. 28th.—A very successful and enjoyable concert and Christmas tree was given in Union Temperance Hall on Thursday evening, Dec. 22nd, by the pupils of the Fourth Line School. From experience the people of the section had looked forward to an enjoyable evening, and they were not disappointed. The hall was crowded to the door which augured well for the library. The proceeds, $17.50 to be spent to increase the volumes in the school library. The programme was interesting and varied and was presented in a pleasing manner. Mr. Andrew Young acted as chairman very acceptably, and besides addressing the audience himself, he called to the platform, Mr. T. D. Young, the Secretary-Treasurer, to make a few remarks. The recitations and dialogues were entertaining and the patriotic choruses were given in splendid spirit. A special feature of the programme was the "Good-night Drill," given by eight little girls, who appeared in white gowns and night caps and carried candles to light them to bed. This drill fairly brought down the house. Another item worthy of mention was the "Dairymaid's Drill," by the larger girls of the school. The audience could not fail to be impressed by the pretty, jaunty-looking dairy maids of the Fourth Line. The tree was laden with presents and in this part of the entertainment a great many had a share. Among many beautiful gifts on the tree was a lovely five o'clock tea set presented by the pupils to their teacher, Miss Courtney, of the Fifth Ward.

Christmas Entertainment at Warsaw Many Holiday Visitors.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Warsaw, Dec. 26.—Once more Christmas has come again, having been preceded by crisp winter weather excellent sleighing and all other facilities necessary for trade and commerce, for which our enterprising merchants had made ample provision and we feel assured they have been rewarded with a rushing business.

While those who have remained at home there have been visitors and friends galore, while many have gone to enjoy the festive season with friends in other parts. Among the visitors noted are Mr. B. Earle and Mr. Dick Choate, of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Bell, of Peterborough at Mr. A. F. Choate's.

Dr. M. A. McQuade, of Toronto, at the Methodist parsonage.

Morton Warren, son of Dr. Measham, is spending his holidays under the parental roof.

Entertainments have been and are to be the order of the day.

An excellent entertainment was held at Bethel Methodist Church under the auspices of the Sunday school there.

The Sunday school of Warsaw, Methodist Church held their annual Christmas entertainment Monday evening last consisting of choruses by the school and a magic lantern exhibition by Jas. Stubs, of Peterborough, together with a large number of Christmas gifts, the house being packed to suffocation.

The Presbyterian people will hold their S. S. entertainment there next Monday evening.

A pretty wedding took place on the evening of the 31st at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Payne, being the marriage of Mr. Herbert W., son of Mr. Fred. Payne, to Miss Annie L., daughter Thos. Crowe. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. McQuade, in the presence of a goodly number of guests. The groom was assisted by his youngest brother, Harry, while the bride was attended by Miss Dora Payne, daughter of the host and hostess. Miss Violet M. Payne, cousin of the bride made a charming flower girl. After the ceremony the guests partook of a beautiful repast. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents.

HAVELOCK WANTS FIRE PROTECTION.

Citizen writes Urging Council of Havelock, to Action.

The Great Risk of Delay in Providing Fire-fighting Facilities.

The Examiner has received the following communication from Havelock, with the request that it be published:

We have again been visited by the fire fiend this week. It would be a fitting thing for the newly elected council to forever perpetuate their memory by inaugurating an adequate fire protection for this thriving and prosperous town of ours. That our homes should be exposed to this menace without any protection whatever is a glaring disgrace to the place, and all property owners should insist on the new council providing means for fighting this fiend without the least possible delay. Blessed as we are with an unfailing supply of water, it only requires the outlay of a comparatively small sum to provide the necessary engine and hose. That our business houses should be liable to be wiped out of existence in a few hours, and ourselves helpless to stay the destruction is in itself enough to outrage the feelings of all right minded people. The whole commercial industry of Havelock is in danger of this and should such a thing happen it would be a blow from which the trade of this town would not recover for years. We have only to look at the big fires of the last two years as a warning, and it is the bounden duty of our council to profit by these great calamities, and insure that our ever increasing business and residential districts are fully protected.

I had Blind and Bleeding Piles and suffered everything. Ointments and local treatments failed but Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid cured me perfectly."

CHOICE OF SPEAKER

House Will Elect R. F. Sutherland, Member for North Essex.

E. N. LEWIS DISQUALIFIED

West Huron's Representative Surety For a Contractor—That Scotch At Napanee—Mr. Whitney Waxes Indignant Over the Publicity—That Coalition Offer—He Received It in a Rather Roundabout Way.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—Robert Franklin Sutherland, member for North Essex, will be Speaker of the House of Commons. His election will take place when the popular Chamber convenes on the 11th inst. The Government have held that it is the turn of an English-speaking Canadian to preside over the House, a French-speaking Canadian having now occupied the office for four year. It is an unwritten rule that if an English-speaking member is Speaker of the House the corresponding position in the Senate shall be held by a Senator from Quebec. Who the man from the sister Province will be is not yet known, but Hon. Raoul Dandurand's name is one of those mentioned. As Speaker of the House nobody doubts that Mr. Robert Sutherland will be all that the office demands. He is a man of judical mind and firm character, and a good lawyer to boot. Mr. Sutherland is a native of Newmarket, where he was born in 1859. He received his education at the Newmarket Public School, the Windsor High School and Toronto University. He is a B.A. and a K.C., and was first elected to the House in 1900. He is prominent in the public affairs of Windsor. Mr. Sutherland is a Presbyterian elder.

The Deputy Speaker of the House will not be chosen until after the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, and Mr. Chas. Marcil, the popular and eloquent member for Bonaventure, may be appointed.

Member Disqualified.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—It is now said that E. M. Lewis, Conservative member-elect for West Huron, is disqualified from taking his seat, owing to his having given security for Thomas Gundry, mail carrier. If there is a bye-election Robert Holmes, ex-M.P., will be the Government candidate.

Cross Petition Filed.

Halifax, Jan. 4.—F. A. Laurence, member-elect for Colchester County, Nova Scotia, whose return was petitioned against, has filed a cross-petition against S. E. Gourley, ex-M. P., for disqualification on the ground of corrupt practices by himself or agents.

THAT SCOTCH.

Mr. Whitney Waxes Indignant Over the Publicity—That Coalition Offer.

Cornwall, Jan. 4.—Mr. J. P. Whitney addressed a well-attended meeting held in the Music Hall here last night in the interests of Mr. George Kerr, Conservative candidate for Cornwall and Stormont, who is leading a forlorn hope against a Liberal stronghold manned by aggressive fighters under the leadership of Mr. McCart, the victor by a handsome majority in the last election. The features of the Opposition leader's address were his references to coalition, and to a recent occurrence at Napanee. In regard to the former he read a carefully-prepared statement, as follows:

About two years and a half ago The Globe suggested that a coalition would be advisable. I believe Mr. Ross knew this editorial would be published. The day after the appearance of this editorial I was asked by one Minister of the Crown whether I would meet another Minister of the Crown and discuss coalition. I did so, with the result that the suggestion or proposition was declined by me.

"Nearly a year afterwards, while the Gamey-Stratton investigation was going on, at the invitation of a gentleman not in public life, I again discussed the matter with the same Minister with the same result.

"About a month ago a personal friend informed me that the proposition of a coalition was still open, and that if acted upon I would in all probability become the leader of the Government in about a year. My friend informed me that he had this message for me from a very prominent Conservative in Toronto, who had received it from a prominent Liberal known in financial circles in the city who had received it from a very prominent Liberal Senator well known also in financial circles in Toronto."

That Scotch At Napanee.

In reference to the statements in certain newspapers regarding an incident that happened in the town of Napanee, he said in part: "When the meeting in that town was over I went to my hotel. I went upstairs to my room, and stayed there until the next morning. While in my room I availed myself of the rights and privileges of a guest of the house, and I am not going to apologize for anything I have done. (Applause.) It is said that a number of men were roystering in the house, and that the bar was kept open until morning. It might have been. I do not know I was not in the bar.

"It would be a strange thing indeed if I, the chosen leader of the majority of the people of the Province of Ontario, whose life has been like an open book to this country for years should be called upon by a set of creatures whom I would not name to reply to a scandalous action like that. (Applause.) When I have to defend myself against charges like that, then the time has come when I shall hesitate to longer hold the position of a political leader—the leader of the dominant party in my native Province of Ontario." (Prolonged appalause.)

THE HOUR'S HEROES

Thomas May and Robert Patterson Make a Gallant Rescue.

SAVED LIFE OF JAMES BLACK

Their Lives Were in Danger At Every Step As They Crept 300 Yards Over Floating Ice in Niagara River—Their Mission of Rescue With Small Boat and Two Planks.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Jan. 4.—A heroic rescue from death on floating ice in the Niagara River was made here last night by Thomas May and Robert Patterson of Niagara-on-the-Lake.

James Black, a young man of Youngstown, N.Y., while attempting to cross the river in a canvas shooting boat broke an oar and became fast in the ice. He was unable to extricate himself.

His cries for help soon attracted the attention of people on the Canadian shore, and steps were at once taken to rescue him with the assistance of a small boat and two long planks. Patterson and May volunteered to make the attempt.

A long rope was attached to their boat. The planks were first pushed out on the floating ice. A man on each side then dragged the boat as far as possible. Then getting in the boat again they pushed the planks ahead.

In this manner they reached Black, who was about three hundred yards from shore. Putting the almost frozen but happy man in their boat the return trip was safely made with the assistance of about two hundred citizens on shore, who pulled on the rope.

The daring rescuers were loudly cheered on reaching the shore. The rescued man, who had been in the ice for five hours, was taken to the residence of William Black, where a physician attended him He will soon recover.

Patterson and May are the heroes of the hour. Owing to the heavy sea and the high north wind their lives were in danger at every step.

DEATH FROM FREEZING.

Kenneth Morrison of Ottawa Found Dead in a Field.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—Kenneth Morrison, son of Louis Morrison, 174 Florence street, aged 16 years, was found frozen to death in a field in the south end of the city yesterday. He had been missing two weeks, but his parents thought he had gone to the shanties and made no inquiry for him.

Charles Thibault Killed.

Montreal, Jan. 4.—Charles Thibault, advocate of Waterloo, a man who in the past has played a considerable part in the political arena, was killed by a Canadian Pacific Railway train Monday evening at Sutton Junction. He was on his way from his son's residence at Waterloo, when, on crossing the track, he was struck by an on-coming train and hurled to his death. Charles Thibault was 64 years of age, and had been in practice in this city and in Waterloo, Que., for a number of years. For many years he was regarded as one of the most effective stump speakers supporting the Conservative party.

Killed By Coal Gas.

Kingston, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Clow of Odessa, twelve miles west of Kingston, was asphyxiated Monday. She was found dead by neighbors who entered the house to see why she had not appeared. Her grandson, Roy Rose, aged ten, was found just alive and may recover. Gas fumes from a defective stove were the cause.

Killed in Chicago.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Jan. 4.—Thomas Connolly of this city was killed in Chicago on Sunday by falling from the elevated railway on which he was employed.

Go Through the Ice.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Jan. 4.—Nelson Ramie and Webb Rollins attempted to cross the St. Lawrence river in an open boat Monday night and were caught in floating ice. The boat was upset and crushed by the ice and Rollins was drowned. Ramie after a struggle for life in the icy water clung to floating ice until his clothing froze to it and prevented him from drowning until a ferry steamer rescued him. He was badly frozen.

Nine Die in Fire.

Elmira, N.Y., Jan. 4.—During the early morning hours yesterday fire consumed the house of Frank Noweski, a Polish miner in Morris Run, Pa., and the entire family of ten, except the oldest son, aged 18, was either burned to death or smothered. The charred bodies of Noweski, his wife, and seven children, one of them a baby in arms, are in the ruins of their home. No one knows how the fire started.

DROPPED DEAD IN CHAIR.

Joseph Wood, Druggist, of Rat Portage, Has Sudden Call.

Rat Portage, Jan. 4.—Jos. Woods dropped dead in his office chair yesterday afternoon. He was one of the town's leading druggists, and had been attending to business, apparently in the best of health. Death was due to syncope. Deceased was 53 years old, and married Miss Scott of Toronto, who survives him with one daughter two years old.

No Street Sale of Bibles.

Constantinople, Jan. 4.—The Porte has at length replied to the notes of the American Legation and British Embassy regarding the sales of Bibles and notwithstanding previous assurances the Porte has refused to authorize street sales.

THE ROUND ROBIN.

Its Origin, It Is Said, Can Be Traced Back to Ancient Greece.

According to British naval documents of the years 1628 and 1650, it was the custom of seamen of that day to use the round robin as a safe and effective means of bringing their grievances before the authorities. A similar practice existed in France, but the alleged origin of the term "round robin" from rond ruban, a circular band used in the French petitions, is probably fallacious.

The term existed in England long before, with wholly different meaning. Thus in Devonshire a "round robin" was a small round pancake, and the sacramental wafer was called a "round robin" by Latimer, 1550.

Dr. Timbs says that the idea of the round robin has been traced back to a Greek conspiracy against the tyranny of the Pisistratidæ. The Romans had a similar custom of writing the names of their guests or friends in a circle when anxious not to indicate any individual preferences.—London Standard.

Holiday Customs.

At the saturnalia, the heathen prototype of Christmas, it was the Roman custom to decorate the house with evergreens. This was done to give the woodland spirits refuge from the cold.

In Atlanta, Ga., it is the Christmas custom to let free all prisoners whose only offense has been against the city ordinances.

The holly and mistletoe that we use for Christmas decorations show the survival of the customs of the Druids. In Russia branches of fir trees are used for decoration. In most parts of southern Europe evergreen trees are used, while in India the English churches are decorated at Christmastide with all kinds of flowers, palms and berries.

Ireland For the Embargo.

London, Jan. 4.—(C. A. P.)—The Queen's County Council, Ireland, has entered a protest against the Government allowing the free entrance of foreign store cattle into Great Britain and Ireland, as such a policy would be fatal to the interests of the calf rearing industry and would be a means of preventing those who have purchased land under the Land Act from meeting their annuities.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

Are Never Without Peruna in the House for Catarrhal Diseases.

W. D. WATSON, Clovis, Fresno County, Cal., writes:

"God bless you for what you have done for me. The rheumatism has all disappeared, and to-day all exclaim, 'How well you look!' I tell them yes, and I owe it all to Dr. Hartman for his good advice to me. To-day finds me as free from pain as I ever was. The rainy season has set in here, but the change hasn't affected me as it used to. I am very thankful that I have found out that you can and will help the suffering ones that will follow your advice. Several have asked me what cured me, and I tell them. They get the medicine then. We keep Peruna in the house. My daughter has two sons, and they keep well and go to school, and they take the medicine every day.

"My wife was troubled with a pain in her side for years. Now she is taking your medicine and is real smart. I will do all I can for you and for those who need your advice."

Mr. Jno. O. Atkinson, Independence, Mo., Box 372, writes:

"Your remedies do all that you claim for them, and even more. Catarrh cannot exist where Peruna is taken according to directions. Peruna completely cured my wife and I of catarrhal troubles of twenty-five years standing. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement of Peruna."

Mrs. Alla Schwandt, Sanborn, Minn., writes:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and catarrh for twenty-five years. Could not sleep day or night. After having used Peruna I can sleep and nothing bothers me now. If I ever am affected with any kind of sickness Peruna will be the medicine I shall use. My son was cured of catarrh of the larynx by Peruna."—Mrs. Alla Schwandt.

Why Old People are Especially Liable to Systemic Catarrh.

When old age comes on, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safeguard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that meets these cases exactly.

Such cases cannot be treated locally; nothing but an effective systemic remedy could cure them. This is exactly what Peruna is.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

NINE RECIEVED AS POSTULANTS.

Interesting Ceremony at the Mount St. Joseph Yesterday.

Sermon by Rev. Father McColl—Those who Assisted in the Ceremony.

Yesterday morning at Mount St. Joseph an interesting ceremony was held, the occasion being the taking of the habit of nine postulants, who have served their terms in the novitiate at the Mount.

The ceremony was performed by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, and assisting him were: Rev. Father Kline, of Brock, Toronto Diocese; Rev. Father F. J. O'Sullivan, Victoria Road, and Rev. Fathers McColl, John O'Brien, Galvin and Dr. O'Brien, of St. Peter's Cathedral.

Those who were yesterday received in the Order of the Sisterhood of St. Joseph, were:—

Miss Bridget Ryan, Pembroke — Sister Mary Celestine.
Miss Anna Phelan, Pembroke — Sister Mary Hildegarde.
Miss Sarah Donlon, Sault Ste. Marie—Sister Mary Regis.
Miss Elisabeth Markle, Thessalon—Sister Mary Constance.
Miss Gertrude Markle, Thessalon—Sister Mary Marberta.
Miss Mary Lonergan, Warkworth—Sister Mary Mercedes.
Miss Helen Dion, Campbellford — Sister Mary Ursula.
Miss Alice McCabe, Grafton—Sister Mary Mildred.
Miss Mary Daly, Beaverton—Sister Mary Christina.

The sermon for the occasion was preached by Rev. Father McColl, Rector of St. Peter's, and in it he referred to the great beauty of the holy life as lead by those who took the vows which the postulants took, and whose lives were given up to works of charity.

The speaker sought to impress upon those to whom he was preaching, the great responsibility of the step which they were then taking.

The service was attended by a very large number of the friends of the young ladies and the pretty little chapel at the Mount was given additional beauty by the floral decorations, of which there were very many.

DOURO WEDDING MANLEY—WHITE

Interesting Matrimonial Event Celebrated on Wed. Dec. 28th.

A pretty home wedding was celebrated at the residence of Mr. W. H. White, Douro, on Wednesday, Dec. 28th, when his daughter, Mary Letitia, was united in marriage to Mr. F. J. Manley. The bride entered the drawing room leaning upon the arm of her father, the wedding march being played by Miss Bertha White of Lakefield, a cousin of the bride. The ceremony was performed under an arch of roses by Rev. T. W. Leggott. The popularity of the bride was testified to by the large array of wedding presents contributed. After the ceremony and congratulations, about forty guests sat down to the wedding supper, which was followed by a season of social entertainment. The happy couple after a two weeks' bridal tour visiting with friends, will take residence on a farm near the former home of the bride.

Price-sliding Bargains at Lebruns.

Saturday next, January 7th, a sweeping stock-reduction sale starts at H. LeBrun & Co's, City Clothing store. Winter Suits, overcoats, reefers, reefcoats, underwear, neckwear, hats and caps, will all be marked down 20 to 30 per cent. It is our custom not to carry over winter stock from season to season—1st, because, although we occupy four large flats, our premises are too small to store away out-of-season goods; 2nd, because, we would rather sacrifice prices now than lose money on goods carried over later on. After a most satisfactory year's business the City Clothing Store will therefore start the new year with a storeful of price-sliding bargains. We begin our regular winter reduction sale this year earlier than usual, and before stock-taking—instead of after—so that the public may have full benefit, as well as on account of spring goods coming in earlier. This great sale will be a bonanza to men, youths and boys, who have been putting off buying, as well as to those who can afford to buy ahead for future use. Remember this bona fide sale starts Saturday, January 7th. H. LeBrun & Co.

Officers Elected for the Year 1905—The Chief's Good Record.

The first monthly meeting of the Peterborough Fire Brigade for 1905 was held last night in the rooms of the Department, with Chief Rutherford presiding.

The officers for the year were elected as follows:—

Assistant Chief—W. R. Turner.
1st Lieut.—A. Mitchell.
2nd Lieut.—J. Gibbs.
Secretary—J. R. Metheral.
Treasurer—W. P. Adamson.

It was reported that the services of the Brigade had been required 64 times during last year.

At the conclusion of the business the members adjourned, on the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Brooks, to the Palace Restaurant and partook of a fowl supper provided for them by the popular host of the Palace.

At the conclusion of the supper a short, but pleasing toast list was disposed of, toasts being proposed and honoured to the King and Queen and the Host and Hostess, to the latter of which Mr. J. M. Brooks responded, expressing his pleasure at entertaining the members of such an efficient body of men as the fire brigade.

In this connection it might be timely to mention the fact that Chief Rutherford has now entered upon his 25th year as Chief of the Peterborough Fire Brigade, and is probably the only man in Ontario, who has occupied a similar position for that length of time. It is also pleasing to chronicle the fact that during this time no serious accident has befallen any of his men.

During the last year two fires which occurred under particularly trying circumstances were fought, both with the thermometer away below zero, the bare mention of which fact conveys to a fireman an idea of the difficulties entailed. These two fires were that at Roy's studio and the American Cereal Company's Works.

Mr. Rutherford has the entire confidence of his brigade, and his management of the Department is such as to merit the approval of those responsible for his appointment.

STUDENTS' DANCE LARGELY ATTENDED

Very Enjoyable Affair in Foresters Hall Last Evening.

The "Students" dance in the Foresters' Hall last evening was very largely attended and was one of the very enjoyable social events of the season. About 60 couple were present and a delightful evening was spent in "tripping the light fantastic." The music was supplied by the Mascagna Orchestra of Toronto, which, as usual, gave perfect satisfaction. Altogether the event was a most happy one, and those who had the matter in charge are to be congratulated upon the success attained.

The patronesses were Mesdames J. A. Aylmer, John Crane, Dr. Bradd and R. S. Davidson.

A large number of guests were present from out of town including about twenty-five from Toronto.

The committee was as follows:—Messrs. G. B. Hall (McGill), H. S. Wood (Queens), F. H. Collins (Varsity), Arthur Boucher (Trinity) W. V. Casey (T.C.S.), C. H. Rogers, (S.P.S.) secretary, and B. D. Hall (R.M.C.) treasurer.

The 57th Band will be at the Brock street Rink to-night.

A DELIGHTFUL FAMILY RE-UNION

Mr. Alexander J. Heal Comes Home After 14 Years.

Now a Prosperous Merchant in North Dakota—Farmers Dislike Canadian Wheat.

A happy family re-union was enjoyed yesterday at the home of Mr. Jas. Heal, 179 Dublin street, when his son, Mr. Alexander James, of Perth, N.D., arrived home unexpectedly to spend a few days in visiting his relatives, after an absence of 14 years.

Mr. Heal had sent no word of his intended visit and consequently was not expected. He arrived in town, and registered at one of the hotels. He was sitting in the corridor later in the day, when his father entered, but the latter did not recognise the son after his long absence, during which time he had changed very considerably in appearance. The son, however, at once recognised the father, and made himself known, and there was a joyous meeting of father and son. The former took his son home, when he was greeted warmly by the other members of the family.

Mr. Heal, the younger, is the proprietor of a general store in Perth, N.D., a small but prosperous town of 300 population, on the St. John Branch of the Great Northern Railway, and twenty miles from the Manitoba border, from which province it doubtless receives its progressive impetus.

The crops in North Dakota last year were, according to Mr. Heal, excellent, and good prices were obtained for their wheat, the ruling prices when he left being $1.05 per bushel.

He was of the opinion that the people of his state would not look very favourably upon the action of the U. S. Government in abolishing import duty on Canadian wheat.

Mr. Heal will remain in this vicinity visiting his friends for some days, after which he will go to Prince Edward county for a short time.

ADDRESSED ELECTORS OF THE EAST WARD

Enthusiastic Meeting in Interests of Mr. R. F. McWilliams Last Evening.

Candidate and Mr. H. H. Dewart of Toronto, Were the Speakers.

Spoke of Record of Government and its Policy—Is Worthy of Support.

An enthusiastic meeting in the interests of the Liberal candidate, Mr. R. F. McWilliams, was held in the Town Hall, Fifth Ward, last evening. There was a good representation of the voters of the ward present who heard two stirring addresses from the candidate and Mr. H. H. Dewart, of Toronto, ex-Crown Attorney of the County of York.

The chairman was Mr. J. Distin, who introduced the speakers. The candidate was presented with a bouquet of flowers by a little girl, previous to beginning his address.

THE CANDIDATE.

Mr. McWilliams was pleased to speak to the electors of the East Ward, which had given a handsome vote in the municipal elections and he felt sure they would repeat this at the coming election. The speaker made reference to the faithful and efficient manner which Hon. Mr. Stratton had represented the riding in the past. Mr. Stratton had entered the political field when quite young, but no one would say it was a mistake to elect him at an early age. He himself was still young, but he felt that he could represent the riding in a manner that would leave for the electors no room for regret.

Mr. McWilliams believed in party politics, but he did not believe in failing in line with everything which a party might desire to do. He would support the Government, if elected, for he believed it had given faithful service in the past and deserved the support of the electors at large.

The great issue in this campaign was the question of whether or not the affairs of the province had been managed, during the Liberal rule, in such a manner as to deserve the commendation and renewed support of the electors.

Mr. McWilliams dwelt upon the growth which the province was making in different lines. From the sale of timber lands alone over $30,000,000 had been realised and it was most important that the section of the province, known as New Ontario, be developed to its fullest extent for by developing it in future as the Government had been doing in the past would mean increased revenue to the province. The Government had shown remarkable skill and energy in building up this new country and their policy had been such as should be heartily supported.

The speaker was in favour of the policy of Government ownership of railway lines. The extension of the Temiscamingue line to different points in New Ontario would be a big factor in developing that section of the province. It was of vital importance to us to open up New Ontario and the Government deserved much credit for the statesmanship shown in dealing with that country.

The policy of the Government upon the taxes of this country was dealt with by the speaker. It was as much a matter of dollars and cents to a man as to how the affairs of the province were run then as to how the affairs of a town are run. The wise administration of the finances meant a great deal to every resident of the province. The money had been wisely spent—spent in building institutions which were for the benefit of the poor as well as the rich.

Mr. McWilliams had no defence to make in reference to any corruption which might be brought up against either party. He wished the electors would find out the truth and the whole truth in connection with such matters. Since the last Provincial election there had been altogether ten protests, five being successful against each party, which went to show that the Conservatives were by no means free from corruption which they claim is prevalent among the Liberal party. Mr. McWilliams believed that if men were sent to Parliament who would fight against anything which was not pure, politics would soon be free from any corrupt practices.

Regarding temperance, Mr. McWilliams said he had always been a total abstainer and had used his influence along this line. He was not an extremist and was not in favour of pressing prohibition, when it was not wise to do so, but he believed in legislation to suppress drink and crime. The conditions of affairs in this regard were improving and licenses were not as many now as in former years. The improvement, as far as legislation could make improvements, had been made by the Liberal party. The character of the licenses had also been changed to improve conditions. We want to strike out the evils of intemperance by so doing we would only do ourselves harm by adopting too radical changes.

The Conservatives had no policy on the temperance question, or in fact upon any question of import to the country at large.

Mr. McWilliams closed his remarks with an appeal to those present for their hearty support on the day of election.

A CAPABLE SPEAKER.

Mr. Dewart had spoken to the electors of the county of Peterborough on previous occasions, and was pleased to be present again in the interests of Mr. McWilliams, a young man who, if elected, would make a careful, energetic and capable representative.

In the present campaign there were many issues to consider, and many charges to meet, but these charges were vague and general in their character, and were to be expected from the Opposition at any election. The best and most upright leaders in the past had been most disgracefully abused, until they retired from politics, and after so doing they were praised and lauded by the press of the Opposition, which formerly had ridiculed their ability and integrity. In the same way the Hon. Mr. Ross was being abused, simply through partyism and for party purposes, and not through any real cause.

The cry that the issues of this campaign were of no account, was a mistaken idea. The policy of the Liberal Government was one laid down by strong and honest men, with a desire to formulate a policy which would commend itself to every fair minded citizen. He urged upon all present to look into the platform drawn up at the recent convention. It would be found a sound basis upon which to conduct a government.

An equally strong plea for support of the Liberal Government could be made either from the proud record of the past, or upon the platform recently decided upon. The administrative ability of the Government, was marked, and that the finances had been managed in the best interests of the province, there was no doubt. The committee composed of both Liberals and Conservatives, which had in hand the examining of the Government's expenditure books, have been able to find no fault during the entire term of the Liberal Government.

Mr. Dewart replied to some statements made by the leader of the Conservative party regarding the Administration of Justice, and to improper charges which he had made. Mr. Whitney had attacked the Liberal party, the Judges, and the Ministers of the Crown. Deliberate and reckless misstatements were being made by Mr. Whitney, and were being taken back at a later date. Mr. Whitney was a great imitator, and he would steal the Liberal policy wherever possible. This was very plainly demonstrated at the recent conventions, when many of the planks in Mr. Ross' platform were adopted by Mr. Whitney on the day afterwards.

The educational policy of the Government was one of much importance to all. During the administration of the Liberal Government in Ontario, over twenty millions of dollars had been expended for education outside of money raised by separate municipalities. One-sixth of the total revenue and expenditure of the province had been devoted to education and nearly 1000 public school buildings had been erected, and the number of trained teachers doubled, improvements had also been made in educational matters. The question of technical education was an important one and the Government was making the utmost preparation for manual training and domestic science in the schools, which were meeting with great success. As far as the Government was concerned what had been done was wise, showing forethought and prudence. But Mr. Whitney, despite all this, had said that the educational system should be turned upside down, and that it was antiquated. Mr. Whitney was a criticizer and not a builder.

A government in power must legislate for all classes and creeds in the province. It has to legislate not only for the liquor dealer and prohibitionists, but for those between the two. A government cannot be run upon any narrow issues, but it has to legislate for all classes.

The Government was entitled to much credit for its policy of expansion and development. There was a tendency for the electors to be influenced by false cries, but the whole truth should be learned before any decision is reached. The record of the Government was a creditable one and one which would commend itself to all and he felt sure that West Peterborough would remain true to the Liberal ranks, and return Mr. McWilliams by a handsome majority.

THE HIGH HONOUR OF HEADING THE POLL

Divided Between Ald. Batten and Ald. Tovey.

The honour of heading the poll at the municipal elections on Monday is divided between Aldermen-elect Batten and Tovey. The first returns placed Mr. Tovey in the lead, but the corrected figures made the total votes secured by each of the two candidates the same. It is certainly a credit to Mr. Tovey, a new man, to reach such high figures, but it is, perhaps, more creditable to Mr. Batten inasmuch as his past record for four years was open to the public scrutiny and that he stood the test so well is to be regarded as a tribute to the faithful and satisfactory service he has given.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hastie Celebrate their Fiftieth Anniversary.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hastie, in Lang, was on Dec. 30th, the scene of a very happy gathering of relatives and friends, the occasion being the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day.

Friends began arriving from a distance early in the day, and by three o'clock over thirty guests had assembled. Later in the evening dinner was served, the most attractive feature of this being a beautiful wedding cake sent from Glasgow, Scotland. This was made by their niece, Miss Maggie Hastie, and bore the dates of Dec. 30, 1854, and Dec. 30, 1904.

Three sons and four daughters were present with their families. These were Mrs. Geo. Smith, Lakehurst; Mrs. John M. Steele, Billings, Montana; Mrs. Thos. Graham, Indian River; Mr. David Hastie, Lang; Mr. Jas. Hastie, Westwood; and Miss Kate Hastie, the youngest daughter, and the only one of the children now at home.

Other guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Lang, and Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Nelson, of Keene; Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Brodie, Orillia; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Telford, Bridgenorth; Misses Annie and Nellie Renwick, Lang; Mr. D. A. Brodie, Washington, D.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Brodie were the recipients of many handsome presents, perhaps the finest of all being the two handsome upholstered chairs, the gift of their children.

Owing to the fact that quite a number of those present were from distant parts of Canada and the United States, who were here for the first time in years, the greater part of the evening was spent in pleasant conversation and reminiscences of old times. Later on, music and singing took the place of the conversation, after which the guests began taking their departure for their various homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Hastie were married Dec. 30th, 1854, at Linlithgow, Scotland, by Rev. Dr. Andrew Bell. Two years later, in 1856, they came to Canada, where they have since resided. Mr. Hastie is at present a Justice of the Peace for the East Riding of Peterborough.

They have eight children living, 39 grand children and one great grand child; of these seven children and thirteen grandchildren were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Hastie have with them the heartiest good wishes of all for many more years of happy married life.

MAKING UP.

When Little Brother's Sorry After Making Sister Angry.

When little brother's sorry,
At first he pouts awhile,
And then about his dimpled mouth
There grows a tiny smile.
He looks at sister sidewise,
And, creeping very near,
He offers her his rocking horse,
The toy he holds most dear!

MAKING UP.

But sister shakes her flaxen head,
"Why, then," he cries, "my kite?
My knife? My candy lion?
(I've only had one bite!)
You won't have any toys at all?
Why, then, I'll give you—this!
Because, you see, I'm sorry,
So, sister, take a kiss!"

—Hannah G. Ferrald in Youth's Companion.

PLAYING TURTLE.

A Game In Which Every One Is "It" at the Same Time.

Any number may play the game of turtle, and no one player is "it," for all are "it" together. The game begins by each choosing the kind of turtle he intends to be. One perhaps is a land tortoise, another a snapper, another a mud turtle and so on. Then they all sit in a row, resting their chins on their knees, and each holding his left ankle with his right hand and his right ankle with his left hand. This is a very difficult position to keep. At a given signal the turtles start for a goal a short distance away.

It is the object of the game for the turtles to waddle to the goal and back to the starting point without removing their hands from their feet. Many let go before the proper moment; the others shout "dead turtle" and keep on, leaving their unfortunate companion in the background. The rules of the game demand that he wait there until the first successful racer reaches him on his way back and touches him with his elbow, by which he is supposed to instill new life into the poor dead turtle. The latter immediately starts out again and finishes in the best style he can. As there are always several dead turtles, he is never lonely in his effort to succeed. The winner is, of course, the one who returns to the starting place first.

Japanese Legend About an Insect.

A curious tradition exists about a strange insect which is found only in Himeji, a pretty little town near the center of Japan. It seems there once lived a rich noble in a castle on the outskirts of the town who was famous for the magnificence of his dishes, among which were ten bowls of solid gold. In his employ was a maidservant, O-Kiku, to whom was intrusted the care of the plate. One day a gold dish was missing. She searched diligently, but in vain, and in despair drowned herself in a well. Her ghost returned each night to the spot and could be heard counting the dishes slowly with sobs, "Ichi-mai, ni-mai, san-mai, yo-mai, go-mai, roku-mai, chi-chi-mai, ha-chi-mai, ku-mai," to nine, when there would follow a loud, wailing cry, and the uncanny count would begin over again. At last the uneasy spirit passed into the body of an insect whose head somewhat resembled a ghost with long, tousled hair, and in that part of Japan it is considered unlucky to cultivate the chrysanthemum, as the girl's name, O-Kiku, means chrysanthemum.

Overconfidence.

The two strangers who were standing at a downtown corner crossed the street and accosted a young man on the opposite corner.

"Will you please tell me," said one of them, "which is the best way to go from here to Seventy-second street?"

"Well," replied the young man, "the best way, of course, is to take an automobile. If you can't do that I suggest a street car as the next best."

"Thank you," said the stranger. "I was so certain from your appearance that you would give a civil answer to a civil question that I bet a two dollar bill on that proposition with my friend here. I see I have lost. One can't always judge from appearances. Good morning, sir."

JAPAN'S PARLIAMENT.

Business-like Methods of House—The Work Rapidly Transacted—Keeps Verbatim Report of Its Proceedings.

Modern Japan in founding her institutions has had the advantage of being able to use as models the best throughout the civilized world. Those who have seen the Parliament at Tokio at work say that it is the most business-like institution in the world, and there is little talk in proportion to the work accomplished.

The work goes forward very rapidly. Even a government bill of the greatest importance is brought forward, debated and passed or rejected in less than a week. Speechmaking on the part of the members is discouraged. Four or five new acts of all sorts are an average week's work. This is because it is a rule that when the Government or a private member wishes to introduce a new bill it is not allowed to be presented to the House at the outset. It must first be submitted to a committee, which in private makes a thorough examination of it and digests all the arguments for and against it which are likely to be used in the contest. Then the committee sends the bill along to the House with a lengthy report upon it, and in nine cases out of ten the Parliament is guided by the report upon it and decides upon the measure with very little discussion.

Though they are elected by constituencies in just the same manner as in Canada, each member is paid at the rate of more than $80 a week for his services. The actual salary paid them is $1,000 a session, but a session lasts only twelve weeks. There are 376 members in the House, and when a man is elected he gets a number for the purpose of identification and is usually referred to by it, no matter where he may be. This number is painted in big figures on a hinged flap, which is attached to his desk in the Parliament Chamber. When he is seated he raises the flap on its hinge as a sign that he is ready for work for the day. When he leaves the sitting he lays the number flat again. The flap also serves another purpose. During a debate, when the member wishes to show his approval or disapproval of what is being said or to attract attention to his claim to be allowed to speak, he rattles this flap and by long practice has become so skilful that he can make more noise this way than any other. When he wishes to make a speech he further emphasizes his desire by shouting out his number, and if the president wishes to recognise him he repeats the number.

In the centre of the chamber is a high tribune, and when a member wishes to speak he takes his stand there in view of the whole house. The president sits just behind him and rings a bell whenever there is any breach of order. The Chamber is semi-circular in form, and the members sit together at little groups of desks, three or four together, all around.

Every word spoken in the House of Representatives in Tokio from the day of its opening has been taken down and carefully preserved. This is the only Parliament in the world which has a complete verbatim report of all its proceedings. Shortly before its establishment a party of students invented a system of shorthand which was capable of grappling with the difficulties of the Japanese language, and after practice they found they could keep pace with the fastest speaker. When the new Parliament was formed some of these stenographers were engaged, with the result that the Parliament records are complete.

THE WHITE FLAG.

I sent my love two roses—one
As white as driven snow,
And one a blushing royal red,
A flaming Jacqueminot.

I meant to touch and test my fate;
That night I should divine,
The moment I should see my love,
If her true heart were mine.

For if she holds me dear, I said,
She'll wear my blushing rose;
If not, she'll wear my cold Lamarque,
As white a winter's snows.

My heart sank when I met her, cure
I had been overbold,
For on her breast my pale rose lay
In virgin whiteness cold.

Yet with low words she greeted me,
With smiles divinely tender;
Upon her cheek the red rose dawned—
The white rose meant surrender.

FITTING A SKIRT.

A Hint That May Be of Value to the Home Dressmaker.

Mrs. Howard, a designer of costumes in Chicago, in an address to a convention of dressmakers, gave a hint that will be of value to women who make their own clothes at home.

"Almost every woman has curvature of the spine," she said. "She sits unevenly, she walks unevenly, and the two sides of her gown cannot be made just alike. I call my customers my patients, and I study them carefully.

"No two things are more alike than dressmaking and architecture, and of the two dressmaking is the harder. An architect can carry out his plans exactly, for in building he uses such unchangeable materials as brick and stone. A dressmaker can never picture a model and build up a gown exactly like it. Take a velvet gown, for instance. There never was one made that looks like the design, the velvet is so unmanageable.

"In fitting a skirt I use a plumb line—that is, a blasting thread run down the skirt exactly in the middle. This line guides me so that I am not tempted to pull the skirt backward and forward to make it fit, as is so often done. My plumb line must be kept straight always."

Use the plumb line, home dressmakers, and get the hang of your skirt straight.

UTILIZING A WHATNOT.

How to Transform One Into a Pretty China Cabinet.

An ingenious woman recently discovered a new use for her grandmother's old corner whatnot that had stood in a corner of the attic for many moons, and possessors of similar obsolete pieces of furniture may be interested to know how she transformed it into a pretty china cabinet. She first gave it a bath and good scrubbing with hot water and soda. This process removed most of the paint, and what remained on was sandpapered to facilitate its removal. After it was thoroughly dry a couple of coats of white enamel paint were applied and all the little knobs silvered. Tiny silver hooks were screwed in the under side of the shelves for cups. A plate rail was added at a small cost before the cabinet was painted. This china stand occupies a corner of the dining room in the owner's country house, and its absence of color serves admirably to set off the delicate ware displayed on it.

A white china cabinet does not appeal to all tastes nor harmonise with all dining room furnishings, but it would be just as easy to transform a whatnot into a golden or quartered oak cabinet as into a white one.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE SONG OF THE PICK.

With straining sinew and loin,
With shoulders stooping and round,
A strong man, shorn of his beauty and grace,
Delved, mole-like, under the ground.
Stroke, stroke, stroke.
With the steel's monotonous click
Beating time to an air of dust and smoke
He sang the Song of the Pick:

"Delve, delve, delve,
At the endless veins of coal!
Delve, delve, delve,
Till it seems both body and soul
Are black with the dust and dark
Of this tomb far under the sod.
Do you think that a prayer from a hole so deep
Could ever reach up to God?

"I am the maker of steam,
I run the spindle and loom,
I make the light that lights your homes,
But I live my life in gloom.
I fetch your letters and love,
I carry them over the sea,
I bring your heart to the waiting heart
Which had broken but for me.

"O men with sisters dear!
O men with mothers and wives!
It is not fuel you're burning up,
But human creatures' lives!
Work, work, work!
Am I the dead or the quick?
I am digging my grave as well as coal—
It's hell, this Song of the Pick."

Hark, hark, hark!
There's a sob comes up from the ground.
Oh, hark, hark, hark,
To the pitiful, pleading sound!
Our brothers are buried alive!
By God, but the soul turns sick
At the thought of those men in the mark and dark,
Where the firedamp seeks the uncovered spark,
Singing the Song of the Pick.

CLOSING OF DOCKYARD.

Valuable New Machinery Was Being Installed at Halifax.

The closing of the Halifax Dockyard came as a great surprise, and one report has it that the Dockyard is to be used for the purposes of a new Canadian navy, while another favored idea is that the closing down is only temporary and was for experimental purposes.

But officials in the yard feel sure that it is "all over" and an Imperial Dockyard in Halifax is a thing of the past.

The conditions at the Dockyard show how unexpected was the order to close down. Only a few weeks ago a new brick building to be used as a sugar store was completed. Recently new machinery to the value of $15,000 had been received and was being installed. On the 15th December the carpenters had just finished putting ventilators on one of the buildings in the yard, when orders were received to close the ventilators in with canvas.

Just what will be done with the valuable machinery and plant in the yard is a question.

Workmen have covered up pieces of the machinery with canvas and tarpaulins. According to the present orders but four men will be kept at the dockyard by the Admiralty authorities after the stores have been shipped.

The sweeping program of Sir John Fisher and its results in Halifax so far have led to many references to the present First Lord of the Sea when he was in command upon this station five or six years ago. It is recalled that during the years he was on this station less work than usual was done at the Halifax Dockyard and more at Bermuda, which was contrary to the conditions existing during the term of office of some of his predecessors, but the question which is worrying many of the yard employes is what are they going to do?

The officials on the establishment are, of course, permanent employes, and will be provided with other situations by the Admiralty. But there are men in the yards not on the establishment who have spent all their lives in the service and had come to look upon their positions as good for life.

It was stated that there was a fund of $30,000 or $40,000 which it was thought would be available for superannuations in connections with the Dockyard and that some of the older employes might be superannuated and others be bonused. Should this be the case it will to some extent relieve the situation.

It is also reported that Newfoundland would be abandoned as a station. It is assumed that the settlement of the French shore difficulty and the recent ratification of a treaty with the United States has led to the decision to withdraw the fleet from these waters.

Under the new program it is thought the Atlantic Squadron will make one call at Halifax in the summer, remaining in port only about a week and proceeding then to Bermuda, from whence they go to English waters.

Japanese Beans.

The statement, oft repeated, that a Japanese will fight for twenty-four hours on a ration of two or three beans and a sip of tea is at last explained. The Japanese is not the common horticultural bean with which our gardens are acquainted, but a vegetable often a yard in length and large enough to fill a quart measure. A single bean makes a meal for a hungry plowman.

Modesty of Erin's Daughter.

English Lady (to Irish girl)—How is it that you never speak of belonging to the Irish race, my dear? Irish girl—Because it is sinful to boast, madam.

Why Needed in Every Home

TO OVERCOME THE MOST COMMON AND ANNOYING OF HUMAN ILLS.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Indigestion, constipation and torpid action of the liver and kidneys are known in every home.

Both on account of the distress and discomfort which accompanies them and as a cause of other ills of a more painful and deadly nature, these derangements require prompt attention.

In every home there is needed more or less frequently a treatment which can be depended on to regulate the organs of digestion and excretion.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have become the most popular family medicine extant, because they exactly meet the requirements.

They are unique in that they act directly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, and thus ensure a prompt regulating and invigorating of these organs.

The result is good digestion and assimilation and the prompt removal of the poisonous waste matter from the body.

One pill a dose at bedtime two or three times a week soon cleanses the system and removes the cause of pain and ill health.

Mr. R. Carr, Point Alexander, Renfrew Co., Ont., writes, "Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have done me wonderful good. Being troubled with kidney disease and heart affection, I tried them with excellent results, and would not think of being without them in the house."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box. 11

When the governor had left the room, George fancied Lydia's face turned whiter. She clasped her hands tensely in her lap and remained silent. An evil thought took possession of him. George Buckley was very human. Misfortune had inclined his nature to suspicion, and the governor's high rank contrasted to his own humble position made him blind to the possibility that he could be more favored on the present occasion. It seemed as clear as daylight to him that Lydia and Telfare had quarreled and that she was simply using him as a tool through which to strike at his distinguished rival. To her evident surprise, he also got up.

"You are not going?" she said.

"Yes," he returned frigidly. "I dropped in only for a moment."

"You are going because, because"—

"Because," he said, drawing himself up to his full height, "much as I should like to accommodate you, I find it quite impossible to serve in the capacity you evidently wish to assign to me tonight." He took the flower from his coat and with steady fingers placed it on the piano. "I must decline, too, to accept your offering. When the moment comes for you and your honored guest to make up your difference, perhaps this little flag of truce may prove useful."

"You say this to me," she exclaimed—"to me?"

He bowed coldly. "God knows I did not want to!" suddenly burst from his lips. And he stalked from the room.

For several minutes she stood leaning on the piano, and then she turned from the room to the veranda. She heard the click of the gate latch as it closed after Buckley and the low voices of the governor and her father through the open window of the sitting room. She was calm, but white to the lips. She began to look for her handkerchief, which she had dropped. She returned to the drawing room, looking carefully at the carpet near the spot where she had sat. It was not there. She returned again to the veranda and then went down the graveled walk to the summer house, entering the compartment adjoining the one in which Telfare and Buckley had held their conversation. There on the bench lay her handkerchief. Grasping it in her tense fingers, she sat down and buried her face in her hands.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE next morning, after breakfast, Mrs. Hillyer called her husband aside. He followed her into the parlor, where she led him to get beyond the hearing of the negroes in the dining room.

"What's the matter with George?" she asked him.

"Why, nothin' as I know of," he replied. "I haven't seen him this mornin'. Is anything wrong?"

"Looks like he hasn't slept a wink all night," said the woman. "He didn't tetch a thing on the table, an' his hands shook awful. Do you know, somehow, I believe him an' Governor Telfare quarreled up at Cranstons' last night. I never saw him look like that before. He's up in the company bedroom. I passed through the hall just now an' seed 'im settin' at the window lookin' out. Mr. Hillyer, go up an' see what's the matter with 'im. He'll talk to you."

With his heart in his mouth, Hillyer went up the stairs, sliding his hand on the banister railing. George turned his head as he entered the open door, and rose quickly, as if ashamed to be seen there without a reason for it.

"George, what's the matter with you? Ain't you well this mornin'?" the old man questioned gently.

"Not very, Mr. Hillyer," George said, dropping his eyes, "but I'll feel better when I get to work. I'm going down pretty soon."

"That hain't it, my boy—that hain't it," said Hillyer, his sympathetic eyes resting on the troubled face before him. "Some'n' has gone wrong, George, an' I wish you'd tell me about it. I'd take it as a favor—so I would. I—I—feel a big interest in you. I don't know as I could ever explain how big it is. Tell me, George."

"It wouldn't do any good," the young man replied slowly, "and might disturb you a little—you are so kind hearted."

"I want to know, George."

"Well, I will tell you, Mr. Hillyer. Do you know what is the hardest thing on earth to bear? It is to be insulted, grossly insulted, by a man whom you can't strike." Buckley then told all that had taken place between him and Telfare.

"He said that to you!" cried the old man. "Yes, I know what it would mean to a proud sperit like yore'n, my boy, an' it's simply awful—awful! He's a cowardly dog, but that don't make you feel any better. Men in the northern states don't understand how we kin feel as we do on that line, but it's bred in the bone with us."

Hillyer suddenly turned from the room and went downstairs. His wife heard him going out at the gate and called to him from the veranda, but he walked on without heeding her. At the street corner he quickened his step,

"Then you shall wear this."

going faster and faster till he reached the warehouse. He saw Kenner and Hanks in the office, but he passed on to George's room in the rear. There on the table lay Buckley's revolver. Thrusting it into the pocket of his short coat he hurried out at the side door and went up the railroad to the Johnston House. Going into the office he approached the desk and asked the clerk for Governor Telfare.

"He left on the 8 o'clock train this morning, Mr. Hillyer," said the clerk. "He had us call him at 7."

"Gone?" The old man stared blankly.

"Yes, he got off, but he'll be back next Sunday. He engaged the best room in the house and gave orders that it was not to be used by any one else."

"Gone!" Hillyer turned and started away aimlessly. In the hall leading to the street he was met by Basoom Truitt, who stopped him.

"Say, old man, what's the matter? Sick?" Hillyer stared at him, but made no reply. "Look y' here, what ails you anyway?" The old soldier placed his hand on the merchant's shoulder and turned him into a vacant room on the side of the hall, a room used by commercial travelers for displaying their wares to the village storekeepers. Hillyer sank into a chair and groaned. Truitt heard some one passing in the hall and closed the door.

"I know some'n's wrong," he said. "Some'n's wrong when a deacon in the church an' a man o' yore stamp goes round white as a grave rock with a 44 caliber gun in his pocket an' his teeth chatterin' on as warm a day as this is."

Hillyer told him what had happened to George and his own failure to meet Telfare. He told it in an unsteady voice, his lips quivering as he spoke. Then, with his head down, he added: "Bas, you know I spilt human blood thirty year ago. I've prayed all them years to git God to blot out the crime, an' yet, after all that, if I'd 'a' met Telfare just now, I—I reckon, if he hadn't apologised to that pore boy I'd 'a' shot 'im dead in his tracks. I was all upset about it. Oh, my God, I'm as bad as I was away back when I was young an' hot blooded!"

Truitt shrugged his shoulders. "Then I reckon it's better fer all concerned that Telfare went off when he did. Now, look here, old man." Truitt bent and took the revolver from Hillyer and put it into his own pocket. "You're entirely unfitted to run round with a loaded gun in yore pocket. You take my advice an' go back to yore store. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll study over this an' try to come to some conclusion what's best, then I'll come down an' see you. I'm interested in George Buckley, an' don't you let that slide out o' yore mind in yore excitement. He's been a friend true an' tried to me an' mine, an' I'll stand to 'im or die. Now, you go on to the warehouse."

"And when will you be down?" asked the merchant.

"Jest as soon as I can see some way out o' the difficulty," said Truitt evasively. "I tell you, you are too excitable—you go off half cocked. That's what got you in the trouble that you say has worried you so much. Why, even of you had shot the scalawag just now, you'd 'a' done it too quick to've had any fun watchin' 'im squirm. I'd ruther see a dern coward that's wronged me or mine beg fer life 'an to see 'im die. We all die—that's common as pig tracks in wet weather, but only the dirty, sneakin' cowards is afeard of it. You go on now; we are a-losin' time. I'll come down—I'll come down! I ain't no anarchist, goin' round killin' big men in office, but that feller's got to be 'tended to, an' I'll study up some'n'."

When Hillyer had gone back down the railroad to the warehouse Truitt sauntered into the hotel office. "What time does the next train go to Atlanta?" he asked.

"There's another on the Southern in ten minutes," answered the clerk.

CHAPTER XXIII.

WHEN Truitt arrived in the great, bustling passenger depot in Atlanta it was noon. He observed his way through the spinning skein of human beings to the street. A dense odorous veiled at him and gesticulated with their whips, but he paid no heed to them. Seeing a blue coated policeman on a corner, he approached him.

"Could you tell a feller ef he'd be apt to see the governor at the statehouse this time o' day?" he asked.

"No; I reckon he's out at the mansion about now," replied the officer. "It's dinner time."

"Well, I'll go out thar, then," Truitt said and turned away. It was a twenty minutes' walk through the business portion of the city to the executive mansion on Peachtree street, near the best known and oldest clubhouse in the city. The building was a modern red brick structure standing back from the street on a well kept lawn, and as the gaunt mountaineer entered the iron gate and proceeded up the walk he saw a uniformed negro manservant at the door.

"I want to see Governor Telfare," Truitt said. "Is he about?"

"Yes, he's at home," the dapper negro replied, eying Truitt from head to foot with a contemptuous glance, "but he don't see nobody this time o' day."

"Oh, that's it!" And, to the evident surprise of the servant, the mountaineer, without removing his broad brimmed slouch hat, passed by him into the hall. "Well, you tell 'im thar's a feller out here that wants to see 'im, an' that dern quick."

"But I told you"—

"I know what you told me, you black idiot! You tell 'im what I told you, an' be in a hurry about it!"

With the whites of his rolling eyes decidedly in evidence the negro backed out of the hall mumbling something Truitt could not catch. He came back in a minute.

"The governor says he's occupied just now an' ain't at home to nobody. He was just lyin' down to take a nap. He won't let nobody disturb 'im at this time o' day."

"He won't, hey?" Truitt sneered. "Well, you tell 'im I said a man wants to see 'im that kin beat the hind sights off'n 'im in the next election ef he wants to. You tell 'im that a man wants to see 'im on a matter o' life an' death. Tell 'im that, you black fool, an' see what he'll say."

The negro was absent about three minutes, and then he came back and sullenly motioned Truitt to enter the door on the right of the hall. Telfare was standing at a green covered writing table and frowned and stared impatiently at Truitt, who had not yet removed his hat.

"I believe I do not recall your face," he said, extending his hand, "but I meet so many friends in going about over the state. You are Mr."—

"Oh, about as common, thank you—a little headache, that's all. How do you come on?"

"I'm very well, thank you, but I did not catch your name."

"Oh, my name? It's Bascom Truitt."

"Well, Mr. Truitt, to be plain, you must know that I'm a very busy man, and if you will tell me right out what you called to see me about I'll see if we can get around to it. My private secretary usually meets visitors and makes a note of what they wish, but he is always out at lunch at this hour."

Truitt laughed. Taking a plug of tobacco from his pocket, he tore off a piece and put it between his teeth. "Lord bless yore soul," he said, "no private secretary couldn't 'tend to this job fer you."

"I don't understand you." Telfare was waxing impatient; his frown had deepened on his dark brow.

"Well, it's jest this a-way, governor," Truitt replied. "It seems that as much as you want to please yore constituents you've made one of 'em up at Darley as mad as thunder at you."

"To whom do you refer?" Telfare was staring blankly.

"Why, I 'to whom' to a young feller—to George Buckley, who, it seems, you made sorter mad t'other night over at old man Cranston's house."

"And he has sent you to me?" sneered Telfare.

"No; he never mentioned it to me. But it seems—at least it seems to me from what I gather—that you insulted 'im like a dog—told 'im right out that you 'n' him couldn't breathe the same air, walk under the same sky, an' so forth."

"What I said on that occasion was quite a private matter," said Telfare, "and, to be plain with you, I don't intend to discuss it."

"But, you see, governor"—Truitt was chewing his tobacco slowly and eying his victim like a cat watching a mouse—"you see, another feller up thar, that hain't got a thing agin his record—a feller that never had no kin in jail, nur any hung, nur none in state politics—a feller that fit on the right side all through the war—that feller hain't satisfied. He don't feel right to set still an' let you demean a pore boy that's doin' his level best to raise his head up."

Telfare turned pale. He looked as if he were about to fall.

"You came to bring a challenge?" he gasped.

LATEST NEWS OF SPORT.

B.A.C. HOCKEY TEAM WON GREAT VICTORY

Defeated George Street Guild Team at Hockey by 8—2.

Great is the B. A. C. That this term is fully applicable to this club was fully demonstrated at the Brock street rink last night. It will be remembered that last summer the baseball team representing this body of young men won great fame, going through the season without a single defeat having nothing but victories to their credit. So successful was the club at baseball, that it was decided to play some hockey also and consequently a game took place last Monday evening between the George Street Young Men's Guild team and the B. A. C.

Score—B. A. C., 5; Guild, 2.

The game was replete with sensational hockey and everybody shone. The winners had some advantage in weight but the well lubricated combination of the Guild boys counterbalanced this advantage.

For the winners Samuel Moore wasn't particular whether he stopped the puck with his shins, hands, stick or stomach, and he "done Noble". Wallace Wood played stellar hockey at point, rifling and rushing like a whirlwind. Percy Campbell did very effective work at cover, his checking and on runs being a feature. Ernie Best at centre had all kinds of speed and covered himself with glory, perspiration and things. Ross Dobbin and Jamieson did fine work on the wings throughout. R. N. Jolliffe's position was at rover. As will be noticed the team is a formidable one.

The Guild forwards were all good skaters and stick handlers and play well together. Mern and Brownscombe were the stars. Weeks did good work at cover point and Metheral used his stick with effect. Craig had troubles of his own with the hot firing of the B. A. C. forwards and had he got stopped as many as he did the score would have been larger.

The score at half time was 3-0.

A fair sized crowd saw a good game. The winners will be heard of later.

TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE SCHEDULE

District Arranged and one Schedule Drawn up.

The Sub-Committee of the Trent Valley League have arranged the districts for the coming season. There will not be as many teams as last year, nor as many as had been expected at the recent annual meeting; however, at least ten teams are promised and the quality of hockey will likely be of a better class than in any previous year. The districts are as follows:—

No. 1.—Picton, Belleville, Brighton and Colborne.

No. 2.—Cobourg, T. A. S., of Peterborough, Campbellford and Keene.

No. 3.—Bobcaygeon and Fenelon Falls.

The convenor of No. 1 district is Mr. Frank Bowlon and the district representatives are called to meet in Belleville on Wednesday of this week.

The schedule for No. 2 district has been arranged as follows:—

January 16.—Cobourg at T. A. S.
January 16.—Campbellford at Keene.
January 12.—T. A. S. at Campbellford.
January 12.—Keene at Cobourg.
January 16.—Keene at T. A. S.
January 16.—Campbellford at Cobourg.
January 19.—T. A. S. at Keene.
January 19.—Cobourg at Campbellford.
January 24.—Cobourg at Keene.
January 24.—Campbellford at T. A. S.
January 24.—Keene at Campbellford.
January 26.—T. A. S. at Cobourg.

Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon will arrange their own games. The first round must be played off by February 1. It will be observed that Port Hope has withdrawn.

Peterborough and Lindsay have failed to enter teams.

FIRST SENIOR GAME FRIDAY NIGHT

Port Perry and Peterboro' will Clash at Brock Street Rink.

The first league hockey game of the season will be played on the Brock street rink next Friday evening between Port Perry and the local team. This game will open the O. H. A. season in Peterborough and the public should turn out in large numbers to encourage the team. The boys have been practising hard for the past month and though they were against senior teams, much stronger than those with whom the locals will struggle in the intermediate series. The team for Friday night will be the strongest that has as yet represented the club and the boys are confident of winning their first match.

To-morrow night's City League games should prove exceptionally good contests. The league is determined to have clean hockey played and the games will not be in the same class as those of last week. The four strongest teams in the league will meet and two fine contests are assured.

At 8 o'clock the Farriers and T.A.S. will clash and at 9 o'clock the Karnots and Colonials will play. The latter team has been considerably strengthened since their first game and expect to give the Karnots a great struggle.

The Review still continues to flunk and refuses to accept the Examiner's challenge to a game of hockey. Who'd have thought it had come to this?

The following teams will line-up at 7 o'clock to-night at the Brock street rink for practice:—

Seniors.		Juniors.
Wasson	Goal.	Fitzpatrick
Glover, Meagher	Point.	Moore
Crowley	Cover-point.	Long
Cavanagh	Rover.	McWilliams
Morgan	Centre.	McFarlane
Parnell	Right wing.	Smith
Graham	Left wing.	Hall

The Beavers played a fast game of hockey on the river Monday with the Aberdeens, the score being 2-2. The line-up was as follows:—

Beavers.		Aberdeens.
B. Halpin	Goal.	S. Wade
W. Worboy	Point.	W. Clancy
J. McNern	Cover Point.	A. Harrison
L. Johnston	Centre.	B. Harrison
G. Rose	Rover.	J. Seymour
G. Gannua	Left Wing.	H. Harrison
G. Hawley	Right Wing.	H. Belleghom

Referee, H. Staunton; goal umpires, F. Scriver, R. Halpin.

The Beavers hockey team challenges any team in town under sixteen years of age.

The Maple Leafs claim a game by default from the Young Canadians. The former went to play the return game with the latter on Monday, but they failed to appear. The Maple Leaf team is as follows:—

Goal, W. Killenbeck.
Point, Hugh Connors.
Cover point, W. Conroy.
Rover, Ed. Legrandeur.
Centre, Bernard Heenan.
Right wing, Guido Desaultel.

The "Happy Thoughts" do hereby challenge "Mr. Adam Hall's Souvenirs" to a game of hockey to be played in the Brock street rink as soon as the ice can be procured.

The Aberdeens organized for the season last evening and elected the following officers:—

President, Hon. J. R. Stratton.
Secretary-Treasurer, C. Ray.
Manager, H. Staunton.
Captain, R. Harrison.
Mascott, C. Brown.

The team is open for challenge from any team in town; average age 15 years. Young Nationals preferred.

The Riverside hockey team challenges the George Street Guild team to a game of hockey to be played in the Brock street rink. Date to be arranged convenient to both teams.

So dear old Lindsay has lost "Winnie's" Winchester who has gone to Pittsburg. Poor Lindsay.

The Executive of the Guild Hockey League met last evening, when it was decided to postpone the opening games for one week. It was also agreed to play the games on Thursday nights and that all O. H. A., Trent Valley and City League players be barred except juniors who catch this year's team, but who have not played junior hockey before.

Calumet beat the Michigan Soo team on Monday. The line-up reminds one of this district last year. On the winning team figured Teddy McMillan of last year's Belleville team at point; Strike, of last year's Picton team at centre, on the Michigan team Eddie Howell, the ex-Peterborough star played cover point.

CURLING.

The President versus Vice-President match was very evenly contested yesterday. The President was four points up with one game to play at six o'clock, but alas, skip R. J. Duty to Conserve Forests.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Aubrey White, Deputy Commissioner of Crown Lands of the Province of Ontario, gave an address before the American Forestry Congress which opened here yesterday. He said that it had been his aim to do everything to educate the people to conserve the forests not only from the standpoint of beauty but of commerce as well.

Chief Justice Will Enquire.

Sandwich, Jan. 4.—The Ontario Government has ordered Chief Justice Falconbridge of Toronto, to inquire into the Sandwich school affair, wherein the Separate School supporters claim the Public School Board has illegally taken possession of $3,300 worth of property. He will take evidence and report to the Minister of Education shortly.

A DEBRIS-STREWN DESERT.

Stoessel Blew Up Forts, Ships, Magazines, Etc., Before Capitulation.

Che Foo, Jan. 4.—The fort where the negotiations for the surrender of Port Arthur were held is called the Big Eagle's Nest, and it is near Rihlung Mountain. According to reports of the negotiations received here, Gen. Stoessel proposed that the Russian sick and wounded should remain under Russian medical supervision, and that the Japanese transfer the non-combatants was acceptable to Gen. Nogi, but the Russian proposal that the Russians should march out under arms caused some controversy.

Blew Up the Ships.

Midshipman Klisorich, commanding a launch, which left Port Arthur at 8 o'clock Monday night, said yesterday: "No shot has been fired at Port Arthur for two days. That which Chinese heard Monday night was the Russians blowing up forts, ships, magazines, warehouses, docks, and everything valuable. When I left Port Arthur the fortress and the town were almost completely wrecked. The warships died hard. Several explosions were necessary to complete the wrecking of them. The Sevastopol, after catching fire, exploded and turned turtle. The harbor entrance is blocked with sunken ships. The only navigable craft now at Port Arthur are the hospital ships Kassan and Mongolia. You need expect no more ships from Port Arthur, as these are unable to leave on account of the blocking of the harbor.

Dined Before Negotiating.

"Col. Reiss represented General Stoessel in the negotiations for surrender. A table was spread with wine and food at the Eagle's Nest, and the envoys treated each other with great courtesy, which quickly melted into informal good-fellowship. Each complimented the other on the bravery of their forces. The statement that there remained 5,000 fighting men at Port Arthur is misleading, because of a majority of these half are sick or slightly wounded There has been for some time no proper bandages, and wounds have been dressed with hemp," said Midshipman Klisorich. "The news that Gen. Stoessel was prepared to treat for surrender was received by the soldiers with the feeling of utmost relief.

CARD FROM ALD. HICKS

To the Electors of Peterborough:—

It is again a pleasant duty to publicly express my appreciation of the honour you have done me in electing me as one of your Aldermen for the second term. This may fairly be accepted as an endorsation of my services during the past year.

The vote recorded in my favour was almost entirely an independent one—the credit of my election being due to the loyal assistance of my supporters, and not to any organization of my own.

I also want to pay a tribute to the ladies, who came out and voted for me in such influential numbers.

Your obedient servant,

"SCRATCH A RUSSIAN YOU FIND A TARTAR"

Russia's Grateful Recognition of Gen. Stoessel's Gallant Defence.

Special to the Examiner

St. Petersburg, January 5. — Few incidents of the whole war have aroused more bitter criticism than the last announcement officially issued by the General Staff that Gen. Stoessel will have to come and stand court martial for surrendering the fortress of Port Arthur.

MR. OKE LOST SOME OYSTERS

His Port Hope Store was Robbed on Sunday Night

Mr. S. A. Oke of town, is largely interested in a similar business in Port Hope, the business there being in the name of J. B. Oke, and on Sunday night a daring robbery was committed in the store. It was a bad start for the New Year, and also for Mr. Oke. About 11.30 o'clock Nightwatchman Garbutt saw some person in Mr. Oke's store, lighting matches. Mr. Garbutt intended to place a man at the front door while he went to the back, but before this could be done the thief had made his escape through the rear. Entrance was made by walking through the glass in the door, but the only thing missing is a few oysters. Chief Bond was present shortly afterwards and has strong suspicions as to the guilty party, and arrests are likely to follow.

BESIEGED MEN WORN TO SHADOWS

Garrison Says Stoessel Did Everything Humanly Possible.

HIS LAST DISPATCH TO CZAR

Flag of the Rising Sun Floats Over the Captured Cithadel of Port Arthur---March Out of Prisoners of War Takes Place To-day---Japanese Tribute to Russian Bravery.

St Petersburg, Jan. 5.—General Stoessel's last despatch, dated Jan. 1, prior to the surrender of Port Arthur, details the Japanese attack of Dec. 31 and concludes as follows:

"We shall be obliged to capitulate, but everything is in the hands of God. We have suffered fearful losses. Great Sovereign, pardon us. We have done everything humanly possible. Judge us, but be merciful. Nearly eleven months of uninterrupted struggles have exhausted us. Only one-quarter of the garrison is alive, and of this number the majority are sick, and, being obliged to act on the defensive without even short intervals for repose, are worn to shadows."

OVER THE CITADEL.

Flag of the Rising Sun Floats Above Port Arthur.

Headquarters of the Japanese Third Army at Port Arthur, Jan. 3, via Che Foo, Jan. 4, 8 p.m., censored.—The flag of the Rising Sun floats to-night over the captured citadel of Port Arthur.

When the news of the surrender of the fortress reached the soldiers yesterday, the Japanese fraternized freely with their late enemies.

With nightfall came the great fires, rising from the camp like a blazing halo, while great choruses of "banzai" re-echoed through the hills.

The entire garrison and all the non-combatants will march out of the city Jan. 5 to Kchuthwel, whence the Russian officers will be transported to Dalny, thence to Japan or they may desire.

The prisoners of war will be retained until they can be transferred to Dalny, and thence to Japan.

The conference between the Russian and Japanese commissioners, at which the terms of the surrender were arranged, took place at Shuishiying at 1 p.m. Monday afternoon and lasted until 8 o'clock at night.

Japs Lost 50,000 Soldiers.

Thus Japan has won the great Russian stronghold in the Far East, after a five months' siege, in which she lost over 50,000 soldiers, who were put out of action in the most sanguinary and desperate fighting the world has ever seen.

The surrender of the fortress at the present time is a surprise even to the Japanese, as the desperate determination and courage of the Russians indicated that the struggle would be one to the bitter end.

The first definite intimation of the Russian intention to surrender came Jan. 1, at 4 p.m., when the Russian envoys approached the Japanese lines south of the village of Shuishiying. They were met by Japanese staff officers, to whom they delivered the letter of Gen. Stoessel to Gen. Nogi, asking to have a time for parley arranged. In this letter, as already known, Gen. Stoessel admitted the hopelessness of further continuing the struggle, and that he was prepared to surrender in order to save the lives of the remnant of the brave garrison which had fought so long and so well, provided suitable terms could be arranged. He asked for a conference to settle these terms. Major-General Ijichi, with a large escort, left the Japanese headquarters at 11 o'clock Monday morning and rode to the appointed place. Shortly before 1 o'clock the Russian commissioners arrived, accompanied by a cavalry escort.

The conference took place with few preliminaries and lasted until eight o'clock at night.

Allowed the Boats to Escape.

London, Jan. 5.—The Daily Mail's correspondent with Gen. Nogi's army before Port Arthur, in a despatch yesterday morning says that the Russian torpedo boat destroyers were purposely permitted to escape from Port Arthur under the eyes of the Japanese fleet as a tribute to the bravery of the Russian garrison.

Order in Port Arthur.

Tokio, Jan. 5.—The following report was received from Gen. Nogi at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon:

"Order is maintained at Port Arthur by the officers. The people are quiet.

"Our minute investigation was not finished until Tuesday night.

"The total number of inhabitants is about 35,000, of whom 25,000 are soldiers and sailors. The total number of sick or wounded is 20,000.

"Common provisions and bread are plentiful, but there is a scarcity of meat and vegetables. There are no medical supplies."

The Actual Transfer.

Tokio, Jan. 5.—General Nogi reports to the Army Department that on Jan. 3 the commissioners of both the Japanese and Russian armies concluded their conference, and that from the morning of Jan. 4 the actual transfer of war materials at Port Arthur as property of the Japanese Government commenced.

Japs Take 25,000 Prisoners.

Tokio, Jan. 5.—The Japanese captured 25,000 prisoners at Port Arthur. The total number of the inhabitants is 35,000, of whom 20,000 are sick.

Russ Torpedoes Disarming.

Che Foo, Jan. 5.—A despatch received here from Tsingtau, Shantung Peninsula, under yesterday's date, says the Russian torpedo boat destroyers Smirli and Berki, which, with a merchantman having 800 soldiers on board, arrived at Tsingtau, Jan. 2, are disarming.

Czar Gives Option.

Tokio, Jan. 5.—The Emperor of Russia has cabled to General Stoessel saying that the giving of their parole or the alternative of imprisonment is optional with the officers.

The Key of Peace.

Tokio, Jan. 5.—The Jiji, discussing the capture of Port Arthur, reviews the price paid in lives, and says: "We ought to keep Port Arthur in our hands so long as our Empire exists. Port Arthur is the key to peace in the Far East, and it is our duty to keep the key in our hands."

Most Serious Feature of Fall.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 5.—One of the most serious features of Port Arthur's fall, according to The Novosti, is the effect upon the already questionable neutrality of the Chinese. Loss of prestige in the eyes of the Orientals, says the paper, is much more serious than the strategical value of the fortress.

Kuropatkin Has 325,000 Men.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 5.—The number of troops at General Kuropatkin's disposal is about 225,000, and the transportation over the Siberian Railroad is proving inadequate.

Will March Out To-Day.

Headquarters of the Third Japanese Army, Jan. 3, via Fusan, Jan. 5.—The request of the Russians for food, medicines and physicians for their sick and wounded has been granted. Itse, Wantse and Tayangko forts were taken over by the Japanese at noon yesterday. The date on which the Russian prisoners of war will be marched out has been delayed until to-day.

Capt. Thacker in Canada.

Victoria, B.C., Jan. 5.—Capt. M. C. Thacker, who was Canadian military attache with Oku's army, and witnessed the actions at Anchan, Liaoyang and Shaho, arrived by the Empress of Japan yesterday morning. Capt. Thacker was invalided after the battle of the Shaho, returning a month after the great battle. Capt. Thacker says the Russian field gun is superior to that of the Japanese, though the lack of common shells handicaps its service. The Japanese gun is better served. The Shimoose explosive is very effective, but not more so than lyddite. The cavalry arm has been notably absent in all engagements. Capt. Thacker, now en route to Ottawa, was decorated by the Mikado before leaving with the Order of the Sacred Treasure.

FORTNIGHTLY CLUB'S NEXT LECTURE.

Mr. Edmund Jones to Speak on the Temagami District

Mr. Edmund Jones of Toronto, a well known explorer, will deliver a lecture on the subject of the Temiscamingue District before the Fortnightly Club at the Y.M.C.A. Hall, next Monday evening. The lecture will be illustrated by lantern slides and will be most interesting. Mr. Jones has been all through this district by canoe and on foot, and as the author of books on canoeing and camping, he has accumulated a great deal of information. The Temagami district is generally coterminous with the Ontario Temagami Forest Reserve, and through this district will pass the Transcontinental Railway. A lecture such as Mr. Jones will give on the subject, will be of exceptional interest. Admission to lecture, confined to members, although membership tickets, admitting to the present, and the two remaining lectures of the course, are only 25 cents.

Creasman's

GOOD CONTRACT FOR LOCAL FIRM.

Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co. to Make Merrall's Stamp Mills.

Claim that it will Revolutionize the Gold Mining Industry in Canada

The great advance in the gold mining industry in Canada during recent years has led to the establishment of mining machinery manufactories in this country, and Peterborough has one of the largest of these in the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company's plant.

It may not be generally known, however, that quite recently this Company secured a contract for the manufacture of a stamp mill, which the designers claim will revolutionize the Canadian gold mining industry, and at present the staff of the local works mentioned is engaged in the manufacture of the first of these mills to be made in Canada. The patterns have just been completed, and work has begun upon their actual manufacture.

This mill is known as the Merrall Stamp Mill, and the machines now in course of construction will be used at the Hannoekburn Mines in Hastings County, one of the most valuable mines in the province, and when this order has been completed other mills for different mines will be constructed here. The designers of this mill claim that its use will enable gold mining to become a possibility to a poor man, because it enables a six-stamp battery to crush 40 tons of hard quartz through a 40-mesh screen in 24 hours with an expenditure of power of but 15 horse power.

The industry promises to become a very profitable one, for the local firm, and the prospects are that many mining properties which have hitherto been unworkable because of the cost of operation will now be able to operate successfully and profitably.

Mr. L. Merrium, of Toronto, is the instrumentality through which the contract for this machinery was brought to the local firm, and occupies the position of Canadian manager for the Company.

Y.M.C.A. Debating Club

The Y.M.C.A. Debating Club, which has been out of business for several years, will be reorganized on Wednesday evening next, Jan. 11th, at 8 o'clock. It will be open to all members of the association.

Mr. Holmes is taking an active part in the re-organization, and success seems assured.

THE LIBERAL PLATFORM.

The Ross Government by virtue of its record of administration is entitled to a repetition of the confidence of the people. Not only does this record furnish grounds for an insistent claim for support, but its platform is worthy of the traditions of the Liberal party, and in the scope of its completeness, of the great province its application is intended to up-build and serve. There is much in this platform that has been already adopted and employed in practice by the Liberal Government. But its features have been summarised and put into more concrete form by the great convention of Liberals.

First.—That the school system of the Province in all its departments should have in view those practical courses of study which specially fit the youth of Ontario for agricultural and industrial pursuits, and that the Provincial university should receive the general support of the Legislature.

That the Agricultural Department should continue the educational work of the Agricultural College, Farmers' Institutes, dairy schools, goods roads associations and other similar associations with undiminished zeal and efficiency.

Second.—That every form of bribery and all fraudulent schemes to defeat the honest purpose of the electorate are contrary to the spirit and traditions of the Liberal party.

That the secrecy of the ballot box should be protected and all offences against the election act punished.

That every riding should conduct its organization without outside interference or assistance.

Third.—That railway corporations should contribute to municipal taxation in the same proportion as other private property.

Fourth.—That the Government Railway from North Bay should be extended to the Grand Trunk Pacific, and, if practicable, to James Bay, and that town sites on the Government railway and Grand Trunk Pacific should be surveyed and sold for the benefit of the Province.

Fifth.—That all settlers on agricultural lands in the unorganized districts be allowed the use of every description of timber on such lands, pine alone excepted.

That minerals on such lands should not be reserved, but should be the property of the patentee, and that prospectors should be dealt with liberally.

Sixth.—That companies of a local or provincial character should not be removed from provincial control on the declaration that they are for "the general advantage of Canada."

Seventh — That only the matured timber on pine lands should hereafter be sold, with a view to the preservation of the forests as a source of revenue for all time to come, and that pulp concessions and water powers north of the height of land should be sold at public auction.

Eighth.—That a commission, having authority to deal with the bonding powers of companies concerned in the operation of public utilities, and the application of municipalities in consolidating debentures debts, and other matters of a similar character, would be a source of great protection to the public.

Ninth — That the various branches of the public service affecting public labour, such as the Bureau of Labour and factory inspection, should be consolidated, and legislation, if possible, to obtained to avoid strikes, and to prevent unskilled aliens and prison labour from interfering with the opportunities of the working classes.

Tenth. — That a Minister of Colonization and Labour be appointed for the settlement of New Ontario, and for promoting immigration of a suitable character into the older parts of the province.

Eleventh — That steps should be taken to reduce the consumption of intoxicating liquors, to prevent the sale of liquors on Sunday, and during prohibited hours, and to secure the most vigorous enforcement of the license laws, to encourage and make effective the adoption of the local option provisions of the license act, and such other changes as are more fully set forth in the finding of the Convention.

Twelfth. — That the greatest facilities should be afforded municipalities to obtain the ownership of all franchises of a public character affecting the use of water, light or transportation, within the municipality.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Whitney's love for the Scotch is probably confined to mountain dew —it does not evidently extend to Premier Ross.

Mr. Whitney's platform has one important plank—office.

Mr. J. Lockie Wilson is a "disgusted Liberal," who is supporting Mr. Whitney in this contest. Mr. Wilson's conversion from the error of his ways is founded upon pure patriotism. He wanted to serve his country, and the base Liberals would not let him. He applied for a place on the Railway Commission, and, because he didn't get it, he joins Mr. Whitney in his hunt for office. That explains the presence of the milk in the cocoanut. We have seen samples of such patriotism nearer home.

It is only narrow-minded prejudice that blames Mr. Whitney for consuming a stoup of Scotch whisky, in his room in the Napanee hotel, after the labour of delivering an epoch-making speech. Any one who has had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Whitney in his flights of oratory—when he really cuts himself loose—when he gets under full steam, with the chairman sitting on the safety valve—can readily understand how wearying such an effort of oratory must be on—the dictionary of viturperation—and can readily sympathize with the desire for a little "bracer."

FOWLER'S CORNERS

A Teacher's Faithful Services Handsomely Recognized

We understand Mrs. McCarrell has given up the profession of teaching, after having taught eleven years, eight of which were spent in the Orange Line school, of two terms, three and five years respectively; she also taught three years in the Bethel school. She has always been successful during her term of teaching and has won the affection of her pupils to a very marked degree, as is shown by the handsome presents received by her at various times.

Upon the closing of the school last Thursday she was very much surprised upon receiving from Edna Howden, one of the pupils, a beautiful table set of gilt glass, also some time ago she received from Ruby and Della Lowes, two dainty handkerchiefs and a picture.

Mrs. McCarrell prizes very highly the complimentary piece put in the paper in the summer of 1903, by the Bethel correspondent; also the numerous presents received by her.

Upon leaving the Orange Line school, at the end of the first term of three years, she received a silver pickle ornet and two glass pickle holders, together with a card of remembrance presented by the Misses Adams, Henderson and Carroll, on behalf of the school, and at the end of the second term she received a silver tea pot and a silver table napkin ring, presented by Leonard Atwell and Dewey Stinson, on behalf of the school. Also during the second term she received a picture case by Victoria Wilson, a Christmas card, and picture by Dolly Stinson, and a picture by Joe Stinson.

ELECTION TIME QUIET IN OMEMEE

Village Council Elected by Acclamation —News of the Week

From Our Own Correspondent.

The health of the village is very good.

The holiday visitors were very numerous, and included quite a number from Peterborough, former residents of the village.

The elections passed off quietly, Omemee council being elected by acclamation. No one seems to aspire to the honours.

The township council is the same as last year with the exception of Wm. Cottingham, a new and popular councillor. The commissioners are R. J. Patterson, who headed the list, a new man, and T. H. McQuade, re-elected. Dennis Scully, was defeated, the result being a surprise to all.

The Presbyterian concert held on Jan. 2nd, proved a grand success in every respect. The proceeds amounted to $13. Mr. Smedley, of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, mandolin, guitar and banjo soloist, fully sustained his reputation. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston of Millbrook, delighted every one with their duets.

POPULAR LADY IS REMEMBERED.

Miss E. L. Higgins Presented with Ladies' Companion.

By Members of the Epworth League of Which She is President.

From our Own Correspondent.

North Smith, Jan. 3.—At a meeting of the Young People's Society in connection with Wesley Methodist Church, held on December 28th, to settle business for the past year and arrange matters for the future, Miss Higgins, who has been president of the society for the past year, was presented with a handsome ladies' companion and the following address, which was read by Mr. J. Perry and the ladies companion was presented by Miss V. Nugent:—

Miss E. L. Higgins,
President of the Epworth League.

Dear Friend,—We, the officers and members of the Wesley Young People's Society, take this opportunity on the eve of your departure from us, to tender you our thanks and appreciation for the services rendered our league during the past year. You must have been discouraged many times at the lack of interest taken by us on your behalf in our spiritual welfare.

Yet, we desire to assure you that the seed sown in our hearts from time to time, will by the Grace of God, we trust, bring forth an abundant harvest.

And now, in conclusion, we ask you to accept this ladies companion from us as a very little token of our good will and esteem for you, not only for your success in this life, but also for your spiritual and eternal welfare, hoping it will serve as a pleasant reminder to you of the many kind friends you have made for yourself at North Smith.

We will now close our address with one verse of the well-known hymn.

God be with you till we meet again,
By His counsels guide, uphold you,
With His sheep securely fold you;
God be with you till we meet again.

Signed on behalf of the league,
JOHN HARRISON,
R. M. NORTHEY,
MISS GERTIE NORTHEY,
Vice-Presidents.

Miss Higgins was taken completely by surprise and was deeply affected by the kindness of the young people, yet she found suitable words to thank the young people for the kind words expressed in the address just read, and also, for the beautiful present, assuring them of her deep interest in their spiritual welfare, and trusting that they would ever be found pressing onward and upward. On the Friday evening following a Christmas tree and entertainment was given in the Methodist Church under the auspices of the Sunday school. The tree was laden with many useful and costly presents, the success was largely due to the efforts of Miss Higgins, who has taught school No. 10 here for the past three years, during which time she has won for herself a host of friends and will be greatly missed not only in the day school, but also in the Sunday school and choir, of which she was a valued member.

THE KING'S WARDROBE.

His Majesty in a Purple Lounge Suit—The King of England Sets Fashions for Well-Dressed Men.

The fashionable male world, and even to some extent the unfashionable also, is very much exercised in mind at the present moment as to whether there should not be some reform in masculine attire in the direction of more color and picturesqueness, particularly in regard to the lower garments and evening wear. A representative of Tit-Bits had an opportunity of discussing the question with those who have exceptional facilities for knowing what are King Edward's tastes and his desires in such matters.

It is well-known that the King sets the fashion not only to Great Britain but to the well-dressed world everywhere. When he was at Marienbad the season before last and happened to appear, more by accident than design, two or three times in succession in a red necktie, the word went through all the hosiery departments in the capitals of Europe that red ties were the thing, and for weeks afterwards they were displayed in every shop window.

The King is very fastidious about the shape of the brims of his silk hats, and whenever he makes an alteration the fashionable world follows suit in the course of a very few weeks. His Majesty is also given at times to applying new ideas of his own to frock-coats, and was particularly successful a few seasons since with a single-breasted coat which had a chain fastening to keep it partially closed.

But, said our informant, His Majesty has not gone in for any important frock-coat changes for quite a long time now, and it may interest some people to know that until just recently he was wearing occasionally a garment that he had made for him about the time of the Coronation.

This fact alone, he went on, will serve to show the absurdity of the idea that is entertained by some people that His Majesty only wears a suit two or three times and then discards it. As a matter of fact, all things considered, the King may be regarded as distinctly economical in respect to his tailoring. At the present time he probably possesses about two hundred suits of one sort and another, and about half the number of hats and caps.

In the ordinary course about thirty of these suits are taken off the active list in the course of each year, when they become the perquisites of his two assistant valets unless the King has previously signified, as he sometimes does, that they are to be bestowed upon some humble dependent who would be glad of them not merely because they were once worn by the monarch of England. These thirty suits would be replaced by thirty others, and it is probable that, what with extra overcoats and other matters, the King's tailor's bill amounts in the course of a year to between £400 and £500.

Whenever His Majesty is in need of a new suit, patterns of material are sent to him, he makes his choice, and the preliminaries of cutting and stitching are effected from the standard measurements. Then the suits is usually tried on by appointment in His Majesty's dressing-room at eleven in the morning. The King is extraordinarily quick to notice any imperfection or irregularity in the manner in which the tailor has carried out his special instructions.

On one occasion a pair of trousers was accidentally made up from a material which was not exactly in accordance with the pattern which the King had chosen, though it resembled it very closely. The King noticed the difference at once.

His Majesty is by no means conventional in his sartorial ideas. If an idea strikes him for an improvement in clothes he does not care where or under what circumstances he sees it. For example, the tailor who has probably made more garments for the King than any other became introduced to His Majesty's custom in a curious manner.

One night, many years ago, he was at the theatre watching the famous French player, Fechter, appearing in "Robert Macaire." The actor had to appear in clothes which were supposed to be torn and patched beyond recognition, but the King, or the Prince of Wales as he then was, noticed at once that all the same the garment was splendidly cut, and was, indeed, in its way quite a triumph of tailoring. Consequently, when the curtain descended he sent for Fechter and asked him who his tailor was. The actor mentioned the name of one in London, and he was immediately given a royal order, with many scores more to follow.

Again, all unsuspected, the King is often on the look-out for patterns of cloth which are particularly to his fancy, and he finds them in odd places. On the occasion of the Braemar gathering two years ago he saw some brown tweed which pleased him very much, and from which he instantly decided to have a suit made. But he did not merely buy a suit length; he bought up the whole bale of the tweed, so that there was none left.

He did this for two reason. In the first place, he desired to have the cloth by him for another suit if he should ever want one, and in the second he was wise enough to foresee that unless he took this precaution there would be at once a very vulgar run on the remainder of the cloth by the Tims, Dicks and Harrys of the general public, which would condemn neither to his dignity nor theirs.

As showing again how unconventional is the King, it may be said that he does not often give a second thought as to what others will think if he is quite satisfied that an article of apparel is in perfectly good taste, and does not violate any of the canons of English dress. Not long since he might have been seen walking about the grounds of Windsor Castle wearing a purple lounge suit—probably the only one of the kind in England.—Tit-Bits.

FIGURES ABOUT PORT ARTHUR.

Russians Estimate That Taking the Fortress Cost Japan $100,000,000.

Che Foo, Jan. 4.—Some interesting statistics concerning the defence of Port Arthur have reached here. Originally the army numbered 35,000. Eleven thousand have been killed; 16,000 are wounded or sick, and 8,000 remained in the forts, of whom over 2,000 were unable to fight.

It is learned that when Gen. Stoessel wrote to Gen. Nogi regarding the surrender of the fortress, he said: "I have 8,000 men in the forts, and 6,000 of these are able to fight. If you do not accept my proposal, these men will die fighting, but it will cost you three times their number to kill them."

During the siege 265 per cent. of the garrison were put out of action. This remarkable fact was due to wounded men returning to the front. Cases have been recorded where men have gone to hospitals four times, returning convalescent to the forts. The number of officers killed was proportionately greater than in any battle known in history. This was due to the frequent lethargic condition of the men, who, without food and without sleep, moved only when ordered by their officers.

The Russians estimate that the taking of the fortress has cost Japan $100,000,000.

BROCKVILLE'S LOSS

Factory of the Canada Carriage Company Burned.

LOSS IS NEARLY $300,000

Boy With a Lantern Said to Have Entered the Paint and Varnish Vault and An Explosion, in Which He Was Badly Burned, Followed—Town's Second Blow By Fire in Four Years.

Brockville, Jan. 5.—Between 5 and 6 o'clock last evening fire reduced to smouldering ruins the main building of the extension plant of the Canada Carriage Works, entailing a loss of nearly $300,000, which is covered by insurance, roughly estimated at $225,000.

The industry was the largest labor-employing concern in Brockville and had just got nicely started on the spring orders, with a staff numbering about 300. These are necessarily thrown out of employment.

There are different stories regarding the cause of the fire, but it is said on good authority that a boy entered the paint and varnish vault in the southeast corner of the basement, carrying a lantern, when the men had almost completed the day's work. He came out badly burned, leaving the lantern behind, and in a few minutes an explosion followed, carrying in its train flame and smoke.

The shock of the explosion raised the floor of the room above, where several men were employed. These barely had time to get out with their lives.

The fire soon enveloped the entire structure so that nothing could be saved except the office papers and books. The fire has cast a gloom over the town. This is the second big manufacturing concern Brockville has lost in four years, the Cossitt Foundry going up in smoke in 1900.

TUGBOATS RACED.

Eight Known to Be Dead and Three Seriously Injured.

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 5.—Eight men are known to be dead and three seriously injured, the result of a boiler explosion and fire, which destroyed the tugboat Defender near here yesterday. She was racing with the Victor at the time.

Storm Causes Seven Deaths.

New York, Jan. 5.—Not for several years has New York been visited by a storm of such proportions as that which commenced Tuesday and continued until early yesterday. Nine inches of snow fell, traffic was paralyzed and the intense cold brought untold suffering to the city's poor. The blizzard caused seven deaths in New York and vicinity, while many persons, overcome by the cold, fell on icy walks and sustained broken bones. Scores of horses fell, many of them later being shot. The drifts caused a milk famine, only 6 per cent. of the usual supply being delivered in the city in the morning. Five of the seven men who met death in the storm died from exposure. Another slipped on the icy platform of an elevated station, fell in front of an approaching train and was ground to pieces. The seventh, L. Weller, a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, blinded by the driving snow, stepped in front of a Congressional Limited train at South Amboy, N.J., and was killed.

Crashed Into a Train.

New York, Jan. 5.—A Long Island express train from Patchogue, L.I., to Long Island City, crashed into a train stalled in a snow-drift at the West Floral Station yesterday, creating terror among the passengers. One passenger was probably fatally injured.

Gale Places Out of Business.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 5.—Tuesday night saw the greatest sleet storm of years in this city. An immense amount of damage has been done to trees and wires. Six hundred telephones at least have been thrown out of business. Shade and ornamental trees are in many cases ruined. The street railway and electric lighting systems are tied up.

May Not Recover.

Peterboro, Jan. 5.—Sylvester Fife, an Otonobee farmer, fell from a load of hay on the hard ice, and broke several ribs. It is thought he is injured internally. He may not recover.

Killed Near Quebec.

Quebec, Jan. 5.—While at work near Garneau bridge, on the other side of the river, opposite Sillery, a young man named Couturier, 28 years of age, and living at Sillery, was killed yesterday morning.

Adolf Beck Offered $25,000.

London, Jan. 5.—The Government has offered Adolf Beck $25,000 in compensation for wrongful imprisonment. His case was notable. He was arrested in 1896 for obtaining money and jewelry from women under false pretence, and he was convicted on the evidence of women who identified him as John Smith. After he had served five years, John Smith confessed that he was the man committed in 1877 and for whom Beck had been mistaken. A committee of inquiry concluded that Beck had been the victim of a miscarriage of justice and that the blame rested with the judge, Sir Forrest Fulton.

Honor For Minto.

London, Jan. 5.—(C.A.P.)—In recognition of his public service, Lord Minto will be presented with the freedom of the royal borough of Jedburgh, June 24.

AT JAVA AND BORNEO.

Japanese Lying in Wait For Second Pacific Squadron.

Amsterdam, Jan. 4.—A telegram from Batavia says two Japanese cruisers are cruising off Java, and a flotilla of Japanese torpedo boat destroyers are off North Borneo. The Dutch naval force, it is added, is cruising on the western shores of the archipelago. Newspapers here announce that the battleship Zealand sailed yesterday for the East Indies.

Second Pacific Squadron.

Tamative, Island of Madagascar, Jan. 4.—The division of the Russian second Pacific squadron, commanded by Rear-Admiral Voelkersam, anchored yesterday in Pasitnadava Bay, in the northwestern part of the island. The squadron commanded by Admiral Rojestvensky is at Antongil Bay, on the east coast.

To Go to Vladivostock.

Paris, Jan. 4.—Capt. Clado, who was with Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron at the time of the Dogger Bank affair, last night declared that Admiral Rojestvensky never intended to approach Port Arthur, but would seek to enter Vladivostock, which place it was of the utmost importance to defend.

BALTIC FLEET TO GO SLOW

Russian Admiral to Wait For Third Fleet Of Madagascar.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 5.—It seems now to be definitely settled that Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron will not attempt at present to reach Vladivostock. The decision has been reached that he will await the third Pacific squadron, on which work is proceeding night and day, and several ships of which are expected to be ready for service by the end of January.

It is by no means certain that Rojestvensky will return with his ships to European waters; he may await the third squadron off the coast of Madagascar, and seize and make his base one of the uninhabited coral islands of Polynesia.

In view of the report that the Japanese intend to invest Vladivostock, General Batiavoff, who has been interviewed, has expressed the opinion that if Vladivostock should be blockaded Rojestvensky would be compelled to return.

Emperor Nicholas is expected to return to-morrow to St. Petersburg, when a council of war will be held.

A Russian Protest.

Paris, Jan. 5.—The Russian Embassy has transmitted to Foreign Minister Delcasses a protest against Japan's alleged violation of The Hague stipulations relative to the immunity of hospitals from attack. The protest is based on Gen. Stoessel's report that the hospitals at Port Arthur were struck during the Japanese bombardment, wounding some of the inmates. M. Delcasse will forward the protest to Japan.

AFTER INTENSE SUFFERING.

Crew of Schooner Broken in Two By Gale Saved.

Wilmington, N.C., Jan. 5.—After a night of intense suffering from the cold, clinging to the masts of their shipwrecked vessel, heavy seas breaking over decks and carrying everything before the mad rush of their fury, Capt. F. C. Gibbs and six men, composing the crew of the schooner Emma C. Middleton, from Newport News to Charleston, S.C., with a cargo of coal, were brought here yesterday by the Wilmington tug Alexander Jones, the vessel and her cargo being a total wreck on Frying Pan Shoals, ten miles east of Baldhead Lighthouse, on the North Carolina coast. The schooner was struck by the gale Tuesday night and broke completely in two from stem to stern.

THE DAIRYMEN.

President Derbyshire Declares Cheese Output of 1904 Short of That of 1903 By $7,000,000.

Brockville, Jan. 5.—President D. Derbyshire, M.P. for Brockville, was the master of ceremonies at the opening sessions of the 28th annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Butter and Cheese Association here yesterday. Many prominent dairymen were present.

In his address, Mr. Derbyshire said kind things of the agricultural departments of Toronto and Ottawa and enumerated what Hon. John Dryden and Hon. Sydney Fisher had done in the interests of the farmers. He noted that the association's experiment the past season of placing instructors in charge of a certain number of cheese factories throughout the province produced beneficial results.

Cheese Less of $7,000,000.

The good work of these men as a whole had been reflected in the improvement of the quality of the goods, as well as its uniformity. He went on to say that the make of 1904 was 2,700,000 boxes of cheese, worth about $20,000,000. The record was 800,000 boxes short of 1903, representing at least $7,000,000.

Considerable of this shortage could have been avoided provided dairymen had shown the same zeal as they did in 1903. The butter business showed a good deal of improvement. Canada exported 550,000 packages, worth $7,500,000, an increase of nearly $2,000,000, and, owing to the fine quality, about double the quantity of butter was consumed at home over that exported

$6,500,000 Short All Round.

The bacon trade was somewhat short, having received only about $14,000,000 for the same, but the total exports of cheese, butter and bacon amount to about $41,500,000, or $6,500,000 short of last year.

Among the speakers at the afternoon and evening sessions were C. F. Whitley and G. H. Grisdale of the Ottawa Experimental Farm; Henry Glendinning, Manilla; Hon John Gould, Ohio; John Dargavel, Elgin; Prof. Robertson, Ottawa, and Hon. John Dryden.

Mayor Geash welcomed the convention to Brockville and his remarks were seconded by H. A. Stewart,

FAIRBANKS AND SIR WILFRID.

Canada's Premier Scheduled For a Meeting With U. S. Senator.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Reciprocity between the United States and Canada will be discussed at a conference now being arranged between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Senator Fairbanks.

The meeting will be held either in New York or Boston at an early date. It will then be determined whether the British-American Joint High Commission will be re-convened.

Previous to the election President Roosevelt requested Mr. Fairbanks to arrange for a session of the commission. Since that time Mr. Fairbanks and Sir Wilfrid have been in correspondence on the subject.

It is understood between the two chairmen that whatever is done must be accomplished before the adjournment of Congress on March 4.

WESTERN HORSE THIEVES.

Liverymen Wright of Treherne, Man., Placed Under Arrest.

Winnipeg, Jan. 5.—Sensational development in connection with widespread horse-stealing in the Canadian West is the arrest of a man named Wright, at Treherne, Manitoba, Tuesday afternoon, charged at the instance of a North Dakota sheriff with having stolen horses in his possession. Wright, who is known to the police under several aliases, is part proprietor of Wright & Cormany's Livery Stable, which was burned down under rather peculiar circumstances on Saturday night, the fire spreading to the adjoining livery stable. This circumstance, taken in connection with the recent wholesale arrest of American horse thieves at Medicine Hat, Alberta, points to the discovery of one at least of the selling depots of the gang in Manitoba.

Russian Jews Stranded.

Montreal, Jan. 5.—Between 400 and 500 Russian Jews are stranded in the city without work, and with little prospect of getting any for some months. They are all men and claim that they were forced to fly from Russia because the generals of the army were placing the Jews in the most exposed positions and letting them get killed. The Jews of the city are unable to look after the men and are applying to the city for assistance.

Judgment Was Reserved.

London, Jan. 5.—At the police court yesterday morning the preliminary hearing of Billy Boyd, the sprinter, and big Hugh Stevenson, alleged to have entered into a conspiracy to defraud ex-Ald. Douglass of this city of $10,000, on a foot-race at St. Louis last summer, in which Boyd was to participate, was held. Douglass was the only witness called and his story was decidedly interesting and created some amusement. Judgment was reserved.

Indirectly Responsible.

Lindsay, Jan. 5.—The adjourned inquest on the death of Fireman Chambers, who was killed by an explosion on a C.P.R. locomotive, near Bobcaygeon, a week ago Tuesday night, was resumed at that village last night before Coroner Bonnell. It was shown that the engine was patched and defective, and the jury found the C.P.R. officials indirectly responsible for Chambers' death.

Death-Mask Stamp.

Belgrade, Jan. 5.—The new Servian postage stamps, bearing the heads of King Peter and Karageorge side by side, which were issued at the time of the recent coronation of King Peter, have been suddenly withdrawn. It has been discovered that when the stamps are held upside down the outlines of the two heads appear to form the death-mask of King Alexander.

IMPORTANCE OF REGISTRATION.

Board Will Sit To-morrow, Saturday and Monday.

Night Session on Saturday—All Young Men Should Register.

To-morrow will be the first of the three days allotted for registration and those young men who have not a vote otherwise, must register themselves before Monday evening or they will not be in a position to exercise their franchise on January 25th. Important as it is at every election, it is sometime since the registration has meant so much to the young men of Peterborough as it now does. For in this election it offers to all the young men of the town an opportunity to vote for the young man candidate, R. F. McWilliams.

Years ago Peterborough had another young man candidate in Hon. J. R. Stratton and the young men of those days turned out en masse to elect him just as they kept on turning out to re-elect him as long as he chose to ask for their votes. Now another Young man presents himself. The young men of the town—hundreds of them—know him personally. They have had dealings with him in sports, in the regiment, in many forms of social intercourse. They know of their own first-hand knowledge whether or no he is the kind of man they wish to send to Toronto as their representative. Already these young men, as well as the older ones, have expressed their intention to elect Mr. McWilliams, the Liberal candidate, in no unsertain terms. The intention, will, however, do little good without the registration, so let no one forget that to-morrow, Saturday and Monday are the registration days.

The best plan will be to register to-morrow. Then there will be no chance for forgetfulness or anything else to sidetrack the good intention to vote for Mr. McWilliams.

Remember, everyone whose name is not on the municipal list must register or he cannot vote. Briefly put, the general conditions of registration are,—that one is a British subject of 21 years; that one has resided in the Province for the past 12 months, and in the town for the last three months.

The registration board will sit all three days from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturday evening from 7.30 to 9.

The following are the places of registration:—

Ward No. 1—At Lewis Spry's shop, 214 Stewart Street.

Ward No. 2—At the Town Council Chamber.

Ward No. 3—At the Police Chamber.

Ward No. 4—At Wm. Lee's shop, corner of Smith and George streets.

Ward No. 5—At the Village Town Hall.

If your name is not on the voters' list you must register to have a vote. Registration last October for the Dominion Elections does not count for the Provincial Elections.

AN OCCIDENTAL GRAY GOOSE QUILL

An Interesting Memento of the Manitoba Free Press

The Examiner has omitted too long to mention with grateful acknowledgments the receipt from the Manitoba Free Press, Winnipeg, of a pen, made from the quill of a Hudson Bay wild goose, accompanied by a beautiful booklet describing the gift and its history with the Cree legend of the wild goose, the first appearance of the legend in print. The pen (with which this paragraph is written) was plucked with others from a wild gray goose taken on the shores of Hudson Bay, 60 miles — as the wild goose flies— north of Winnipeg, and has twice crossed the Atlantic having, with others, been sent into England in the raw state, then treated and made into a pen and shipped back to Winnipeg and thence to Peterborough. The readers among our readers will all remember the time when quill pens were the only vogue, steel pens being unknown. As the little booklet informs us, quill pens are still in use in Court circles in England, and King Edward uses one habitually, indeed it was with a Hudson Bay quill that he signed the Coronation oath. Mr. Balfour writes with a quill. So did Queen Victoria, Dickens and Sir Walter Scott, the latter having written an entire novel—"Redgauntlet"—with a single Hudson Bay quill, doubtless many times repointed. The little book referred to contains at the end some very interesting statistics of the growth and progress of Winnipeg, one item being that the present year new buildings to the value of ten million dollars have been erected.

Price-slidding Bargains at Lebruns.

Saturday next, January 7th, a sweeping stock-reduction sale starts at H. LeBrun & Co's, City Clothing store. Winter Suits, overcoats, reefers, raincoats, underwear, neckwear, hats and caps, will all be marked down 20 to 30 per cent. It is our custom not to carry over winter stock from season to season—1st, because, although we occupy four large flats, our premises are too small to store away last-of-season goods; 2nd, because, we would rather sacrifice prices now than lose money on goods carried over later on. After a most satisfactory year's business the City Clothing Store will therefore start the new year with a storeful of price-slidding bargains. We begin our regular winter reduction sale this year earlier than usual, and before stock-taking—instead of after—so that the public may have full benefit, as well as on account of spring goods coming in earlier. This great sale will be a bonanza to men, youths and boys, who have been putting off buying, as well as to those who can afford to buy ahead for future use. Remember this bona fide sale starts Saturday, January 7th. H. LeBrun & Co.

A photo traveller, who has been over most of Canada, and was at the World's Fair at St. Louis, says the large lacrosse picture Mr. G. E. SOME THOUGHTS ON SANITATION.

Mr. W. H. Moore Points out Necessity for Pure Water.

What the Board of Health May do to Prevent Spread of Disease.

The question of sanitation is a most important one to any town, and consequently and suggestions along that line, particularly when they come from one well qualified to speak on it from a possession of knowledge of the subject should be heeded.

Mr. W. H. Moore, in conversation with the Examiner to-day gave expression to some thoughts on the important subject of sanitation. He said that the more general use of the City Water for domestic purposes has produced a marked improvement in the health conditions of the town, particularly in relation to typhoid fever. "The Board of Health's action has, I admit, aided in the good work. But they have in the past, not done all that they might and should have done, nor used to nearly their limit, the powers of the Health Act; and the Board has met much opposition in their efforts, from persons whose intelligence should have informed them of their danger.

The larger part of the town is underlaid with a bed of gravel, in some places as much as six or eight feet deep, and where such grave is not found the soil is of porous character.

In the case of surface wells, impurities are frequently washed in with rain or percolate through the soil from cesspools and decayed matter; contamination at one time or another, and serious outbreaks of illness, of which typhoid is a common type, is developed.

From what I have observed such wells should only, if at all, be resorted to at a distance from populous districts and where after a thorough inspection of the locality obtained, assurance is given of freedom from organic pollution of the water, but that wherever city water can be had, it alone should be used.

The water of the Otonabee River is, I am assured and believe, of exceptional purity and can at all times be used with confidence. Risks can be readily understood when we consider that Stony and Clear Lakes, through which it passes, cover some 75 square miles, are of considerable depth and serve as subsiding basins for injurious elements in suspension, which may be contained in the inflowing streams.

There is a further good condition that the water is very thoroughly aerated in its passage over eight dams, making a fall of about ninety feet in eleven miles before reaching the pumping station; and it may be safely claimed that it is unexcelled in quality for all domestic purposes by that supplied by any other town or city in Ontario.

People are daily coming to appreciate the value, not to say the convenience of having at all times at hand, a sufficient supply of good and wholesome water and to discard the use of water drawn from wells. I am convinced that when the cost of a well, with pump and the repair required of both from time to time is placed against the small annual charge for water obtained from the works, the result will show, that as a matter of cash economy the latter is to be preferred. There is no case on record of consumers ever returning to the old system, once they have made the change.

The community at large is beginning to understand what is meant by the words germs and bacteria.

A short time ago I found much difficulty in renting a farm where a person had died of consumption, each proposed lessee withdrawing as soon as it was learned what was the nature of the disease that had carried off the late owner. They said they simply would not go into such a house from fear of the infection.

Bad water, however, generally produces typhoid fever. It may be said with truth that every death from this dreadful malady is a contribution from ignorance to the graveyard. Like death of which dread specire it is too often the forerunner, typhoid fever is no respector of persons. The barriers of society do not stop it, nor is there safety in the isolation which wealth secures, its victims are among the high and low and in its wide sweep it gathers in the millionaire and the pauper, and its chief contributor is the water we drink. According to the latest statistics in the ten years from 1880 to 1890 in Chicago with an average population of 1,200,000 there were 9,000 deaths from typhoid yearly. In Philadelphia, in the same period with an average population of 1,200,000 there were 6,000 deaths yearly.

It may be some comfort to the authorities of our town, who are none too zealous in the cause of sanitation, to know that the rate of mortality from typhoid here is pro rata less than the above, but it is very considerable and greatly in excess of what it should be.

A wide-awake board of health can do a great deal towards the prevention of this disease by the closing of wells and the enforcement of the large powers with which they are clothed.

In recent years the exertions of the medical profession have been voluntarily given in education of the people to more sanitary conditions, and if the profession would discharge in the fullest measure its obligations, it must not only protect the individual in the crisis of a malady, but teach all how to avoid the disease.

There are many means of avoiding the infection of typhoid fever, but the greatest is in the use of pure water."

ATTEMPTED TO STAB COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

The Italian Accused in Police Court To-day.

At the police court this morning, an Italian, Guiseppe Giallcomardo, was committed for trial on a charge of attempting to stab Charles Butcher and John Montgomery, on George street, last Monday night.

It seems that Butcher and Montgomery were walking north on the east side of George street, about 10.30 o'clock in the evening, and when a short distance from Charlotte street and Italian passed them. Butcher, who mistook the Italian for a young man who he knew, said, "Good night," and passed on. The Italian after walking a few steps, turned and said something to the other men who stopped and asked him what he said. The Italian replied in very uncomplimentary language, and walked towards the man, who perceived that he had a knife in his hand. The Italian slashed at both Butcher and Montgomery several times, but the two managed by making good use of their legs to escape the blows. Butcher entered McCallum's restaurant and telephoned for the police. Constable McGinty was soon on the scene and arrested the Italian on the market square. He had thrown away his knife but it was found afterwards.

Mr. R. E. Wood conducted the prosecution, and Mr. D. O'Connell the defence.

SPLENDID RALLY OF OTONABEE ELECTORS

Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture, Tells What the Ontario Government has Done for the Farmers.

Effective and Convincing Address Given at Keene Town Hall Last Night in Mr. Wm. Anderson's Interests.

The Candidate Given a Splendid Reception by the Large Audience.---Mr. E.B. Edwards Speaks.

Special Staff Correspondent

Keene, Jan. 5th.—The opening meeting in Mr. Wm. Anderson's campaign in the southern part of the riding was held here last night, and was a complete success in every particular, and Mr. Anderson has every reason to feel gratified as a result of last night's meeting.

The Town Hall was filled, notwithstanding the extremely cold weather, and a significant fact was the presence of a large number of ladies in the audience.

The principal address was given by Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture and, he spoke for about an hour upon the public questions of the day, and his address was closely listened to by the large audience.

As might have been expected, from Mr. Dryden's position as Minister of Agriculture, and from the nature of his audience, he dealt largely with the Government's position with respect to the agricultural interests of the province, and the facts presented by him were most certainly gratifying, showing as they did that the value of the yearly product of the farms of the province had increased wonderfully during the years that the Liberal Government had been in power, and more particularly in the last few years.

He also referred to the excellent financial condition of the province, showing that while the people had enjoyed rare privileges, these had not cost them anything in the way of direct taxation.

Of the some $114,000,000 that has been expended by the Government, no one can point to one dollar that has been misappropriated, a fact which the people should not lose sight of.

Mr. Dryden's address was given in a convincing manner, and should have a good effect.

Mr. E. B. Edwards was present and gave a short but effective speech, in support of Mr. Anderson, and the candidate himself was heard

Mr. J. H. Taylor was appointed chairman of the meeting, which he referred briefly to the last Liberal meeting he had attended, viz., the Great Liberal Convention at Toronto. He invited anyone present who wished to speak on behalf of Mr. Moore, to take a seat on the platform. No one responded, and he immediately called upon the candidate, who was received with ringing cheers.

MR. ANDERSON, THE CANDIDATE.

He expressed his pleasure at seeing so many electors of that part of the riding. He thanked the electors for the support that they had given him in the last election and he felt that he deserved to be elected again. Two years was a short term in which to make a record, and he felt that during that time he had done his duty to the electors who placed him in that position.

The Government's policy towards the newer parts of the province and its treatment of the settlers was briefly dealt with by Mr. Anderson and he referred to the many roads and railways that had been built by the Government which had done much to develop these parts of the province.

Speaking of the temperance question, Mr. Anderson said that he was always a temperance man himself, and they all knew his views on that subject. Mr. Ross had done a great deal for temperance and had gone as far as he could possibly do in that direction. He closed by asking the electors for their support in the coming election.

COL. EDWARDS SPEAKS.

Col. E. B. Edwards dealt with the questions of the day, and arose with pleasure to address a meeting in Keene. He was pleased to see the ladies present, the second time that he had addressed a meeting in which there were ladies.

The two men who were asking for the votes of the electors on East Peterborough were both men who would be respected. Mr. Anderson had, during the two years that he had served this riding, done his duty well, and he felt sure no mistake would be made by re-electing him to represent them.

The speaker compared the two leaders in the provinces, and he asked if there was anything in Mr. Ross' platform with which fault can be found. The Liberal Government had developed and opened up the newer parts of the province.

He paid a high tribute to the ability of Mr. Dryden whose management of the Department of Agriculture had made his name stand high, not only in this country, but also in other countries, and enumerated some of the particulars in which the farmers had been benefitted by the work of the Agricultural Department.

Turning to the temperance question, he asked which of the two leaders had gone the farthest in giving the people temperance legislation. Mr. Whitney had been out-spoken in his declaration that he did not pose as a temperance advocate, while Mr. Ross and his Government had been active in advancing the temperance cause by legislating to give the greatest measure of temperance possible.

The cry of the Conservatives that they were the only advocates of pure politics is but empty talk.

All the departments of the Government had been open to investigation, but in none of them have the Conservatives been able to point to anything of a questionable character.

He asked those present to give Mr. Anderson a good support, and elect him once more to represent them.

THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE.

Hon. John Dryden was given a splendid reception when he arose to speak, and expressed his pleasure at being present to say a few words on behalf of his friend, Mr. Anderson, who was a good style of a man, and one who has considerable influence. During the two years that Mr. Anderson had served in the House he had done splendid work, and was always to be found in his place to do his duty.

The Government in this election was asking the electors to pass judgment on their record, and was prepared to give an account of its stewardship.

What the Government would like would be to see the people take the best opportunity to investigate their record, and if this were done there would be no fear of the result.

The Government was prepared to stand or fall on any of three questions. (1st.) The past record. (2nd.) The present position, and (3rd.) The future prospects. On any of these three phases, the Government was not afraid to court the fullest investigation. Mr. Dryden referred to the campaign of abuse indulged in by the Conservative press in this, and other elections, and showed how public men have been vilified.

Mr. Dryden referred to the changes made in the municipal laws of the province, during Liberal rule, and said that equal rights have been given to every man, whether his capital consisted of his muscle and his brain, or of large portions of property. Another position that had been taken by the Government was that every boy or girl might be given free a good public school education, and for those who wish higher educational facilities and opportunities are afforded.

PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

Perhaps the strongest test of the ability to the Government is their method of handling the finances of the province, and if it can be proven that they have not done right in this particular this should be sufficient to overthrow them. Since 1871, some $114,000,000 had been spent by the Ontario Government, and no charge had ever been made that any cent had ever been spent for improper purposes. The opponents of the Government even admitted that the money had been spent without any misappropriation. He proposed to answer two questions; (1st.) What had been done with the money? and, (2nd), Where does it come from? One of the first questions taken up by the Government was that of transportation, which was an important one to the farmers of the country, and the Ontario Government had spent $11,580,000 to help build 2400 miles of railway through the province. To help the people to educate their children $22,000,000 have been spent; $20,500,000 have been spent in providing public institutions, and maintaining them; $4,000,000 for hospitals, and $5,000,000 in the interests of agriculture. The expenditures have increased because the demands have increased, and it is right that it should increase, so long as it is being expended in the interests of the public.

Answering the question as to where the money comes from, he said that it did not come from a tax on the land of the people in the province. The Dominion Government pays the province $1,196,000. The province also receives from interest on investments, $350,000 this year; $2,395,000 came from the sale of timber lands, and over $250,000 from license fees.

AGRICULTURE.

The development of the great Agriculture Department is largely educational, and not one of law. Mr. Dryden had set his heart on perfecting the dairy products in the province, and one of the first efforts in this connection had been sending around the travelling dairy, and this year a large number of special instructors had been sent around, and he hoped to show that good results had followed. If he could do anything to raise the price of cheese one-half of a cent a pound, it would mean that the profits would be increased $7,000,000 per year.

The returns from agriculture have increased very largely during the last seven or eight years, and in 1903 $50,000,000 more was received from the sale of farm products than in 1896. The record is not only pleasing but it is inspiring.

The credit for this additional wealth lies primarily with the farmers of the province, but the farmers had had a governing board, making an opportunity for the farmer.

The end had not yet been reached, in fact it had only begun. He intended, if he were in charge of the department of Agriculture in the future, to take up the fruit industry, and he felt sure that the results from the fruit industry could be increased by 50 per cent. His plan was to effect a cooperation of the fruit growers of the province to pack the fruit properly, sell it advantageously, and cooperate to secure cheap rates from the railways.

THE NEW PROVINCE.

The Government had adopted what was, he believed, a wise policy with regard to the newer parts of the province, and their development, and the result of the operation of this policy was that a number of stirring towns had been started in New Ontario, and industries were being established. New railways had also been constructed to help develop this new country.

Mr. Dryden referred to, and defended, the action of the Government in assisting the Soo industries, and the result is that to-day the industries there are now operating successfully, and steel rails are being manufactured. The guaranteeing of the bonds did not cost the province anything, as there was ample security.

On their record, Mr. Dryden thought that he had a right to ask the people to re-elect Mr. Anderson as a supporter of Mr. Ross. The Opposition had only one cry, and that was that the Government was corrupt. He absolutely denied that charge, and neither he nor the Government had countenanced any wrong acts. The Government wanted the people's ballot to be secred, and they desired to do everything possible to secure this end.

Mr. Dryden closed his address with an appeal to the electors to return Mr. Anderson as a supporter of the Ross Government, amidst loud applause.

The meeting closed with the usual cheers, given in a more than usually hearty manner.

FIRST MEETING IN NEW YEAR.

Rev. E. A. Langfeldt Delivers First Address of the Year.

The Motto for the Year—A Splendid Address to Men.

The Men's meeting at the Y.M.C.A. on Sunday was of a character fitting the first Sunday of the New Year — the speaker was Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, of St. Luke's, who is always greeted with a large audience of men at the popular men's meeting.

Prior to the address he gave the association a text for the year "Follow Thou Me", being the command of Christ to St. Peter recorded in the last chapter of the Gospel of St. John. Peter had asked the Lord a question as to John but Jesus said "What is that to Thee? Follow Thou Me."

It was easy for us to look at other men's faults, but our own lives first needed attention. The command to us was to follow the Lord.

After Mr. Ward had given a sacred solo which was decidedly impressive, Mr. Langfeldt then gave his address, the main thought being the joy of the man who had been delivered from the bondage of sin. His desire was that all men might enjoy the liberty and the joy of the Lord. This joy was not to be found in a carnal life or a formal religion. Christ, though a man of sorrows had more to say of joy than any other man. He was always telling people to "cheer up". Mr. Langfeldt said he had no use for a long-faced religion, which was often discovered to be a cloak for hypocrisy.

The speaker then dealt with four special occasions on which Christ told men to be of good cheer and deduced helpful and impressive lessons from each. He spoke first to the man sick of the palsy after he had assured him of forgiveness of sins. We did not require any intercession but Christ—we could go direct to the Father by Him, and without asking any minister, priest or man. We should be cheerful in trial and tribulation. He had a religion to offer men which would cause them to be cheerful as Paul was at such times. We should be true witnesses for the Lord Jesus—in Jerusalem, Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. Application was made by the speaker in each of three points. First witness at home, where people knew our lives, our inconsistencies and failures. We should witness to our separated brethren for all of whom the speaker expressed a desire to see them enjoy the liberty of the Gospel and its joy. The speaker knew what spiritual bondage meant, for he had experienced it. Let us feel our brothers who are in error and sin, lovingly of their ways and seek to bring them into this joy. Mr. Langfeldt concluded his address with an impressive appeal to his hearers to follow Christ and to experience the joy of the Lord, which was Christian strength.

THE CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION.

The close of the thirty-third business year of the Confederation Life Association has been regarded as a fitting occasion by the Directors for sending out to the policy-holders a congratulatory message on the gratifying result of the year's business.

Announcement is made of the continued advancement and growth of the Association, the Directors expressing themselves as having much pleasure in stating that "the business written during the past year exceeds that of any previous year in the history of the Association."

The capital and assets of the Confederation is placed at over $11,300.00 The business of 1903 was regarded as largely in advance of any previous year—the insurance then in force amounting to a sum of over $36,837,383. Notwithstanding this gratifying record, the insurance at risk at the close of 1904 will mount up to $38,500,000. It is worthy of mention that the new guaranteed dividend policy of the Association which guarantees to the policy-holder his profits as well as the reserve, has been a factor in swelling the business last year.

Cashier H. Rush and District Agent H. P. Lindsay, who have charge of the Confederation business here have reason to feel proud of the marked growth of their Association. The new business which has been sent in from their district during 1904 has been entirely satisfactory, and proves their capability of doing their fair share in securing applications.

Having used your Hair Grower and Hair and Scalp Cleaner. I take great pleasure in recommending them to any one who may require anything for their hair. The Scalp Cleaner is excellent for removing the dandruff. It makes the hair beautifully soft and glossy. OLDEST LOVE LETTER IN THE WORLD FOUND AT SIPPARA.

Chaldean Missive Is on Clay, and Although Formal It Has Between Its Lines Much Tender Sentiment—Position of Women in Ancient Chaldea Incidentally Shown—Bride's Contributions on the Part of the Husband and Father.

Strange as it may seem, the position of woman in the modern East, secluded within the harem's placid shade, is the very antithesis of that she occupied in ancient times, both in Egypt and Chaldea. Woman had a degree of freedom, especially in Chaldea, that perhaps may be best compared with that of the French woman of the middle classes of to-day. She could trade, hold her own property, be a witness in the law courts, and guardian of her own children. We know less of her position in Egypt, but it was undoubtedly higher than that of the Mohammedan woman of to-day. In one respect, however, there is little change; marriage was essentially a commercial transaction between the parents of the bridegroom and those of the bride. All of this is clearly explained in the wonderful laws of Khammurabi, King of Babylon, B.C. 2200. The husband paid the bride price,

WORLD'S OLDEST LOVE LETTER

the father provided the bride's dowry and trousseau. Under such conditions amorous courtship, such as we western people consider the necessary prelude to matrimony, did not exist. Nevertheless, there must have been many a sly billet doux, whether on papyrus or clay, pass between the couple during the period between betrothal and marriage. Although we possess many love songs of the Egyptians, there has not as yet been found a true love letter. However, Chaldea has come to our rescue, with one on cold clay, and certainly somewhat formal in character. Still, reading between the lines we can detect the tender sentiment. The date of the document is about B.C. 2200, and therefore contemporary with the supposed age of Abram. It was found at Sippara, the Biblical Sepharvani, where the lady evidently resided—the lover being in Babylon.

It reads: "To the Lady Kasbuya (little ewe) thus saith Gimil Marduk (Favored of Morodach). May the Sun god and Marduk grant thee everlasting life. I am writing desiring to know as regards your health. O, send me news of it. I am living in Babylon, and have not seen you, which troubles me greatly. Send me news of your coming to me, so that I may be happy. Come in Marchesvan. May you live for ever for my sake."

No doubt by asking her to come in October the writer wished her to be in Babylon for the festivals of that month and the gaieties attending them. If in Egypt we meet with no love letters, we have certainly the most beautiful love songs; equal to the Song of Solomon, of which many Orientalists regard them as the origin. Egypt was the land of perpetuity, death to them was but an incident in life, and the wife who was a man's "belgved his sister" on earth was also the same in the "Hidden Land." This beautiful phase of the Egyptian character cannot be better illustrated than by quoting from the famous Song of the Harper, dating from about B.C. 2500, and which was probably the song sung at the Egyptian feasts:

Make a happy day, O, Holy Father.
Come! unguents and perfumes are before thee!
Flowers and lilies for the neck of thy sister
Who dwelleth in thy heart,
Who sitteth beside thee.
Come now, Song and Music are before thee.
Set sorrowful things behind thee, and think only of gladness
Until the day cometh when thou shalt pass to the "Land that loveth Silence!"

Surely here is epicureanism long before the days of St. Paul's famous words, "Eat, drink and be merry for to-morrow we die." But there is something far more beautiful in this eternal love of husband and wife sitting side by side looking with faithful gaze into "the land of eternity and everlastingness."

It is all right to talk about training up a child, but how is one to do it with the modern child without first getting his permission?

A GIRL'S ROOM.

Some Suggestions Pointing the Way to Health and Comfort.

It is much better to forego all drapery about the bed, although if you feel that you must have a canopy let it be a dainty muslin that can be frequently laundered.

Be most particular to have your bedding well aired and sunned every day, all except feather pillows. Sun is said to draw the oil from the feathers, but they should be exposed to a current of air. Great danger lurks in damp bedclothes. Especial precautions in this regard should be observed in travel. Damp linen offers encouragement to microbes. And now as to the walls of this habitation of yours. Oil painted walls are the most hygienic and most satisfactory. In hospitals a pale yellow or drab has been found most pleasing to the eye. A plain color is always more restful than a figured hanging. Have you not all had the experience when you were sick of chasing some grotesque figure around and around with your wearied mind until the very pattern was seared into your brain? Oil painted walls, too, can be wiped down daily if you wish with oiled cloths. They are indestructible, too, unless you disfigure them with nails. Your ceiling should be light in color. It is most advantageous to have a hardwood floor in the bedroom. Carpets should be banished and only rugs employed. Choose a closely woven rug that it may hold as little dust as possible. Your summer rug should be made of grass or fiber. Such a floor covering is both satisfactory and inexpensive. These can be taken up and cleaned every week.

The broom should always be dampened when used, and a carpet sweeper is better, for it gathers up all of the dust without scattering it around the room. When dusting use a damp cloth, never a feather duster. Keep your dust cloth clean, washing it out after its use.—Ladies' Home Journal.

When milk is spilled on a woolen dress or coat at once apply absorbent cotton. All traces of the stain will be removed.

The fastidious girl secures a number of wide pasteboard ribbon rolls from the dry goods store and keeps her neck and belt ribbons smoothly rolled over them.

A bit of glove powder costs but a trifle, and by its constant use the life of gloves will be greatly prolonged. The powder helps the glove to slip on easily and prevents dragging or pulling of the leather.

A woman who dropped a large piece of butter on her silk waist was in despair, for there was no benzine or French chalk in the house. A sudden inspiration caused her to cover the grease spot thickly with talcum powder, leaving it overnight. In the morning the spot had disappeared.

AN EXAMINING SCHEME.

Practical Suggestions Made by Dr. Hodgetts for Frequent Inspection and Examination of School Children.

A very practical suggestion, arising out of an interesting lecture on "The Medical Inspection of School Children," delivered by Dr. Charles Hodgetts, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, at the Canadian Institute recently, was that a committee or commission, representative of the medical and teaching professions, should be appointed by the Government to consider the whole system of inspection. He gave a good deal of useful information as to the practice adopted in such countries as England, Scotland, the United States and Germany, and said that so far as New York was concerned, the visits of the medical inspector were made daily before 10 a.m., when all the children numbering 5,000 for each of 150 inspectors, were marched past, and the eyes, ears, nose, mouth, hair, etc., examined, and all suspicious cases sent to the office for further examination. If any of them were found to be defective, an exclusion card was sent to the parents, and should it be deemed expedient, the cases were visited by one of the staff nurses.

Objections Answered.

In considering the introduction of the system into the Province of Ontario, Dr. Hodgetts said the question of objections would naturally be raised. Those objections he placed under two classes, the parents and the teacher. To the former the system might appear to be unnecessary, for the reason that all the dangers and disadvantages surrounding modern school life, together with their far-reaching effect upon the health and physique of the future men and women of this country were not apparent to them. Hence a campaign of education amongst parents was necessary, and even when acquainted with all the facts, objections would no doubt be made on the ground of increased cost and extra school rates. Those contentions, argued the lecturer, must be met by statements showing the financial losses to the State on physical, mental and hygienic grounds, as also the further financial losses incurred by individuals and municipalities for medical treatment of disease, to say nothing of the loss and suffering caused by death.

The objections raised by educationists and educational authorities were, Dr. Hodgetts thought, more difficult to deal with, but, fortunately, the pendulum of public opinion was swinging in the right direction, and prominent men in all civilized countries were now strong advocates of the system. There could, of course, be no gainsaying the fact that the duties of the teacher and principal would be increased. The system would necessitate the teacher devoting some portion of his studies to the subject of hygiene as relating to child life, but on the other hand, his position would be strengthened in all matters covered by it in many of which he has had to rely on his own opinions, and often came to conclusions which, under the system of medical inspection, would be erroneous. The objection that there might be clashing with the health authorities was met by pointing out that the system in force in the cities of the United States was under the care of the same, and not controlled by a new department, and similarly any clashing with the medical profession was obviated by the duties being first elective and advisory, and, lastly, prohibitive, as regards school attendance, and only in cases of poverty was assistance rendered or aid given by the medical staff or visiting nurses.

General Advantages.

Referring to the general advantages of the system, Dr. Hodgetts said, as at present, the provision for the classification of children was for gross defections of abnormal type, so medical inspection would provide for the discrimination of those mentally and physically fit as compared with those unfit from minor or major defects, some of which were preventable if treated immediately, but if neglected were permanent in character, scarring the life of the individual. The system would enable the parents to secure for their children that medical treatment of which they were previously ignorant as to its requirement. Thus school education would be made to help and not hinder development in later adult life, and would not overtax the child brain, but aid its development in that later period. Knowledge would be acquired without loss of elasticity in mind or wasting of body, and the lesson would then have been learned and acted upon that the physical equilibrium was essential to the highest organization of character.

The State Should Search.

Summing up, Dr. Hodgetts expressed the opinion that medical inspection of the children would materially help the improvement and education of this young nation of Canada. It was essential for the State to search out the pre-school life of influences, and to consider their bearings on the modifications it was necessary to make in the course of study of each particular child, as the educational system culminated in the production of the State-evolved man or woman upon whose completeness devolved the growth of the people as a nation. Dr. Hodgetts suggested that the system of inspection should be under the control of the health authorities, and be conducted by medical men acting on definite lines, and should also include the oversight of the sanitary condition of schoolrooms and buildings. He thought, also, that it would be advisable for the Minister of Education to issue to teachers and scholars, on the approval of the Provincial Board of Health, a series of pamphlets dealing with the different matters relating to personal and school hygiene, to take the place of text-books.

Dr. Hodgetts was thanked for his address, and it was decided to approach the Government on the matter on the lines laid down.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

Copyright, 1904, by Duncan M. Smith.

IT ALWAYS COMES OFF.

Of all the fools that fool around
And glaring blunders shed,
As leaves shed dewdrops on the ground,
It really must be said
That he's the apex of the mound
Who binds a book in red.

You see a book you'd like to read;
You straightway buy the same
And to its contents give close heed.
Then suddenly exclaim:
"My hands are all stained red. Indeed,
It is a perfect shame!"

And so it is. Your fingers cool
Are soaked in brilliant red;
You're daubed up like a circus fool!
What put it in the head
Of any addle pated mule
To bind the book in red?

I hate to have my pretty frock
With carmine overspread.
It gives my nerves a horrid shock
And frays 'em to a shred.
For cranium he has a block
Who binds a book in red.

Her One Thought.

Tenderly he bent over her and whispered sweet words in her ear, for she was the only girl he had ever loved.

She was small in stature, but to his mind the quality amply made up for the lack of material. He was tall and manly, and if there is anything in the law of opposites they were well mated.

For a half hour he stood bent over her like a patent jackknife while the hot, impulsive words dropped from his lips like corn from a hopper. When he paused for wind she looked at him anxiously and with eager voice begged of him to stand erect.

"And why?" he asked half pettishly. "Has my little pet tired of me?"

"No," she replied, blushing a deep red. "No, never, but"—and the words hung back until she was forced to push them out—"I fear you will bust off a suspender button."

She was a thoughtful girl.

Contrary.

She was a most outrageous flirt,
Well pleased the more that she could hurt,
And marrying did not occur
To her unless around there were
Some men who wouldn't look at her.

Quite a Difference.

"Do all milkmen water their milk?"

"No; some put milk in their water."

A Greater Test.

"Jenkins is one of the bravest men I ever met."

"Did he ever walk up to a cannon's mouth?"

"No, but he married a widow with seven children."

Had a Supply.

He only asked her for one kiss,
But still the pert, contrary miss
Said "No" with a deceptive smile—
She didn't think just one worth while.

No Fee For Him.

"I notice a New York man has been cured of dyspepsia by eating grass."

"Is the inference, then, that the wise doctor will tell his patients when they call to go to grass?"

Bronchitis Grows Chronic

AND RETURNS YEAR AFTER YEAR OR DEVELOPS INTO ASTHMA OR CONSUMPTION. CURE IS

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Bronchitis is too serious a disease to trifle with.

Children are most likely to contract bronchitis, and, if neglected, it becomes chronic and returns year after year until it wears the patient out or develops into some deadly lung disease.

Chills and fever, nasal or throat catarrh, quick pulse, loss of appetite and feelings of fatigue and languor are among the first symptoms.

The cough is dry and harsh. There are pains in the chest which are aggravated by deep breathing and coughing. Expectoration is of a frothy nature, stringy, tenacious and sometimes streaked with blood.

Pains in the limbs or joints and extreme depression and weakness result from continuation of the disease.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is, we believe, the most effective treatment for bronchitis that money will buy.

It is the most effective treatment for bronchitis because it is so far-reaching in its effect on the whole system, not only loosening the hard, dry cough, but actually and thoroughly curing the disease so that it does not return.

Mrs. George Budden, Putnamville, Ont., says:—"I feel it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, as I had the asthma very bad; could get nothing to do me any good. A friend of mine persuaded me to try this remedy, as he had it and it proved successful. I tried it and it cured me. I am thankful to-day to say I am a well woman through the use of this remedy. I keep it in the house all the time and would not be without it."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle; family size, three times as much, 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To prevent two worthless imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt-book author, are on every box.—42.

"Well, I've come to do some'n'," said Truitt evasively. "It looks powerful like you've got to take prompt action in the matter. You've made fine speeches all over the state about the equality o' men, an' it would be a big joke on you to have it get out that your blood was too rich to come up again one o' the most honorable young men in the state o' Georgia, jest bea'se his daddy went wrong."

Telfare sank into his leather cushioned chair. He was very nervous, and his pallor had extended even to his white hands.

"Who in the—the man that is dis-satisfied?" he faltered.

"Me," said Truitt simply.

"You?" The governor could only stare in bewilderment.

"Yes, sir, Bob Truitt of the Forty-second Georgia, under Colonel H. F. Pierson. My record's all right. At least ef it hain't, you kin show why it hain't. Yes, I've come here fer some sort o' settlement, an' I'm goin' to have it, or I'll turn the governor o' Georgia across my knee an' spank 'im black an' blue. No dern, fluted shirted skunk kin insult a brave, pure hearted friend o' mine an' leave 'im writhin' under it, an' go off an' chuckle, jest bea'se of a flimsy excuse like you put up to him. No, siree; you've got to git a move on you. What I would advise is a gentlemanly apology."

"Apology? You must be out of your mind, sir," said Telfare angrily. "I can't send an apology to that man."

"You say you can't, you pup," thundered Truitt. "Stand up! What you settin' down fer?" And Truitt actually took the governor by the ear and twisted it as he raised him, squirming like an eel, to his feet. "Now do you like that, curse you?"

Telfare, beside himself with fear and excitement, tore Truitt's hand from his smarting ear and furiously rang the silver bell on his desk. The servant in the hall quickly appeared.

"Call a policeman!" Telfare panted. "There's one on the corner."

"By gum! I hadn't calculated on that move o' yore'n," said Truitt coolly. "I reckon the cop 'll ship me in jail, but I've always heard they feed purty well thar, an' I'm as hungry as a bear."

Telfare made no reply. Truitt was between him and the door or he would undoubtedly have made his escape. As it was, he only stood at his desk, white as death and quivering from head to foot.

There was a clatter of feet in the hall, and a policeman, rather slight of build and a head shorter than the mountaineer, entered hastily.

"What's the trouble, governor?" he asked.

Telfare swallowed and was about to speak when Truitt broke in. "Oh, it hain't nothin', young feller, but a little 'lection dispute me 'n' Telfare had. He fell agin that bell accidentally jes' now, an' that flat nosed A-rabb 'lowed he was bein' assassinated an' run fer you. Do you reckon yo're big enough to keep anybody in yore beat from bein' injured?"

The officer looked up at the gaunt mountaineer towering over him and then at Telfare, who seemed unable to speak.

"That—that nigger said Governor Telfare wanted me," the policeman stammered.

"Well, he's got dern bad judgment ef he'd want you in a time o' need. Are you a married man?"

"Yes."

"Carry any life insurance?"

"No, I don't, but what's that got to?—"

"Well"—Truitt stroked his beard—"I believe I'll take pity on yore widow. I thought at first I'd mash you 'twixt my thumb an' forefinger, but I won't. Git out o' here. I've got some'n' private to say to Telfare."

The officer, with a flushed face, looked from one to the other of the two men, his inquiring glance resting last on the white, rigid countenance of Telfare. But the governor seemed to have actually lost his presence of mind and could only stare blankly.

"I jest wanted to ax you, Telfare, how you felt about havin' the whole thing writ up in the newspapers," Truitt said in the pause. "I know mighty nigh ever' newspaper reporter in the state an' some adjinin' states. They will print anything I give 'em. We got sorter chummy at our last reunion. Yes, they will publish my side of this, an' of course you'll have a chance to have yore say. As fur as I'm concerned, I'd rallly like to have it git around to all the veteran camps in the state. Most of 'em know Bob Truitt by reputation, an' when they hear about this they will jest break the'r necks to vote for you next election. You barely got in by a squeeze last time, but they'll rush you in like the woods afire when this tale gits out."

"Governor, I'm waiting your orders," said the policeman, who seemed to feel that a mistake had been made and that he was overhearing private matters.

"Wait in the hall," Telfare said. "I'll ring if I need you. This man's been drinking."

"Huh!" sneered Truitt as the door closed after the policeman. "I'm dry as a chip, an' I reckon you got some o' the best settin' round, an' yet you hain't o'ered a feller a drap."

"Now, what do you want?" Telfare asked, doggedly miserable, defeat written all over him.

"Nothin' now," answered Truitt. "I'm goin' back an' tell George Buckley that I pulled yore year fer you. He's felt this thing purty bad—a proud man naturally would—but when I tell 'im what I done an' that you tuck it like a dunce at school, why, it's my opinion he'll jest feel sorry fer you. I do, I know, an' I'm free to confess I feel a little grain ashamed myself, but that will wear off, I reckon. God Almighty ort to provide a different way o' pullin' skunks down from the'r perch, but it seems he hain't. That's all I have to say. Good day, yore excellency."

Truitt left Telfare sitting at his desk, sullenly, desperately silent, and went out. Through it all the mountaineer had not removed his hat, and his chew of tobacco was still in his mouth.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE next day Truitt slouched into the warehouse, finding Hillyer and George at their desks working over some bills of lading of a big shipment of cotton they were making to eastern mills.

"Whar on earth have you been?" Hillyer asked eagerly. "I sent out home fer you an' none o' yore folks knowed a thing about you. The truth is, I got worried. I told George I was afeard you'd gone to"—

"That's whar I went," said Truitt, his glance on George's expectant face, "an' the Lord went with me. I humiliated that skunk, an', as fer as I'm concerned, I'm willin' to drap the matter. Ef I was the man most interested I'd be satisfied."

"What did you do, Truitt?" George was eying him eagerly, his eyes burning sullenly.

Truitt actually took the governor by the ear and twisted it.

Truitt made a detailed explanation, leaving out nothing. He spoke of it as if it had been an ordinary business arrangement that was finally settled satisfactorily. "But," he ended, "I never felt as mean, somehow, in my life. I'm sorry he wouldn't hit back. I'll be durned ef he didn't jest wiggle an' say 'ouch!' when I twisted his year. George, my boy, you ort not to give his words another thought. What he said to you was jest what a sneakin' coward would say. He's got less sand in his gizzard 'n any man I ever run across. I hope you are satisfied."

"Yes, I'm satisfied," said George simply, and he extended his hand, "and I'm glad there was no bloodshed. Mr. Hillyer told me what he did yesterday in a passion. We'll all have to find some way out of our troubles other than bloodshed."

"God knows I agree with you on that," said Hillyer feelingly, and he turned and walked out of the office.

"But that hain't all I done," said Truitt, leaning against George's desk and looking down sheepishly.
